The suit was dismissed by the Munsif but on appeal the Additional Judge gave the plaintiffs a decree for the amount of rent claimed less the amount proved to have been paid by the defendant who contested the suit as shown by the dakhilas. Common manager—Minor co sharers—Court of Wards—District Judge jurisdiction of— On the 8th June 1891 one of the co sharers in an estate applied for the appointment of a common manager but on objection taken by the other co sharers this application was withdrawn. On the 4th March 1891 the same co sharer applied to the Court to the effect that proceedings might be taken under s 93 of the Bengal Tenancy Act and that the management of the estate might be taken over by the Court of Wards. The other co sharers and the representative of certain minor co sharers objected to this appointment of a common manager but consented to the estate being made over to the Court of Wards. On the 30th March 1892 the District Judge without satisfying himself as to the necessity of the appointment of a common manager ordered that the estate should be made over to the Court of Wards. The Court of Wards took over the estate but subsequently refused to act and the Board of Revenue directed that the estate should be released. On the 13th August 1892 the District Judge issued notices on the co sharers under s 93 calling on them to show cause why a common manager should not be appointed. All the co sharers appeared and objected to the appointment of a common manager but one of them and the representative of the minor co sharers stated that they had agreed to appoint a private person manager of their shares. The District Judge therefore appointed such person temporarily as a common manager of the entire estate until the co owners should take steps under s 99 to satisfy the Court that they were in a position to manage the estate and on the 24th March 1893 passed two orders on separate applications made by two of the co sharers for the release of the estate refusing to release it as he was not satisfied that the management of the estate could be conducted without injury to the rights of the minor. Held that these orders of the 24th March 1893 were ultra vires. GAYODA KANTA ROY & PROBHABATI DAS

2 ——— Power of Settlement Officer—Decision of Special Judge—Res judicata—Question whether land is mal or lakhs roy—The plaintiff had been proprietor of an estate which was sold for arrears of Government revenue and repurchased from the then purchaser by the plaintiff in 1886. He applied under Ch. X of the Bengal Tenancy Act for the measurement of the estate and the preparation of a record of rights and the Revenue Officer deputed for these purposes found that a portion of the estate held by the defendant was mal land though it was held as lakhs roy under certain sanads and as he also found that no rent had ever been paid for it it was entered on the record of rights as mal land held under those sanads as lakhs roy. The Special Judge on appeal by the plaintiff held that the land having been found to be mal should have been entered as mal land unsessed with rent. In a suit to have the land assessed with rent it was found that the sanads under which the defendant claimed to hold were granted not by any predecessor in title of the plaintiff and were of a date anterior to the Permanent Settlement. Held (reversing the decision of the lower Appellate Court) that the Special Judge had no jurisdiction to determine whether the land was mal or lakhs roy and that his judgment as to its being mal did not therefore operate

The mere fact that on a measurement made by a zamindar under the authority of Government given under Ch. X of the Bengal Tenancy Act it is found that the tenants generally are in possession of lands in excess of the areas entered in his zamindari papers and their rent receipts does not necessarily prove that he is entitled to additional rent for the excess areas. Where settlement or holdings are of very old date and lands are let out by areas ascertained without any accurate survey but as contained within certain recognized boundaries for instance by reference to other holdings it is incumbent upon the zamindar seeking enhancement of rent very many years after the original settlement to show that the lands held by the rayats are in excess of the lands originally let to them in consequence of some encroachment or some alluvial increment or that the settlement was made on the basis of measurement and the rates of rent as applied to the area then determined, while on a fresh measurement made by the same length of measure it has been found that he is entitled to receive additional rent which by carelessness or neglect or some other cause he had hitherto lost. A liberal interpretation should be put upon the word permanently in s 38 sub s (1) cl (a) and the word construed with reference to existing conditions. It cannot be said that a deterioration is not permanent only because by the application of capital and skill it might be removed. In determining the liability to additional rent the Settlement Officer is by s 52 sub s (2) cl (c) bound to consider the length of time during which the tenancy has lasted without dispute as to rent or area. Before the Bengal Tenancy Act of 1885 came into operation a decree for rent was obtained under Bengal Act VIII of 1869. After the Bengal Tenancy Act of 1885 had become law the tenancy in respect of which the rent had become due was attached in execution of such decree. A claim was subsequently put in to the attached property by a third person which claim was disallowed as being forbidden by s 170 of the Bengal Tenancy Act of 1885. The taluk was sold and was purchased by the land lord on the 1st Jyest 1295 (14th May 1891). The whole of the arrears not being realized by the sale proceeds the land lord brought an action on the 14th May 1894 for the balance of the patni rent to the end of 1297 B.S. (1st April 191). The defence was that the suit was barred by limitation. Held that the suit was governed by the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act s 184 and sch III art 2 (3) the period of limitation in a suit for rent provided by that article is three years from the last day of the Bengali year in which the arrear falls due and as in this case the arrear fell due in the Bengali year 1297 which ended on the 12th April 1891 and the suit was not commenced until 14th May 1894 more than three years from the last day of the Bengali year in which the arrear fell due it was barred by limitation. BURMA MOITI DAS ET AL V BURMA MOITI CHOWDHURANI

in view of the provisions of Act XVI of 1869 and the repealing Act VII of 1895. On appeal therefrom—Held that the notification extending the Civil Procedure Code to Jalpaiguri had not the effect of introducing the Civil Procedure Code to the Bhutan Duars although the latter are a part of Jalpaiguri inasmuch as Act XVI of 1869 which was then in force in the Bhutan Duars excluded that jurisdiction in express terms. But the effect of the repeal of Act XVI (without any qualification) by Bengal Act VII of 1895 has left the Civil Procedure to be administered in the Bhutan Duars. That the plaintiffs are not precluded by the entry in the record of rights from obtaining relief against the defendants. An entry in a record under Act XVI of 1869 in order to be conclusive evidence of any right interest or other matter must be one which has been honestly and fairly obtained. BROJO KANTO DAS v. the Roman Catholic Church and married by B a priest to a Roman Catholic during the lifetime of her Hindu husband. Held that A's marriage with the Hindu was subsisting and valid at the time of her Christian marriage, that she was guilty of the offence of bigamy and that B was guilty of abetting that offence. LIFE v. 8 ——— Custom as to marriages.—Penal Code s 494.—A conviction under s 494 of the Penal Code for marrying again during the lifetime of a husband or wife cannot be upheld where there is evidence to show that such marriages are not unusual among persons of the same caste as the accused and it is not proved that such marriages are void. IN THE MATTER OF CHAMIA [7 C. 9 ——— Conversion of a Hindu wife to Mahomedanism.—Marriage with a Mahomedan.—Penal Code s 494.—The conversion of a Hindu wife to Mahomedanism does not ipso facto dissolve her marriage with her husband. She cannot therefore during her lifetime enter into any other valid marriage contract. Her going through the ceremony of nika with a Mahomedan is consequently an offence under s 494 of the Indian Penal Code. GOVERNMENT OF BOMBAY v. GANGA

10 ——— Marriage with Mahomedan.—Mahomedan Law.—Marriage.—Penal Code s 494.—The petitioner originally a Hindu woman and the illegitimate offspring of Chattr parents was duly married according to Hindu rites to D who was also by caste a Chattr. Subsequent to the marriage the petitioner became a convert to Mahomedanism and married a Mahomedan. She was charged with and convicted of an offence under s 494 of the Penal Code. It was contended on her behalf that (1) the marriage between her and D was invalid under Hindu law by reason of her illegitimacy and the consequent difference of caste between the contracting parties (2) the marriage between her and D became dissolved under the Hindu law on her conversion to Mahomedanism and (3) the second marriage was not void under the Mahomedan law by reason of its taking place in the lifetime of D and that the conviction was therefore erroneous. There was no evidence of any notice having been given to D previous to the second marriage calling on him to become a Mahomedan. Held that illegitimacy under Hindu law is no absolute disqualification for marriage and that when one or both contracting parties to a marriage are illegitimate the marriage must be regarded as valid if they are recognized by their caste people as belonging to the same caste. Held also that there is no authority in Hindu law for the proposition that an apostate is absolved from all civil obligations and that so far as the matrimonial bond is concerned such a view would be contrary to the spirit of that law which regards it as indissoluble, and that accordingly the marriage between the petitioner and D was not under the Hindu law dissolved by her conversion to Mahomedanism. RAHMAT BEEBEE v. BOKRYA BEEBEE [1 Norton's Leading Cases on Hindu Law p. 12 dissented from. Held further that as the validity of the second marriage depended on the Mahomedan law and as that law does not allow a plurality of husbands it would be void or valid according as the first marriage was or was not subsisting at the time it took place that upon the law having been given to D as required by Mahomedan law previous to the second marriage and no recourse having been had to the Courts for the purpose of obtaining a declaration that the former marriage was dissolved and as British India cannot be held to be a foreign country for the purpose of rendering such notice unnecessary the previous marriage was not dissolved under Mahomedan law and the subsequent marriage was therefore void. Held accordingly that the conviction was right. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF RAM KUMARI I. 11 ——— Mahomedan law—Marriage—Child marriage—Option of minor of repudiating marriage on attaining puberty—Want of ratification after puberty—Penal Code s. 491—B* a Mahomedan girl whose father was dead was alleged to have been given in marriage by her mother to J some years before she attained puberty. P and J to her attaining puberty J was sentenced to a term of imprisonment for theft. While he was in jail B after she had attained puberty contracted a marriage with P. The marriage with J was never consummated. On J being released from jail he proceeded to prosecute B and P for bigamy and abetment of bigamy and also charged P with adultery. It appeared that before taking proceedings J requested B to return to him but she refused to do so. The marriage between B and J was sought to be proved by the evidence of J's mother and two witnesses who were said to have been present. B and P were both convicted. Held on appeal that the evidence of the marriage between B and J was insufficient to justify a conviction in the absence of proof that a Mulla was present at the ceremony or that the shigha required to be recited at the marriage of minors was recited or the akd performed. Held further that assuming B to have been given in marriage to J when a mere child by her mother she had the option of either ratifying or repudiating such marriage on attaining puberty. Under the Shari law such a marriage is of no effect until it has been ratified by the minor and under the Sunni law it is effective till cancelled by the minor. Under both schools of law the minor has the absolute power on attaining puberty to ratify or cancel an unauthorized marriage though under the Sunni law ratification is presumed if the girl remains silent after attaining puberty and all with the marriage to be consummated. Held on the facts of the case that the circumstances afforded sufficient indication even assuming the girl to be governed by the Sunni law that she never ratified the marriage. Held also that a judicial order was not necessary to effect the cancellation of the marriage. BADAL AHAT & QUEEN EMPRESS I. The bill at the time it was endorsed to the plaintiff by the defendant bore the previous endorsement of NS & Co to the defendant. The bill fell due on December 3rd, 1870 which was a Saturday and on that day the plaintiff sent his jemadar to C N & Co the acceptors to present the bill for payment. The bill was taken by A one of the members of the firm of C N & Co who gave a cheque for the amount and took a receipt from the plaintiff's jemadar striking out the signature of C N & Co as Catcress but without the plaintiff's consent. The plaintiff's jemadar took the cheque immediately to the bank and the bank was closed. Thereupon the plaintiff's jemadar returned and informed that the cheque had been cashed and demanded cash. The plaintiff then being baptised that it was then stated that the cheque would be honoured on Monday. The plaintiff's jemadar then went and informed the gomastha of the plaintiff of what had been done. The plaintiff's gomastha sent him to the defendant's firm to give him notice of what had taken place. It was alleged that at this interview the defendant's liability was admitted in case the cheque was not honoured and the plaintiff's jemadar was advised to wait until Monday the defendant stating that he also had a cheque for R7000 from C N & Co. This was denied by the defendant. On Monday 5th December the cheque was presented to the bank for payment and was dishonoured. The plaintiff's gomastha went to the defendant's kotli and gave notice of the dishonour of the bill and cheque and asked him to pay the amount of the bill. The defendant asked for the bill and the plaintiff's gomastha went to C N & Co and brought back the bill with the name of C N & Co which had been struck out replaced. The defendant seeing the bill was overdue refused to pay the amount. The cheque was thereupon returned to C N & Co and the bill retained by the plaintiff who on 6th December caused written notice of dishonour to be given to the defendant. Held that the cheque must be taken to have been merely a conditional payment and when it was dishonoured the liability of the original bill revived. Held also that reasonable notice of dishonour was given whether the bill be taken to have been dishonoured on the Saturday or on the Monday SOMARINTEL v BHAIRO DAS JORNEY 7 B L R 431

In May 1876 A by letter agreed to execute a mortgage of a certain portion of his property consisting of a share in a Privy Council decree to B and in the meantime to hold such property at the disposal of B his successors and assigns. In the month of June 1876 A became unable to meet his liabilities and in the month of August following executed a conveyance of all his property to the Official Trustee upon trust for the benefit of A's creditors. The bank assented to and executed this deed after it had been assented to and executed by some of the other creditors. The deed did not contain any composition with or release by the creditors nor any covenant on their part not to sue A. In a suit by the bank against B as acceptor of the bills—Held that B was not precluded by the provisions of s 139 of the Contract Act and s 92 of the Evidence Act from pleading that he was an accommodation acceptor only. Held that the letter of May 1876 constituted a good equitable mortgage and that B was not thereafter entitled as against the bank to the equitable rights of an accommodation acceptor. Held further that the trust did not impair the eventual remedy of B and that therefore he

Liability of parties to draft—Effect of acceptance—Immediately on failure of payment of a draft at sight whatever may be the real state of the account between the drawer and drawee the former becomes liable to the payee for the amount which would place him at the stipulated time and place in the same position as if the money had been duly paid. Where there is no acceptance no cause of action can arise to the payee against the drawer. Nor is the legal relation between the drawer and the payee altered by a partial acceptance the contract being in its nature indivisible much less can any mere promise to pay part at a future time in any way satisfy the payee's claim or deprive him of his right to reimbursement of his loss from the drawer. SHETH KHANDAS KARAYDAS v DAHLIAHAI I L R 3 Bom 182

8 — Suit on bill by indorsee for value against acceptor—Sale by indorsee of goods against which bill drawn—Acceptor entitled to credit for amount of proceeds of sale—J assigned goods to defendant and for the price drew on the defendant two bills of exchange each for the sum of Rs 400-40 payable thirty days after sight which were duly accepted by defendant. J and read the bills for value to the plaintiffs who in default of payment by defendant sold the goods and credited him with the amount realized. After giving him credit for the amount there remained due by the defendant to the plaintiffs in respect of the said bills a sum of Rs 1017. The plaintiffs obtained Rs 117 of this amount and sued the defendant for Rs 1000 in the Small Cause Court at Bombay. In that suit the defendant pleaded that the goods in respect of which the bills were drawn were damaged and that he had therefore refused to accept them as he was entitled to do. The Judge thereupon dismissed the suit on the authority of Shoriff v Abdul Pohman 6 Bom O C 53 holding that the plaintiffs could not under the circumstances give the defendant credit for the goods and that the claim was not therefore within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court. The plaintiffs then brought the present suit in the High Court upon the bills of exchange alleging that they held the proceeds of the goods for the consignor. The defendant contended that in no case could the plaintiffs recover from him more than the amount of the bills less the proceeds of the goods. Held that the defendant was entitled to credit for the net proceeds of the sale of the goods. The plaintiffs had by the sale already realized part of the amount due to them and to all who were now to recover from the defendant the whole amount due on the bills would be to permit them to realize this part of their claim a second time in that case they would be bound to hand over the amount so realized to the drawers. But the drawers when they negotiated the bills with the plaintiffs got all they were entitled to and would have to account in equity to the defendant for anything further

And where the money realized by the sale was wrongfully applied by the agent it was held by the Judicial Committee (affirming the judgment of the Court at Calcutta) that the remitter was entitled to recover the value of the bills in assumption upon an indebtedness due from the purchaser of them who had notice of the purpose for which they were remitted and the misapplication of the proceeds by the agent. MUTTY LAL SEAL v DENT

The bill was on the following terms—The New Oriental Bank Corporation Limited To the New Oriental Bank Corporation Limited B. Mauritius. E sent the bill by registered post to Bombay addressed to the plaintiff Duran its transmission it was at Lucknow. On the 16th May it was presented by some person to the defendant's Bank in Bombay bearing a forged endorsement in blank of the plaintiff and it was paid by the Bank. The plaintiff as soon as he heard of the loss of the bill made inquiry at the Bank and was told that the bill had been paid. On being shown the endorsement the plaintiff pronounced it to be a forgery and demanded payment of the bill which the Bank refused. He thereupon filed this suit against the Bank as drawers of the bill. Held (1) that the document was an ambiguous instrument within the meaning of s. 17 of the Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881) and that the plaintiff had elected to treat it as a bill of exchange. (2) That treating the document as a bill of exchange the defendants as drawers were discharged by the payment to the de facto holder who presented it for payment. SULLEMAN HOSSEIN v. 1 ——— Varying bill of lading—Shipping order—Custom—In a suit instituted by a shipper to obtain bills of lading from the captain in accordance with the terms of the order granted by the ship's charterers—Held that the captain was entitled to vary the bills of lading in respect of any excess of measurement over the dimensions specified in the order and that an alleged custom precluding such variation after the goods have been received on boardship was contrary to law. It is the duty of the shipper to comply strictly with the terms of the shipping order. GENTLE v. THOMSON

The steamer arrived in port late on Saturday and sailed at daybreak on Monday without delivering the specie shipped by the plaintiff who sued for damages. Held that the Lord's Day Act 29 Chas II ch 7 did not apply to Monheim and that even if it had done so it could not prevent the shipowners from availing themselves of the stipulation they had made and that no action for damages was maintainable against them. GRASMAN v. the flat was destroyed by some projection embedded in the river. Held that the casualty was comprised among the exceptions in the bill of lading and further that having regard to the dangerous navigation of Indian rivers parties entering into contracts of a similar nature should protect themselves by insurance. DIKAUNSER v. 5 ——— Insufficiency of package—Negligence—The defendants by a condition annexed to their bill of lading stipulated that they should not be responsible for leakage or breakage or other consequences arising from the insufficiency of the address or package. The plaintiff shipped for conveyance from Hong Kong to Bombay certain goods on board a steamer of the defendants in packages which were proved to be insufficient. These goods in accordance with a condition to that effect contained in the bill of lading were transhipped at Galle. On their being landed in Bombay it was found that all the packages were broken and in a much more damaged condition than is usual in the case of such goods carried from Hong Kong to Bombay in similar packages. The contents had to a large extent escaped from the packages but were otherwise uninjured. Held that under a bill of lading in the above form the onus of proving that the packages were insufficient and that the injury which they had sustained was the consequence of such insufficiency lay upon the defendants but that when the result of the evidence on both sides was to leave it in doubt whether the injury was caused by negligence or was the consequence of the insufficiency of the packages the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. P & O STEAM NAVIGATION CO v. SOMATI VISRAM 5 Bom O C 118

6 ——— Insufficiency of package—Negligence—Mercantile usage—Evidence of—The defendants carry between Hong Kong and Bombay. By a condition annexed to their bill of lading they stipulated that they should not be responsible for damage to goods arising from insufficiency of package. The plaintiff shipped certain goods in the defendants' steamer in packages which though in fact insufficient were packages of the kind ordinarily used for the conveyance of such goods from Hong Kong to Bombay. On their being landed in Bombay it was found that the packages were more or less broken and the contents were in some instances injured and had to a small extent escaped from the packages. In an action brought to recover damages in respect of such injury it was held that evidence of mercantile usage or of custom would be admissible to show that the words "insufficiency of package" should not be taken in their ordinary sense but as meaning insufficient according to a special custom of the China trade. Held also that the evidence of these packages being ordinary China packages, and of such packages having always been carried by the defendants without objection was not sufficient, in the absence of proof of negligence to fix the defendants with liability for damage done to them there being no proof that it had been the practice either of the defendants or any other ship-owners protected by a similar clause in their bill of lading to make compensation for injury to goods contained in such packages. P & O STEAM NAVIGATION CO v MANICK JEE NASERTANJEE PADSHA 4 Bom O C 169

7 ——— Carriage by sea—

Liability for damage to goods—Negligence—A steam navigation company was employed by plaintiff to carry cargo from Calcutta to Rangoon and to deliver it into the receiving ship or to land it at the consignee's expense their liability ceasing as soon as the goods were free from the ship's tackle. When the ship arrived at port the consignee not having had his own boats alongside the goods were put into other boats one of which through the negligence of the boatmen was swamped and the contents damaged. Plaintiff sued for damages. Held that as defendants were not shown to have neglected the duty of taking reasonable and proper care in the selection of boats they were not liable for the loss incurred. BELLOCH BROTHERS & CO v TOAY AUNG 24 W R 74

8 ——— Exemption from damage occasioned by neglect of Company's servants—Suit to recover goods destroyed—Contract Act s 151—The plaintiff shipped two plate glass show-cases from Calcutta to Rangoon by a steamer of the defendant company and issued a bill of lading which contained the following clause—Carried and delivered subject to the conditions after mentioned loss or damage for any act neglect or default whatsoever of the pilot master or mariners or other servants of the company etc excepted. In landing the two cases one of them was entirely destroyed owing to the carelessness of the company's servants. The plaintiff sued the company setting out that the damage was occasioned by the negligence of the company's servants. The defendant company (who were not subject to the Carriage Act) relied on the above-mentioned clause in their bill of lading. Held that the defendant company were protected by their bill of lading the terms of which had been accepted by the plaintiff. JELlicoe v BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION CO

9 ——— Liability of master

Negligence—Onus probandi—Estoppel—The defendant master of the steamer Scindia issued a bill of lading by which he agreed with C & Co of London to deliver at Calcutta to them or their order four casks of brass wire which were shipped on board the Scindia. The casks were described in the bill of lading as bearing a certain mark beneath which was the word Calcutta as being the port of destination and they were stated as being carried subject to the following exceptions—The ship is not liable for obliteration or absence of marks numbers address or description of goods shipped and expenses and losses by detention of ship or cargo caused by incorrect marking or by incomplete or incorrect description of contents shall be borne by the owners of the goods. In case any part of the within goods cannot be found during the ship's stay at the port of destination they are when found to be sent back by first steamer at the ship's risk and expense and subject to any proved claim for loss of market. The ship shall not be liable for incorrect delivery unless each package shall have been distinctly marked by the shippers before shipment with the port of destination. The bill of lading was endorsed by C & Co to the plaintiff a trader in Calcutta who on the arrival of the Scindia at that port applied for delivery of the four casks and it then appeared that they had been landed at Colombo. In a suit to recover the price of the goods—Held the defendant was estopped from alleging that the casks were not marked as stated in the bill of lading. It was open however to the defendant to prove that the casks did not on their arrival at Colombo bear the word Calcutta and thus to bring himself within the clause in the bill of lading exempting the ship from liability for obliteration or absence of marks but on proof of this in order to disentitle the plaintiff to succeed the defendant must show that the absence or obliteration caused the landing at Colombo. It was found on the evidence that he had failed to do this and a decree was given for the plaintiff. MADHUN CAUNDER DRY v LAW 13 B L R 394

gence of the crew or other servants of the ship—Period of loading covered by the contract of carriage—Fitness or unfitness of the ship—The plaintiffs shipped certain bags of sugar on the 11th and 19th November 1897 on board the defendants' ship the Byculla for conveyance to Bombay. There being a dispute as to the number of bags shipped no mate's receipts were given and no bill of lading was signed until the 28th November. The Byculla started on her voyage on the 10th November and duly delivered the sugar in Bombay. The sugar however was found to be damaged by water which was due to its having been stowed in immediate proximity to a quantity of wet timber. The plaintiffs sued the defendants in the Small Cause Court for the damage so caused. The defendants sheltered themselves under the terms of the exemptive clause in their bill of lading of the 28th November which clause ran as follows—The act of God the Queen's enemies and all the perils and dangers accidents of the sea and accidents of war or damage from any act neglect or default whatsoever of the pilot master or mariners or other servants of the Company or from any deviation excepted. The plaintiffs contended that a bill of lading did not relate to or cover the period of loading and that even if it did the exception relied upon in this bill of lading related only to negligence subsequent to the commencement of the voyage. They also contended that the ship was not a ship reasonably fitted for the voyage within the meaning of the rule laid down in Steel v The State Line Steamship Co any L R 3 Ap Ca 72. In the Small Cause Court judgment was given in plaintiff's favour. On appeal to the High Court in the case stated this judgment was reversed. Held that this was not a case in which the rule laid down in Steel v The State Line Steamship Company I R 3 Ap Ca 72 applied as there was no question here of any defect inherent in the ship. It was simply a case of negligent and improper stowage. Held further following Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Co v Baker 7 Bom O C 156

that the reasonable mode of construing the contract evidenced by a bill of lading was that the excerpts must be co-extensive with the liability and that there was no evidence to be found in this bill of lading of any other intention. Held further that the goods were covered by the bill of lading from the time they were put on board to be loaded consequently the defendants were protected from liability under the exemption clause. The Duero L R 2 A and E 893 and Hayes v Cuttford L R 4 C P D 152 commented on and followed. HABSBROEK V ISRAEL; BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY I L R 13 Bom 571

11 Shipping Company Liability of—A Shipping Company is prima facie bound to deliver goods in good order and condition but this limitation is subject expressly to the conditions inserted in the bill of lading. 12 Liability for loss—Absence of negligence—A cask at Madras shipped by the B I S N steamer Udhratta was lost and to be delivered to their Agent M at Bimlipatam. At the time of shipment they declared the value and paid enhanced freight on account of such value. By the bill of lading the company undertook to deliver the case in good order at Bimlipatam to the consignee M subject to certain conditions annexed. By one of these conditions if the consignee did not take delivery when the ship was ready to discharge the goods might be warehoused at the merchant's risk and the company's liability was to cease when the goods left the ship's side. The consignee did not take delivery at the ship's side and the company's agent at Bimlipatam took the case to the Custom House as he was bound to do by the regulations of the port. If the Superintendent of the Custom House had known that the case contained corals it would have been placed in an inner room but the company's agent did not know the contents of the case and therefore was unable to give any such information to the Superintendent. While the case was lying at the Custom House application was made in plaintiff's behalf to the company's agent for delivery of the case upon the usual guarantee. The agent refused to deliver the case with the production of the bill of lading. Afterwards the bill of lading was received from M and the case was delivered up. At a meeting between its leaving the ship's side and delivery to the consignee the case was opened and a portion of the contents lost. Held that the defendants were not liable. MACKINTON MACKENZIE MIXTURE 6 Mad. 353

as master of the steam vessel John Bright for the safe carriage and delivery of a box addressed to A which in fact contained diamonds of the value of Rs 1100 three rubies and three emeralds in all of the value of Rs 15940. On the face of the bill of lading was printed: This bill of lading is issued subject to the following conditions. One condition was that a written declaration of the contents and value of the goods is required by the owner and must be delivered by the shipper to the owner's agents with the bills of lading. A wrong description of contents or false declaration of value shall release the owner from all responsibility in case of loss and the goods shall be charged double freight on the real value which freight shall be paid previous to delivery. The declaration in this case was contained in the following letter from the shipper to the agent of the shipowner: Dear Sir—Be good enough to give me an order for a small box containing diamonds to the value of about Rs 14000 to be shipped on board the steamer John Bright for Calcutta. Yours etc. The box was lost by the negligence of B's servants. In a suit brought to recover the value of the goods Rs 14000—Held that all the shipowner was entitled to was that the shipper should make a declaration of what landed side he believed to be the value. The declaration as to contents was not vitiated by the omission to enumerate all the different species of articles contained in the box. Upon the evidence the declaration as to the value and nature of the contents was found false therefore A was entitled to recover the value of the diamonds lost. DEUNZENBERG BROTHERS VITHA BETHAM 2 Ind. 14 Leakage—Breakage—Damage caused by leakage from other goods—Piece goods were carried from India to Bombay under a bill of lading the exceptio in which protected the master from leakage breakage rust decay loss or damage from machinery or misfeasance error in judgment negligence or default of persons in the service of the ship and the ship not being liable for any consequences of causes therein excepted however originating. The piece goods on their arrival in Bombay were found to be damaged by oil and by chafing—i.e. by rubbing against their goods in the hold—but there was no evidence to show that such damage was caused. Held that the term leakage did not include leakage from their goods in the piece-goods nor did breakage include damage caused by chafing and that as no negligence was proved the master was not protected by the exception. DAMAGE FROM NEGLIGENCE GRAMER HILL 10 Bom 60

15 Leakage Damage done by—Provision for place of claim—Plaintiff shipped some bales of cloth from Calcutta to Rangoon under a bill of lading by which the defendants were bound to deliver—accidents loss or damages from fire machinery boilers steam and all the accidents of the sea rivers land carriage and steam navigation etc. excepted. On the voyage one of the boilers burst and steam and water escaping some of the hales were damaged. Held that the damage was within the exceptions of the bill of lading and therefore that the defendants were not liable to make good the loss. Quere—Whether notwithstanding the exceptions in the bill of lading the defendants might not have been made liable in a suit on the implied warranty if it had been proved as a fact that the boiler was not reasonably fit for the voyage. BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION Co v ABRAHAM MOOSUM 8 W R, 35

16 ——— Exception in bill of lading—Seaworthiness—Suit for damage to goods by leakage while ship in dock—The plaintiffs goods were loaded in the defendants' steamer then lying in dock to be carried from Bombay to certain ports in East Africa. At the time of loading the ship was apparently in a sound and seaworthy condition. Two days after the goods had been put on board and when the ship was still in dock it sprung a leak and the water came into the hold and damaged the plaintiffs' goods. The ship was taken to the dry dock, the cargo was shifted and the leak repaired. It appeared that the leak had arisen from the fact that one of the plates of the ship had been worn thin in one particular spot so that when the cargo was put on board and the ship lay deeper in the water the pressure became so great that a hole was made and the water rushed in. The plaintiffs sued the defendants for damages. The defendants pleaded (1) that the ship was in a seaworthy condition when the goods were put on board (2) that they were protected by the bill of lading which contained the following exception:—Accident loss and damage from vermin barnstray jettison collision fire machinery boilers steam and all the perils dangers and accidents of the sea rivers land carriage and steam navigation of whatever nature and kind and accident loss or damage from any act neglect or default whatsoever of the pilot master or mariners or other servants of the Company or from any deviation excepted. Held that the defendants were liable. While the ship was in dock it was not seaworthy and the exception in the bill of lading did not limit the implied warranty of seaworthiness. VITRULDAS GOBER v BOMBAY AND PERSIA STEAM NAVIGATION Co I L B 19 Bom 639

17 ——— Loss by fire—Carriers—Wharfingers—Under the terms of a bill of lading goods were to be delivered from the ship's tackle as fast as the steamer could discharge failing which the agents were to be at liberty to land the goods at their godowns. The bill of lading further among other exceptions provided that the ship owners should not be liable for loss by fire. The steamer on arriving at the port of discharge came alongside the wharf and commenced unloading at the custom house godowns without giving the consignees the option of landing the goods from the ship's tackle. The consignees however did not object to the goods being landed at the godowns and they paid also without objection a sum for the wharfage of a part of the goods in their godowns. Held that the ship-owners if the goods placed in the godowns were in their possession as carriers were protected under the clause of the bill of lading providing against fire as much as if the fire had occurred on boardship and on the other hand if the goods were in the possession of the ship-owners as wharfingers they were not liable for the loss inasmuch as the goods were destroyed by fire without any default on their part. CHIT HOVA & Co v SING MOR & Co I L R 4 Cal 738 3 C L R 585

18 ——— Charges for landing and wharfage—Liability of consignees—A bill of lading given by the defendants to the plaintiff for certain goods contained a stipulation that the goods were to be taken from the steamer's tackle by the consignees as fast as the steamer could discharge failing which the steamer's agents were to be at liberty to land the same into godowns. The cost of lightering godown rents etc. thereby incurred to be borne by the respective consignees. Held that under this bill of lading the ship-owners were entitled to charge for landing and wharfage only in default of the consignees failing to take the goods from the steamer's tackle within reasonable time. Held (per POOTER J.) that for the speedy discharge of their vessel the ship-owners were entitled to land and wharf the goods though not to charge for landing and wharfage unless the plaintiff had had an opportunity of landing the goods himself. COSSIM HOSSAIN SOOBY v LEE PHIE CHUAN

19 ——— Loss by fire before delivery—Exemption from liability—The defendant received goods on board his steamer under a bill of lading which exempted him from liability for loss occasioned by the act of God the Queen's enemies fire and all and every other dangers and accidents of the seas rivers and navigation of whatever kind or nature and lawfully landed them on the Custom House Bunder at Bombay where they were accidentally burned before they were delivered to the consignee. Held that he was protected by the above exception in the bill of lading. HONG KONG AND SHANGHAI BANKING CORPORATION v BAKER 6 Bom O C 71

Held on appeal that so long as the goods remained in his custody after being so landed he was protected from liability under the above exemption in the bill of lading.

20 ——— Delivery in dock—Landing or craning charges—Practice of dock to recover from consignees—Liability of ship owner—Certain boilers consigned to the plaintiff in Bombay were shipped at Liverpool in two steamers belonging to the same owners under two bills of lading in these terms: Shipped in good order and condition etc. to be delivered subject to the exceptions and conditions hereinafter mentioned in the like good order and condition from the ship's tackle (where the ship's responsibility shall cease) at the aforesaid port of Bombay etc. One of the exceptions and conditions above referred to was as follows:—

The ship-owner shall have the option of discharging in dock and of making delivery of the goods

under the bills of lading either over the ship's side or from lighters or a store ship or custom house or warehouse at merchant's risk. Freight was prepaid in Liverpool. On their arrival at Bombay the two steamers went into the Prince's Dock belonging to the Port Trust and discharged the boilers by means of the Port Trust cranes on to the dock wharves. The plaintiff subsequently sent to remove the boilers but was not allowed by the dock authorities to do so until he had paid to them various sums amounting in the aggregate to Rs 30 on account as stated in the bill furnished him by the Port Trust of landing charges for the said boilers. The bills also contained certain additional charges for wharfage. These the plaintiff was ready to pay but the landing charges he paid only under protest and in order to get possession of his goods and now sought to recover the same from the defendants who represented the ship-owners. It was the practice of the Port Trust to recover these charges in all cases from the consignees of goods discharged in their dock and the charge was said to be levied on all goods landed on the wharves of the dock whether by the dock's cranes or by the ship's own tackles. The charge was incurred the moment the goods touched the wharf. In their rates sanctioned by Government which by their Act the Port Trust were entitled to charge this charge was called not a landing charge but a dock and cranes charge. Had the plaintiff been given delivery of these goods in the stream and afterwards himself landed them at any wharf belonging to the Port Trust in the Port of Bombay the Port Trust would have sought to have made the same charge for allowing the goods to be landed whether that was done by their appliances or not. Held that the ship-owner and not the consignee was bound to pay these charges they being in reality charges for work and labour done in and about the landing of the goods—an operation which under the bills of lading was within the duty of the ship-owner. Per LATHAM J.—The ship having elected to discharge in the dock it was her duty to land the goods on the wharf. Every charge which had to be incurred before that could be done was a charge antecedent to delivery and one therefore which must be paid by the ship-owner. SCOTT & FRYLAX I. L. R. 7 Bom 386

21 We ght contents and value unknown—Act IX of 1856 s 3—Ass gnee of bill of lading for value—A bill of lading purporting to be for 50 tons of coals and containing a printed clause weight contents and value unknown and similar words written above the signature of the master does not amount to an admission by the master that he has received 50 tons of coal on board. Upon the true construction of the Bills of Lading Act (IX of 1856) s 3 a bill of lading in the above form is not in the hands of a consignee for value conclusive evidence against the master of the shipment of 50 tons. NICOL & CO v CASTLE 9 Bom. 321 measurement—Measurement at port of delivery—Discrepancy in measurements—Evidence—Burden of proof—Suit by consignee for excess freight—A V at Moulmein consigned to the plaintiff at Bombay 135 logs of teak timber shipped on board the defendant's ship. The bill of lading which was signed by the defendant described the logs as marked A 7 and measuring tons 115 12 10 and it provided for the payment of freight thereon at Bombay at the rate of Rs 17 per ton of 50 cubic feet on right delivery. The last clause of the bill of lading was in the handwriting of the defendant and was as follows—Marks number quantity and measurement unknown all other conditions as per charter party. The charter-party was expressed to be between the owners of the ship and Messrs. B of Rangoon as charterers of the whole ship and provided for the payment of freight at the rate of Rs 18 per ton of 50 cubic feet for all timber one rate throughout except 100 tons broken stowage at half freight by intake measurement. On arrival of the ship at Bombay the plaintiff as consignee of the timber and holder of the bill of lading paid the defendant (the captain of the ship) Rs 1500 on account of freight and took delivery of the 135 logs. On measuring them he found that according to his method of measurement the total measurement of the 135 logs came only to tons 58 27 11 6 and not tons 115-12 10 as mentioned in the bill of lading. He claimed therefore to be chargeable with freight only on the smaller quantity (viz Rs 990 8) and to recover from the defendant the difference (viz Rs 504 8) between that sum and Rs 1500 paid on account as for an overpayment of freight. It was proved that all the timber on board had been measured at Moulmein by an employee of the charterers acting apparently as agent of all the different shippers and that the measurements in the bills of lading were supplied by this person to the defendant as the measurements of the different consignments. It was also proved that the 135 logs received and measured by the plaintiff in Bombay were the same logs that were shipped under the bill of lading and that the plaintiff's measurement of them was correct according to the mode of measurement which he adopted. There was no evidence as to what was the mode of measurement followed at Moulmein nor except the statements in the bill of lading as to what was the actual intake measurement of the timber there. Held that the effect of the last clause in the bill of lading was to incorporate into that document the clause of the charter party which provided that freight should be payable on the intake measurement; that the burden of proving what the intake measurement actually was lay upon the plaintiff who sought to recover back money which he alleged he had paid in excess of what was due and that in the absence of such evidence on behalf of the plaintiff the statement of quantity contained in the bill of lading was prima facie evidence of the intake measurement of the timber. *CRESWELL v EASTON & SETON & WILLIAMS I. 24. — Freight Lien for on cargo—Advances on account of freight—Master's lien for freight—Charter-party.—By a charter party made in London the ship H was chartered to carry a cargo from Liverpool to Calcutta where she was to load from the factors of the charterer a full homeward cargo to be carried by her to Europe. Freight for the whole round out and home was made payable on safe delivery of the homeward cargo but at so much per ton of the outward cargo delivered in Calcutta. The master was to have a lien on the cargo for freight etc. cash not exceeding £800 was to be advanced to the ship in Calcutta on account of freight but subject to insurance and £600 was to be advanced by the charterer's acceptance at three months or in cash under discount at charterer's option on the sailing of the vessel from Liverpool less five per cent for insurance. The charterer himself loaded the ship and the master signed a bill of lading which declared the cargo to be shipped by the charterer to be delivered at Calcutta as the agents of the charterer might direct unto order or to his assigns. Freight to be paid as per charter party. In the margin of the bill was written Received in advance of the within freight £600 as per charter party. The £600 had been paid in cash but by the charterer a bill at three months. The charterer became bankrupt and the bill was dishonoured and the fact of the bankruptcy and dishonour was known in Calcutta when the ship arrived there. On the ship's arrival in Calcutta J O & Co who were the holders for value of the bill of lading demanded delivery of the cargo. The master claimed a right of lien and refused to deliver unless J O & Co would pay the £600 bill which had been dishonoured and would further advance £800 for the ship's use and load a homeward cargo according to the terms of the charter party. Held that J O & Co took the bill of lading with notice of the charter party but that under the circumstances the master had no lien and was bound to deliver the cargo to J O & Co. OGLE v NASHOLM

25. — Freight Lien for on cargo—Advances on account of freight—Lien of owners.—Goods were shipped deliverable to the order of the shippers or their assigns. The bill of lading stated that freight for said goods was to be paid as per charter party with average accustomed reserving lien in full on cargo for full amount as stipulated therein. The charter party showed that H & Co undertook to supply a full cargo for the ship and that R H agent for the ship agreed with H & Co that the said ship should proceed to London dock or any other suitable dock for loading as at party's option or so near thereto as she can safely get to be at all times afloat and in safety and then load for the charterer a full and complete cargo of salt not exceeding what the master considers sufficient cargo which the charterers engage to ship not exceeding what she can reasonably carry with her stores provisions and furniture and being so loaded shall therewith proceed to Calcutta or so near thereto as she may safely get and there deliver as per bills of lading and on being paid freight at the rate of twenty three shillings per ton. The freight to be paid thus £ 00 by charterer's acceptance at two months on sailing less 2 per cent insurance; or cash on sailing less 5 per cent interest and insurance at charterer's option and the balance in cash on delivery as master requires at current rate of exchange 2 per cent commission to charterers in lieu of consignment. Held that a sum of money payable before the arrival of the ship at her port of discharge and payable by the shippers of the goods at the port of shipment is not freight in the strict legal acceptation of the term with all the incidents of freight in giving the shipowner the right of lien unless it is stipulated for. Here the owners had a lien upon the goods for freight in twelfth tending that the bill of exchange for £ 00 had been given. THOMAS v OGLE

26. — Freight Lien for on cargo—Advances on account of freight—Dis honour of bills.—The captain of a ship has no lien on the cargo in respect of a portion of the freight stipulated to be advanced and advanced by bills after wards dishonoured nor in respect of a portion of the freight stipulated to be advanced at the port of discharge. A lien cannot arise in any case when the master has not a right to retain the goods till the freight is paid. Such advances are not freight but advances to be made under discount and upon the security of the captain's bill on the freighter. The master has no lien at law or in equity in respect of breaches of covenants in the charter party other than those relating to the payment of freight for goods actually carried. Held by the High Court that this opinion was correct and that a suit for short delivery under the bill of lading could not be maintained without a claim being made in Calcutta. 28. — Short delivery of goods—Discharge as to how goods were lost—

Burden of proof— Or otherwise meaning of—the plaintiff was the consignee of a large consignment of goods shipped from Bombay in bags on board the defendants steamship Java for carriage to Zanzibar. On arrival of the Java at Zanzibar the goods were landed by the defendant company and placed in the customs godown where the plaintiff in due course demanded delivery. Some of the bags were not forthcoming but the evidence did not show how the loss had occurred. The bill of lading contained the following condition—The Company's liability shall cease as soon as the packages are free of the ship's tackle after which they shall not be responsible for any loss or damage however caused if stored in receiving ship godown or upon any wharf all risks of fire, dacoity, vermin or otherwise shall be with the merchant and the usual charges shall be paid before delivery of the goods. Fire insurance will be covered by the company's agents on application. In a suit brought by the plaintiff for short delivery of goods—Held that the defendants were liable. They did not show how the loss occurred and as it might have occurred from causes not covered by the exception (e.g. from misdelivery) they did not bring themselves within the protection afforded by the exemption. The general words or otherwise contained in the tenth clause of the bill of lading could not be read so as to cover all possible losses for that would make them include wilful misconduct on the part of the defendant's servants and general words are not read with such an extended meaning. Nor would they include misdelivery for that was provided for in the eighth clause. BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION CO v. RATANSI RAMJI

29 — Claim for short delivery—Place for preferring claim— A bill of lading contained a provision that any claim for short delivery or for damage done to goods should be made at the port of Calcutta and not elsewhere. Held that this clause did not affect the plaintiff's right of suit in the Court at Pangoon and that if the defendants meant to object that no claim had been made in Calcutta before the commencement of the suit they should have done so in proper time i.e. in their written statement. An objection on that ground taken for the first time at the hearing of the appeal was disallowed. BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION CO v. ISRAHIM MOOSEY

of Calcutta only within one month after delivery, of any portion of the goods entered in the bill of lading. Held in a suit against defendants for compensation for value of goods short delivered that this was not an unreasonable stipulation and that a claim made on the agents of the defendants who were authorized only to retain the goods receive freight and give delivery was not a sufficient compliance with the condition. Held also that defendants were common carriers though not for the purposes of the Indian Carriers Act and that their character of carriers continued so long as the goods remained in their hands and undelivered. BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY v. 31 — Delivery of goods to consignee—Cargo unclaimed on arrival of ship—Rights of ship owner to land goods—Damages by rain—Madras Harbour Trust Act (Madras Act II of 1886)— The defendant's steamship arrived at Madras on 4th December 1891 bringing bars of gram consigned to the plaintiffs under a bill of lading by which the defendants were to have the option of delivering the goods into a receiving ship or landing them at consignee's risk and expense and their liability was to cease when the goods were free of the ship's tackle. The plaintiffs on the date of the arrival of the goods were not authorized to receive them. The plaintiffs set up a custom that cargo of this description ought to be landed on the beach but as this could not be done in the absence of the consignee the defendants landed it the same day on the pier and delivered it into the custody of the Madras Harbour Trust for storage pending delivery to the consignee. On the 8th of December 1891 heavy rain fell and on the same date plaintiffs learnt that the cargo had been delivered on the pier. When the plaintiffs came to take delivery on that day a considerable portion had been damaged by rain for which they now sued the defendants. Held (1) that where the consignee were unable to take delivery in the ordinary way on the beach the master of a ship has the option of landing and warehousing the goods and that delivery to the Harbour Trust for custody was not wrongful. (2) that in the absence of proof that the defendants were negligent or that they failed to deliver the goods the suit must be dismissed. BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY v. for the amelioration of the condition of talukhdars in the Ahmedabad Collectorate and for their relief from debt was intended to deal with all debts and liabilities which could possibly impose a charge upon the talukhdar's estate at the end of the period of management when the estate was to be restored to the talukhdar free of incumbrance excepting the Government revenues. If debts amounted to more than the surplus of rents during the management of which the maximum period was twenty years they were not to be paid. A widow as guardian of her infant son the heir of talukhdar's estate in the above district validly transferred villages part thereof and in the deed of transfer to which her ward was, by her as his guardian, nominally a party contracted to indemnify the purchaser in case the Government should claim and enforce a right to revenue upon the villages which she transferred as being rent free. The deed purported to make both guardian and ward personally liable in this respect and also charged the liability upon other parts of the talukhdar's estate. The infant attained majority and the estate was then placed under management within Act VI of 1862. During the period of management the Government claimed and enforced payment of revenue upon the villages. Held that there was no personal liability on the part of the talukhdar created by the above; also that if the charge on the estate had been validly made it fell at all events within the terms of s 12 of Act VI of 1862 absolving estates from liability for debts incurred not only before but during the period of management. WAGHRA RAJSAJI v MASUDIN

His personal liability for the same remains unaffected by the Act. This personal liability furnishes a sufficient consideration for a subsequent obligation so as to bind the landed estates by a contract made after the period of the management by the Talukhdari Officer had expired. From and after the expiration of that period the talukhdar becomes under s 20 the absolute proprietor

Accordingly where a talukhdar had after the withdrawal of the management by the Talukhdari Settlement Officer encumbered his landed estate under several mortgage bonds passed partly in renewal of old bonds and partly in consideration of old debts contracted during the period of the management—Held that the mortgage bonds created valid and binding encumbrances upon the estate. BOO JINATBOO v SHA NAGAR VALAB KANJI I L R 11 Bom. 78 field ainsnt in 1883 to oust the defendants, and to obtain possession alleging that the defendants purchase of a portion of the bhag was illegal and invalid under s 1 of the Bombay Bhagdari Act (V of 1862). The suit was dismissed on the ground that though the defendants purchase was illegal under the Act the plaintiff had no right to oust the defendants until the Collector had taken action under s 2 of the Act to set aside the defendants' purchase. Held reversing the decision of the lower Court that the suit was not barred by s 2 of the Bombay Bhagdari Act (V of 1862). Held also that the defendants purchase of unascertained shares in the undivided bhag was not opposed to s 1 of the Act. BAR KUVANBAI v BHAGDARI LICHARAM I L R, 13 Bom, 203

1 — ss 1 and 3—San mortgage—Bhagdari and nardadari tenures—Mortgage before passing of the Act—Execution of decree—Operation of Act—The plaintiff in 1874 sued on a san mortgage dated 15th November 1861—i.e. five months before the passing of Bombay Act V of 1862—to recover a sum of money by sale of the mortgaged property which formed part of a bhag in a bhagdari village which bhag the defendant had purchased at a Court sale subsequent to the date of the mortgage. Held (assuming s 1 of the Act to apply) that it does not bar the right of action that therefore a Civil Court would be bound to make a decree even though it might anticipate that s 1 of the Act would extend in the way of the execution of that decree. Semle—That after a decree has been passed against a portion of a bhag the Collector might recognize such portion as a division of the bhag if assured that justice required that the decree should be executed. Held further that no retrospective operation can be given to s 1 of the Act so as prejudicially to affect existing rights. The words attachment or sale by the process of any Civil Court used therein were intended to prevent attachment and sale under simple money decrees and not to prevent the sale of mortgaged property in satisfaction of a valid mortgage. RANCHODDAS DOYALDAS v PANCHODDAS NANABHAI I L R 1 Bom 581

S 3 of the Act has no bearing on sales by order of a Civil Court but is intended to apply to unlawful sales and alienations of portions of bhags made out of Court or by private individuals. 2. — and s. 33—Street—Civil Court's interference with the discretion given to public bodies—The word street in s. 17 of the Bombay District Municipal Act (VI of 1873) means and includes not merely the surface of the ground but so much above and below it as is requisite or appropriate for the preservation of the street for the usual and intended purposes. The plaintiff proposed to make a balcony projecting over a public road. The municipality objected to the work as an encroachment on a public street. He therefore sued the municipality to establish his right to build the proposed balcony. Held that so far as the column of space standing over the street was vested in the municipality the plaintiff had no right to occupy it with a balcony which by intercepting light and air would greatly impair the use of the area as a street. S. 33 of the Bombay District Municipal Act 1873 gives the municipality a discretion to issue such orders as it thinks proper with reference to a proposed building. Civil Courts cannot interfere with that discretion unless it is exercised in a capricious, wanton and oppressive manner. The plaintiff was the owner of two houses on each side of the passage of a khudki or open square containing three or four other houses. He proposed to connect the two houses by building a story across the passage at such a height as not to interfere with the passage of those who were entitled to go to and fro. He applied to the local municipality for permission to build in the manner he proposed. The municipality forbade the work on the ground that it was likely to interfere with the access of light and air to the neighbouring houses. The plaintiff thereupon sued the municipality to establish his right to build the proposed structure. It was contended for the plaintiff that the municipality ought not to have refused permission in the interests of the neighbouring house-holders who were able to protect their own rights in case of injury. Held that the suit would not lie as the order of the municipality refusing permission was not an unreasonable one under the circumstances of the case. Held further that the authority of the municipality was not in any way affected by the circumstance that the proposed erection might be an encroachment on private rights subjecting the plaintiff to an action by the persons injured. NAGAR VALAD NARSI v. A scheme of taxation drafted by the committee was subsequently adopted by the municipality and it included a new house and property tax. The municipality then issued a notice with regard to this last-mentioned tax under the provisions of s. 21 of Bombay Act VI of 1873 setting forth the particulars of the proposed tax and requiring objections to be lodged within a fortnight from the date of the notice. A number of objections were received which were laid on the table for twenty-one days for perusal and consideration by the municipal commissioners. At the end of that time a special meeting of the Commissioners was held, at which it was resolved that the objections were invalid and the scheme and the rule with regard to the levying of the tax were forwarded to Government and were sanctioned. The plaintiffs sued for an injunction restraining the municipality from levying the tax contending that it was illegal, on the ground (1) that there was no municipality decision of imposing the tax for any of the purposes allowed by the Act inasmuch as the commissioners who passed the resolution to impose the tax did not know for what purpose the tax was to be imposed; (2) that the resolution imposing the tax was illegal.

August 1890 plaintiffs sent a notice to the town municipality of Umreth intimating their intention to erect a building on their land, and giving a rough sketch plan of the land intended to be built upon. In this notice plaintiffs did not expressly state their intention to build the wall in dispute. On the 25th August 1890 the municipality wrote to the plaintiffs requiring them to furnish a plan showing the design of the proposed building with its measurements. On the 30th September 1890 the plaintiffs without furnishing the plan as required built a wall on their land. Thereupon the municipality gave a notice to the plaintiffs requiring them to pull it down as it has been built without their permission. The plaintiffs having failed to comply with this notice the wall was demolished and its materials were carried away by the municipal servants. Thereupon the plaintiffs sued the municipality to recover damages for the wrongful demolition of the wall. Held that the plaintiffs had contravened the provisions of cl 1 of s 33 of Bombay Act VI of 1873 inasmuch as they had built the wall without giving any notice or (if they did) gave notice without affording the information required by the municipality. The municipality were therefore justified in ordering the wall to be demolished. DAYE HARI SHANKAR v TOWN MUNICIPALITY OF UMRETH

— s 36—Privy power of municipality to order to be built by owner of a house—Such order not imperative but permissive—Discretion of Court—The terms of s 36 of Bombay Act VI of 1873 are not imperative in requiring a municipality to call on the owner of a house to build a privy but are permissive leaving it to the discretion of the municipality to determine when the power conferred on them shall be exercised. Accordingly where the plaintiff complained that the defendants had erected a privy so close to his house as to be a nuisance and the lower Appellate Court found it to be a nuisance but rejected the plaintiff's claim on the ground that the defendants had erected it under the orders of the municipality issued under s 31 of the Act—Held reversing the decree of the lower Appellate Court that the municipality had no authority to order the defendants to erect the privy regardless of the plaintiff's right and that the defendants therefore could not plead that they acted under the orders of the municipality. The High Court directed an injunction to remove the privy within three months from the date of its decision. JAFIR SAHYB v KADIR RAHMAT

— s 42 cl (1) and ss 46 and 75—Removal of obstruction in public street—Notice of removal—Corporate bodies—Practice—Suit for injunction—Under the District Municipal Act (Bombay Act VI of 1873) a municipality has power to have all obstructions in a public street removed whether the obstructions were placed there lawfully or not. The only distinction which the Act draws is between obstructions erected or placed before the Act came into operation and those which have been erected or placed since it came into operation. As to the former s 42 cl (1) of the Act provides that notice should be given and if legally placed on the street compensation should be awarded for their removal. As to the latter the municipality can remove them under s 48 even without giving any notice. The public have a right of passing over the whole of a street if it is a public street. It is not the practice of the Court to interfere with corporate bodies unless they are manifestly abusing their power. AHMEDABAD MUNICIPALITY v MANILAL UDEWATH

The accused hired a house and opened a shop for selling fruit within six hundred yards of the municipal market without obtaining a license from the municipality. The second class Magistrate convicted and sentenced each of the accused to pay a fine of Rs 5. The District Magistrate, relying on the case of In re Paba Khaji, I L R 9 Bom 22 reversed the conviction and sentence. Held that what the municipality had authority to direct under s 66 of (Bombay) Act VI of 1873 was that no place other than the municipal market or other places licensed as markets should be used by any body as a market but they had no authority to issue a notification affecting other places which might be used for selling vegetables etc otherwise than as a market that inasmuch as the using of the shop by the accused was confined simply to the selling of fruit and not of "vegetables" in the popular sense it could not be affected by the prohibition contemplated by s 66 of the Act that if the prohibition of the municipality

After the promulgation of this order the accused gave a feast in a private house to upwards of thirty people of his caste. He was thereupon convicted under s 188 of the Penal Code for disobedience of an order duly promulgated by a public servant and sentenced to pay a fine of Rs 5. Held (reversing the conviction and sentence) that s 73 of the Bombay District Municipal Act (VI of 1873) did not empower the municipality to place an interdiction on people meeting together to eat and drink in their own houses. The words in the section 'take such measures as may be deemed necessary to prevent meet or suppress the outbreak' imply in themselves something actively to be done by the municipality rather than any limitation to be imposed on the private rights of the citizens in their relations of daily life. Special measures for the health of the town—such as sulphur fumigation daily flushing of sewers assistance on good house sanitation isolation of infected districts and other similar steps to be taken by the authorities themselves—fall naturally within the meaning of the terms of the section. Under the rules passed under the Bombay District Municipal Act (Bombay Act VI of 1873) as amended by Bombay Act 11 of 1884 the Municipality of Wai estimated the annual letting value of a house belonging to the accused at Rs 50 and levied a house tax of Rs 8-0. A tax payer applied to the managing committee for a reduction of the tax but his application was dismissed. Default having been made in payment of the tax A was prosecuted under s. 84 of the Act before a second class Magistrate. He contended that the estimate made by the municipality was too high and that his house would not let for more than 10 or 12 rupees a year. The Magistrate took evidence on the point and found that the annual rental of the house would not exceed Rs 12 and he ordered payment of 12 annas only on account of the tax. Held that the Magistrate had no power to go behind the estimate of value framed by the managing committee under the powers given to it by the rules. He ought to have accepted as conclusive the amount found by the managing committee to be the letting value of the house and held the legal liability of the accused to pay the tax based on this amount to be proved. The remedy of the accused if he considered his house assessed too highly was to apply to the managing committee and no other mode of redress was open to him. Municipality of Ahmedabad v Jumna Pura I L R 17 Bom 731 distinguished MUNICIPALITY OF WAI v KRISHNAJI GANGADHAR I L R 23 Bom 448

When the notice of the 25th of January 1881 was sent by K he had no cause of action against the municipality for anything done. It was contended for the defendants as to these two plots of land that the plaintiffs had no right to cultivate them as they had been made a part of a village site and on that understanding they had not been numbered at the survey in 1863 and had been exempted from assessment for twenty years. As to the bed of the stream it was contended that the stream was a public stream and that the bed of the stream as it dried up belonged to Government and not to the plaintiffs. It was held by the lower Appellate Court that s. 61 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code applied; that Government were competent to set apart a portion of the lands comprised in the sanad of the plaintiffs for a village site and that as these lands had not been numbered at

On appeal to the High Court—Held (reversing the decree of the lower Court) that the plaintiffs were entitled to the declaration prayed for. Held also (1) that s. 61 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code did not apply. That section relates back to s. 38 and both refer only to lands the property of Government in unalienated villages or unalienated portions of villages. They do not empower the Government to confiscate any land belonging to an inamdar and to confer it on the persons living in his village. (2) That the mere omission to number the plots of land could not have the effect of turning them into a part of the village site or take away the right of the plaintiffs. Nor did the omission of Government to assess these lands deprive the plaintiffs of them or make them the property of Government. But the three months time does not begin to run until such acknowledgment has been received so that where a person is charged with thus appropriating his land, it is no defence to plead that the Collector though he received the application neglected to furnish the applicant with a written acknowledgment of the receipt of the application. PER RANADE J—Where the Collector has received the application and omitted to send an acknowledgment the occupant need only wait for three months from the time of his sending in the application. Prior to this however the plaintiff and other tenants paid B rents for 1892-93. K then applied for and obtained from the Collector an order under s 86 of the Code rendering him assistance in recovering these rents. The plaintiff in August 1893 brought this suit to restrain K from recovering the rents and to avoid the order for assistance. The Subordinate Judge granted the injunction but the District Judge reversed that decision and dismissed the suit on the ground that K was the registered occupant of the land and that the order for assistance was valid and that payment of rent to B did not discharge the tenants. Attachment for arrears of land revenue—Forfeiture—Applicability of the Land Revenue Code to talukdars villages—Bombay District Police Act (Bombay Act VII of 1867) s 16—Cost of punitive police post—The Bombay Land Revenue Code (Bombay Act V of 1879) applies to talukdars villages in the Ahmedabad district. Such villages fall within the description of alienated holdings as defined by the Code. When a talukdars village is attached under s 159 of the Code for arrears of land revenue so long, as the attachment subsists an order of forfeiture under s 153 is illegal. The plaintiff was the talukdars of the village of A. At the end of the revenue year 1878-79 that is on 31st July 1879 the plaintiff was a defaulter in respect of the assessment payable to Government for that year. In November 1879 a punitive police post was established in the village under a 16 of Bombay Act VII of 1867 on account of the turbulent conduct of the inhabitants. Between April and January 1880 the Collector sold certain property of the talukdars for arrears of revenue and realized by the sale a sum of Rs 1008 a sum more than sufficient to cover the arrears due for 1878-79 as well as the assessment payable for 1879 but the Collector after deducting

the arrears due for 1878-79 applied the rest of the sale-proceeds towards the payment of the cost of the punitive post. The assessment for 1879-80 having remained unpaid the village was attached on the 1st July 1880 under s 159 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Act V of 1879). The attachment was followed on the 6th January 1881 by an order declaring the village to be forfeited under s 153 of the Code. In 1886 the plaintiff sued Government to recover possession of the village and for a declaration that the order of forfeiture was illegal and ultra vires. The defendant contended that it was valid and legal. Held that the village having been attached for arrears of land revenue under s 159 of Bombay Act V of 1879 on the 1st July 1880 the plaintiff had twelve years time from the date of the attachment within which he could apply for the restoration of the village under s 162 of the Act. The order of forfeiture of the 6th January 1881 was therefore null and void. Held (per BIRCHWOOD J.) that the Collector had no power under s 16 of Bombay Act VII of 1867 to recover the cost of the punitive post from the talukdars (1) as he was not an inhabitant of the village and (2) because the cost could only be defrayed by a local rate imposed on the inhabitants of the district in which the punitive post was established. *SAMALDAS BECHAR DESAI v. In 1880 and 1881 the first defendant having made default in paying the assessment plots Nos 303 and 304 were sold by the revenue authorities and extra bought respectively by defendants Nos 2 and 3. In the latter year (1881) plot No 304 was sold in execution of a money decree obtained by the mortgagee (defendant No 1) against the mortgagor and was purchased by him (the first defendant) and undivided brother without leave of the Court. In 1882 the plaintiffs (heirs of the mortgagor) brought this suit against defendants Nos 1, 2 and 3 to redeem the said three plots of land from the mortgage of 1872. Defendant No 1 pleaded that he had inherited plot No. 304 from his brother who had become the owner of plot No 304 by his purchase at the execution sale in 1881. He disclaimed all interest in plots Nos 303 and 304. Defendants Nos 2 and 3 answered that they had become absolute owners by the purchase at the revenue sales. As to these latter it was alleged that defendants Nos 2 and 3 were in possession of the said two plots for the first defendant. Defendants Nos 2 and 3 contended that by s 182 of the Land Revenue Code the plaintiffs were precluded from raising this point. Held that though s. 182 forbade the Court to entertain a suit against defendants Nos. 2 and 3 on the ground that they had bought the land for defendant No. 1 it did not debar it from entertaining a suit against them on the ground that subsequently to the sale they were holding on behalf of defendant No. 1 or against defendant No. 1 on the ground that he was himself really in possession through defendants Nos. 2 and 3 as his agents or tenants. The same principle of equity which would make defendant No. 1 a trustee for the mortgagors if he had bought in his own name would make defendants Nos. 2 and 3 trustees for them if subsequently to the sale they held the land on behalf of defendant No. 1 and would also make defendant No. 1 himself a trustee if subsequently to the sale the property came into his possession as beneficially entitled thereto owing to an agreement between him and the certified purchasers. GENU & SAKHARAM

It was plain that in cases falling within sub cls (a) and (c) of s 216 of the Land Revenue Code the inamdar's interest in the assessment would not be affected by the application of Chs VIII to X of that Act. He would still get the old assessment in the alienated lands in the village in the former case and the same amount of assessment in the latter and the same must have been the intention in cases contemplated by sub cl. (b).

BOMBAY LOCAL FUNDS ACT (III OF 1869)

1 — s 8—Local cess—Landlord and tenant—Fraudulent collection of cess—The plaintiffs sued to recover back from the defendant the amount levied by him as local cess on certain waste lands belonging to the plaintiffs, the defendant claiming to be the superior holder of the village in which the lands were situated. The amount was levied by the defendant through the assistance of the mamlatdar under Bombay Act III of 1869 s 8. The defendant contended that in consequence of a demand from Government he had paid local cess on the whole of his taluk, including the village in which the plaintiffs' lands were situated and was therefore entitled under ss 69 and 70 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872) to recover from them the amount which he had paid to Government as a portion of the cess which rateably fell upon their lands. It was found that the defendant was not the proprietor of the lands held by the plaintiffs and that the relation of landlord and tenant did not exist between them; also that defendant paid local cess for the plaintiffs' lands fraudulently and with the intention of thereby making evidence of title to their lands knowing that he had no lawful or just claim to them. Held that the defendant was not the superior holder of the lands within s 8 of Bombay Act III of 1869 and was therefore not entitled to the assistance of the revenue officers of Government to recover the cess provided by that section for superior holders as against tenants and occupants although he might have paid the local cess due on the land in the plaintiffs' possession and that consequently the aid of the mamlatdar was illegally and improperly given to the defendant for the recovery of the amount from the plaintiffs. Held also that the defendant was not a person

In December 1886 the Municipal Commissioner pursuant to s. 165 of the Bombay Municipal Acts III of 1872 and IV of 1878 required the trustees of the mosque to set back the building on the said three sides for the purpose of improving the public streets. It was contended that the amount of compensation to be paid to the trustees was to be measured by the loss of rent which they would have received for certain rooms which they had proposed to build on the land in question. Held that the words of s. 163 of the Municipal Acts III of 1872 and IV of 1878 were intended to ensure compensation to the owner for every sort of damage and not to restrict it to compensation for such damage as he might by his own arrangement reduce it to. Compensation becomes due under this section as soon as the Corporation takes possession which is when the owner begins to build and there being no words in the section to show a contrary intention the compensation must be assessed according to the state of things then existing and not upon the basis of what the owner may have it in his power to do towards diminishing the damage which would otherwise result to him. BOMBAY LAND REVENUE ACT (V OF 1879)—cont. nued

§ 182 of the Land Revenue Code the plaintiffs were precluded from raising this point. Held that though § 182 forbade the Court to entertain a suit against defendants Nos 2 and 3 on the ground that they had bought the land for defendant No 1 it did not debar it from entertaining a suit against them on the ground that subsequently to the sale they were holders, on behalf of defendant No 1 or against defendant No 1 on the ground that he was himself really in possession through defendants Nos 2 and 3 as his agents or tenants. The same principle of equity which would make defendant No 1 a trustee for the mortgagors if he had bought in his own name would make defendants Nos 2 and 3 trustees for them if subsequently to the sale they held the land on behalf of defendant No 1 and would also make defendant No 1 himself a trustee if subsequently to the sale the property came into his possession as beneficially entitled thereto owing to an agreement between him and the certified purchasers. GENU : SAKHARAM

1 ——— § 216—*Suit by an inamdar against a khot to recover balance of land revenue—Survey made by the British Government—Change in rate of assessment—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Village partially alienated?—In a suit by an inamdar of a village against a khot to recover rent in kind (according to the market rates at the time of payment) the defendant (khot) contended that he was only liable to pay cash assessment as fixed by the survey made by the British Government which was at a lower rate than he had previously paid, and that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit under the Land Revenue Code 1879 § 216 sub cl (b). Held that the payment which the khot had been making to the inamdar before the time of the British survey was in the nature of assessment or ratna by Government, but held also that the plaintiffs were entitled to the old assessment as claimed by them. It was plain that in cases falling within sub cl. (a) and (c) of § 16 of the Land Revenue Code the inamdar's interest in the assessment would not be affected by the application of Chs VIII to X of that Act. He would still get the old assessment in the alienated lands in the village in the former case and the same amount of assessment in the latter and the same must have been the intention in cases contemplated by sub cl (b).*

1 ——— § 8—*Local cess—Landlord and tenant—Fraudulent collection of cess—The plaintiffs sued to recover back from the defendant the amount levied by him as local cess on certain waste lands belonging to the plaintiffs the defendant claiming to be the superior holder of the village in which the lands were situated. The amount was levied by the defendant through the assistance of the mamlatdar under Bombay Act III of 1869 § 8. The defendant contended that in consequence of a demand from Government he had paid local cess on the whole of his taluk including the village in which the plaintiffs' lands were situated, and was therefore entitled under ss 69 and 70 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872) to recover from them the amount which he had paid to Government as a portion of the cess which rateably fell upon their lands. It was found that the defendant was not the proprietor of the lands held by the plaintiffs and that the relation of landlord and tenant did not exist between them; also that defendant paid local cess for the plaintiffs' lands fraudulently and with the intention of thereby making evidence of title to their lands knowing that he had no lawful or just claim to them. Held that the defendant was not the superior holder of the lands within § 8 of Bombay Act III of 1869 and was therefore not entitled to the assistance of the revenue officers of Government to recover the cess provided by that section for superior holders as against tenants and occupants although he might have paid the local cess due on the land in the plaintiffs' possession; and that consequently the aid of the mamlatdar was illegally and improperly given to the defendant for the recovery of the amount from the plaintiffs. Held also that the defendant was not a person*

— s 163—Compensation—Frontage land—Fifteen per cent addition to compensation not allowed—A certain mosque in Bombay was abutted on the north west and east by public streets. In December 1866 the Municipal Commissioner pursuant to s 163 of the Bombay Municipal Acts III of 1872 and IV of 1876 required the trustees of the mosque to set back the building on the said three sides for the purpose of improving the public streets. It was contended that the amount of compensation to be paid to the trustees was to be measured by the loss of rent which they would have received for certain rooms which they had proposed to build on the land in question. Held that the words of s 163 of the Municipal Acts III of 1872 and IV of 1876 were intended to ensure compensation to the owner for every sort of damage and not to restrict it to compensation for such damage as he might by his own arrangement reduce it to. Compensation becomes due under the section as soon as the Corporation takes possession which is when the owner begins to build and there being no words in the section to show a contrary intention the compensation must be assessed according to the state of things then existing and not upon the basis of what the owner may have it in his power to do towards diminishing the damage which would otherwise result to him. Held also that in cases of compensation granted under s 163 of the Municipal Acts III of 1872 and IV of 1876 the addition of 15 per cent cannot be allowed. MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONER FOR THE CITY OF BOMBAY v PATEL HAJI MAHOMED JANU

action against the Municipal Commissioner. The question is one projected to the extent of one foot or two inches. The width of the road in front of the buildings was about forty feet and the length of the same varied from seven feet to nine feet two inches in the roadway. At the time this suit was filed there was an open drain or gutter one foot three inches wide running along, by the side of the plaintiff's building and between them and the road. That gutter was ever subsequently to the filing of this suit but before the hearing, was covered over and so much additional width was thereby added to the road. It is held that the caves constituted an obstruction within the meaning of the above section and that the Municipal Commissioner was entitled to remove them. Under the above section the question to be decided is not whether there is a real practical inconvenience to the public traffic in the street. Those are not the words used in the section and if that was the intention of the Legislature it would have been expressed. Where an Act gives power to a municipality or corporation for the public benefit a moral construction should be given to it than where the power is to be exercised merely for private gain or for advantage. *OLLIVANT v. (1) Except with the special sanction of the Commissioner no claim for drawback shall be entertained unless submitted to the Commissioner not less than thirty days before the commencement of the half year to which such claim relates. (2) Drawback of the one-fifth part of the general tax shall be sanctioned by the Commissioner in cases falling within either of the following classes and in no others—(a) Chawls or buildings let out for hire in single rooms either as lodging or godowns for the storage of goods. (b) Properties which in the opinion of the Commissioner are usually or frequently vacant either wholly or partially. (3) No sanction for drawback shall extend or apply to any floor on which trade or manufacture is carried on or any goods are sold. The Commissioner having refused to sanction a drawback of the tax leviable on certain properties of the plaintiff on the ground that they did not fall within the terms of the above conditions, the plaintiff filed this suit. It was contended on his behalf that the second and third of the above conditions were bad and that the Standing Committee could not by so called general conditions limit or curtail the right given to tax payers by s. 158. Held that the conditions prescribed by the Standing Committee were not ultra vires and that the Commissioner was justified in refusing the drawback. *GOVABHENDAS GOUDKAS TEJAL v. 2. — and ss 504 and 527—Land taken by the municipality for street improvement—Compensation for land taken—Dispute as to amount of compensation—Notice of suit—Limitation—In 1891 the municipal authorities of Bombay gave notice to the plaintiffs under s. 299 of Bombay Act III of 1888 that they required 23 30 square yards of the plaintiff's land for street improvement. On the 14th December 1891 the plaintiff gave possession of the land to the municipality and on 27th January 1892 claimed Rs60 per square yard as compensation. By letter dated 23rd February 1892 the Municipal Commissioner (without prejudice) offered Rs50 per square yard as compensation and stated that on the plaintiff producing the title-deeds and papers to establish his title the necessary documents in connection with the payment would be prepared. Nothing further took place in the matter until the 14th February 1894 on which date the plaintiff wrote a letter to the Municipal Commissioner in which without mentioning any sum he requested the payment of the amount which might be due to him as compensation for his land taken by the municipality. The Commissioner refused to pay the compensation contending that the plaintiff's claim was time-barred. The plaintiff thereupon brought this suit claiming Rs105 (being at the rate of Rs50 per square yard) as compensation for the land taken by the defendant or in the alternative for that sum as damages for the breach of contract to pay purchase money for the land. The defendant pleaded (1) that notice under s 527 of the Municipal Act (Bombay Act III of 1888) was necessary before suit filed and (2) that the suit was barred by limitation. The Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court found for the defendant with costs and dismissed the suit contingent on the opinion of the High Court. On a case stated for the High Court—Held (1) that notice under s 527 of Bombay Act III of 1888 was not necessary that section not being applicable to suits brought to enforce payment of compensation under s 301 of the Act; (2) that the suit was not barred by limitation. PER FARREN J.—A suit against the municipality of Bombay for compensation for land acquired by the municipality under s 299 of Bombay Act III of 1888 is not an action of tort or quasi tort but a simple action for the price of land which the terms of s. 301 of the Act impose upon the Commissioner to pay. The obligation to pay that price is of the same nature (1) whether the owner assents to the valuation of the land placed upon it by the Commissioner; (2) whether the value is determined by the Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court or (3) whether it is left undetermined. S 527 does not apply to any of these three cases. In all of them the obligation to pay is imposed by s. 301 and does not arise from the manner in which the amount of the price to be paid is arrived at. S. 504 prescribes the only mode in which in case of dispute the value of the land can be determined. If the owner of land disputes the Commissioner's valuation he must apply to the Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court within a year. If he does not do so the result is that he loses the power of effectually disputing the Commissioner's valuation but does not lose his right to the amount of the valuation. The owner of land has a remedy independent of the provision of s. 304. That section only deals with cases where there is a dispute as to the value of the land and leaves untouched those cases where there is no such dispute but where the Commissioner for some reason declines to pay. In such cases the owner is left to his ordinary remedy no special mode of procedure being prescribed. Cases in which there has been a dispute but in which the owner abandons his claim to dispute the valuation of the Commissioner fall within the latter category. MANERKAL MOTILAL v MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONER OF BOMBAY

Meaning of—One R was served with a notice under a 353 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act (Bombay Act III of 1888) requiring him to reduce the height of a building which he had erected. The building was completed in June 1893 and the notice was issued on 13th January 1894. R was prosecuted for not complying with this notice. He contended that the notice was time barred as it had not been given within three months after the completion of the building. In answer to this plea it was urged on behalf of the municipality that the building could not be said to have been completed, unless and until such accommodations as privies and cesspools had been executed in accordance with the requirements of the Health Department and that therefore the notice was within time. Held that the notice was time barred. The word completion in s. 353 of Bombay Act III of 1888 must be taken in its ordinary sense and the Court cannot read into the section in accordance with sanitary regulations or sanitary officers' opinions. In re RAGHUNATH MAKUND

Magistrate under s. 471 of the Municipal Act (Bombay Act III of 1888). Held reversing the conviction and sentence that the notice was illegal. The words used in s. 381 are 'low ground' which is not the same as low lying ground. And though the section gives power to the Commissioner to require the owner of low ground to cleanse and fill up the same it does not permit him to issue an order that an indefinite extent of low lying ground shall be filled up much less that it shall be filled up to some particular level or filled up with sweet earth or that it shall be sloped in a particular direction. MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONER OF BOMBAY v HARI DWARAKJI

The plaintiffs in this suit complained that in January 1891 the defendant by his servants dug a trench 8 feet deep along the whole length of the gully for the purpose of laying a drain pipe and that this work was done so negligently that the plaintiffs' house was injured and became in such a dangerous condition that it had to be pulled down. The plaintiffs claimed Rs3996 as damages. The defendant denied the negligence and alleged that the work was not done by his servants or agents but by a contractor. For the defendant it was contended that the notice of action given by the plaintiffs under s. 527 of the Bombay Municipal Act (III of 1888) was insufficient. The notice stated that one S L a contractor under you and as such hon. your agent and servant excavated a trench etc. It was argued that this was not a good notice as it only alleged s

2. — Limitation—Limitation Act 1877 art 120—Attachment for arrears of revenue—Suit for declaration that order of forfeiture was illegal—Bombay District Police Act (Bombay Act VII of 1867) s 4—Punitive police post—The plaintiff was the talukhdar of the village of K. At the end of the revenue year 1878 79 s on 31st July 1879 the plaintiff was a defaulter in respect of the assessment payable to Government for that year. In November 1879 a punitive police post was established in the village under a 16 of Bombay Act VII of 1867 on account of the turbulent conduct of the inhabitants. Between January and April 1880 the Collector sold certain property of the talukhdar for arrears of revenue and realized by the sale a sum of Rs 1608 12 S. This sum was more than sufficient to cover the arrears due for 1878 79 as well as the assessment payable for 1879 80 but the Collector after deducting the arrears due for 1878 79 applied the rest of the sale proceeds towards the payment of the cost of the punitive post. The assessment for 1879 80 having remained unpaid the village was attached on the 1st of July 1880 under s 159 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Act V of 1879). The attachment was followed on the 6th January 1881 by an order declaring the village to be forfeited under s 153 of the Code. In 1886 the plaintiff filed the present suit against Government to recover possession of the village and for a declaration that the order of forfeiture was illegal and ultra vires. The defendant pleaded in alibi that the suit was barred under s 4 l (c) of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1878) that it was also barred by limitation. Held (a) that the plaintiff's claim for a declaration that the order of forfeiture was illegal was not barred by s 4 l (c) of Act X of 1878 as the order of forfeiture could not be considered a proceeding for the realization of land revenue. The proceeding authorized by law for the realization of land revenue is the attachment of the village having been taken no other proceeding could legally be taken as against the plaintiff till the expiration of twelve years from the date of the attachment. Held further that the claim for a declaration that the order of forfeiture was illegal was not time barred as it was governed by art 120 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). 3. — Service nam land—Suit for a declaration of title to trees thereon and for damages—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Hereditary Offices Act (Bombay Act III of 1874)—Hereditary officer—Officiator—The plaintiff complained that he was prevented from cutting the trees growing on land situate in the village of Tungarh belonging to certain persons who had sold the trees to him. He claimed damages and an injunction restraining the Collector from interfering with him. The defendant pleaded that the trees did not belong to the plaintiff's vendors being on service nam land. The lower Court dismissed the plaintiff's claim holding that the land on which the trees were growing was service nam land and that the plaintiff's vendors had no title to them. On appeal the High Court on the evidence upheld the lower Court's decision that the land was nam service land but held that it did not necessarily follow that the trees upon it were the property of Government and not of the vatandars. The latter might be the owners of the trees subject to a condition. The case was therefore remanded to the District Court for a finding on an issue as to whether the holders of service nam lands had a title to the trees on the lands, and if so whether they had the right to cut down trees without the permission of the Collector. On this finding the District Judge found in the affirmative. The case then came again before the High Court when a preliminary objection was taken that under s 4 of Act X of 1878 the Court had no jurisdiction. Held that it having been decided that land in question was service nam land the Court under s 4, cl (a) of Bombay Act X of 1878 ceased to have jurisdiction over the plaintiff's claim against Government in respect of the trees growing thereon as such claims related to property appertaining to the office of a village officer. The khot's rights as landlord if they can be established cannot be prejudiced by any proceeding under the Survey Act there being nothing in that Act or the rules framed under it which affects the rights of subjects of the Government inter se. The utmost benefit which the tenants can derive as against their landlord from being entered as occupants under the Act is a right to claim a deduction of the amount of assessment paid by them direct to the Government. If they deny his title he can sue them either to establish his title and recover the full rent due to him under his contract with them or to eject them as holding possession of his lands by a title which they themselves repudiate. BAM C SURVEY COMMISSIONER AND THE COLLECTOR OF BAYAGIRI

2 — Boundary dispute—

Boundary dispute as used in the Survey Act (Bombay Act I of 1865) means a contention between two neighbouring land proprietors as to where a boundary line or boundary marks has or have been fixed by the survey officers. After the functions of the latter officers have ceased in a district the Collector acting under Act III of 1846 is the proper officer to determine such a dispute and fix the proper position of the boundary marks. But where a landholder claims to recover from a neighbouring holder land alleged to have been usurped or encroached upon by the latter the person aggrieved must file his plaint in Court (which in the case of a claim for more possession may be the Court of the Mamlatdar or the ordinary Civil Court) where the determination of the Collector as to the proper position of the boundary line or marks (although it of itself confers or withdraws no right of possession) affords valuable evidence in adjudicating upon the rights of the parties. But Government can exercise this power only under specific rules. The holder of a coconut cart in Bandora in the island of Salsette in the Thana district paying an annual assessment of Rs. 30 to Government built a bungalow upon it without the permission of the Collector who under the rule purporting to have been issued by the Government of Bombay on the 1st February 1869 in accordance with the provisions of s. 35 of Bombay Act I of 1865 demanded from him a fine equal to sixty times the assessment and on the plaintiff's failure to pay the fine summarily attached the land under the provisions of s. 48 of that Act. Held first that the Government of Bombay had no authority to make the rule of 1st February 1869 and that a fine of the Survey Act prevailing no penalty for building without the Collector's permission as the attachment was illegal. Secondly that the expression "Government land" in cl. 1 and b. 1 relating to Government in Bombay Act I of 1865 means land of which Government is the proprietor and does not apply to land in which the proprietary right in the soil vests in a private individual whether or not it be subject to the payment of assessment to Government. Quere—Whether the amount of the

to pay assessment under Bombay Act IV of 1868. VIJAYALAKSHMIBASS KRUSHALDAS & COLLECTOR OF AHMEDABAD 10 Bom 190

2. s 5 cl (1), para (2)—Bombay Act I of 1865—Building sites—Exemption from payment of Government land revenue—On the 6th April 1836 the Collector of Ahmedabad deeded by lease a building site in that city to the plaintiff's grandfather for a term of ninety nine years. No rent was reserved by the lease as then presently payable but it contained a provision that the lessee should pay in respect of the said site such land tax as might fall upon all. The lease and his heirs held the site from the date of the lease down to 1874 without paying or being required to pay any land tax or rent to Government. In 1878 however Government levied from the plaintiff Rs 2110 as land revenue assessed on the site. Plaintiff thereupon sued the Collector of Ahmedabad for recovery of the amount on the ground that the assessment and levy were illegal. Held that the plaintiff's building site was exempted from liability to assessment by Bombay Act IV of 1868 s 5 cl 1 para 2 which enactment not applied to the case. Held also that this exemption was not to continue beyond the term for which the site had been deeded by Government but that on its expiration it will be open to Government to resume the land altogether or to let it in such terms as to assessment or otherwise as might be the pleasure of Government. The origin of Bombay Act IV of 1868 mentioned and the provisions contained in it relating to exemption from the payment of assessment referred to and discussed. s 7—Lease to levy tolls—Lessee Right of to admit partners—Keeping two sets of accounts—False accounts kept to deceive Government—A lessee from Government of the right to levy tolls admitted into partnership with him the plaintiff and two others. One of the conditions attached to the lease prohibited an admission. The plaintiff having brought a suit for his share of the profits realised in the transaction the Judge dismissed the suit on the ground that the partnership was illegal being of opinion that such letting and admitting a partner were identical. Held reversing the decree that the partnership was not illegal. Where in such a partnership two sets of accounts were kept one true and the other false held that such practice however reprehensible was not illegal under s 7 of the Tolls Act (Bombay Act III of 1875) and did not disentitle the plaintiff to show as between himself and his partners what was the actual profit of the concern. It was found that the kashnats stipulated that during their term the rent should year after year and instalment by instalment be credited in payment of the bond debt and that at the end of the term of the ijara accounts should be settled and the balance paid neither party being at liberty to put an end to the lease. Held that till the termination of the lease plaintiff could not sue on the bond his right of suit having been suspended during the continuance of the ijara and dur ijara the stipulations in which qualified the stipulation in the bond for absolute payment at the end of a specified period. DYA CHAND OSWAL v MOOKTEEDA DABEE

While in the enjoyment of the estate the bond holders brought a suit against him to realize the debt and obtained a decree. Under the decree the obligee sought to sell the property which by the time of the execution had come into the hands of R (a great nephew of J) who ended and eventually succeeded in having J's adoption declared void. R then sued to set aside so far as it affected him the decree for the sale of the property and in this suit also he eventually succeeded. Thereupon the original bond holders then brought a suit against R to recover the money due on the bond. Held that plaintiff's right of suit first arose not from the last decree in favour of R but from the time when the debt became due under the terms of the bond. RAJAKISIO SING v HIRU SOON DUREE CHOWDRAI

Subsequently they agreed with the rightful heir to compromise the suit which compromise however was never acted upon partly owing it was allowed to the subsequent conduct of the heir. At the date of the compromise the heir who had just attained his majority and was without proper counsel or assistance and acted under threats from the plaintiff a powerful and wealthy banker that he would carry on the litigation against him per se act nefas was induced contrary to his own judgment and conscience and without any evidence that the sum claimed was really due to the plaintiff to execute a bond in his favour whereby he bound himself to pay a large sum of money claimed by the plaintiff as being due to him. Held that the plaintiff in his part agreement that he would treat such payment as a satisfaction of his claim against the widows could mean only that he would retain the securities which he held in them. In a suit brought by the plaintiff against the heir to enforce the bond suit was allowed. Held that the bond was wholly void and fraudulent as against the defendant and that as there was no privity of contract between the plaintiff and defendant independently of the bond, it could not stand as a security for anything which might be justly due to him from the widows. Demise—the transaction even if valid did not amount to a novation for the plaintiff never abandoned his claim against the widows but only agreed to abandon his remedy against them in case he obtained satisfaction of his claim from the heir. CHANDABAI CHETTY v PATEL KESAVA MOHAMMED POCMANI NAKAR

The latter agreed to release the tenants from payment of rent to himself and the tenants (who were parties to the arrangement) agreed to pay their rents to the creditor. No mutation of names in favour of the creditor was effected in the revenue registers. The creditor brought a suit against the debtor to recover the principal and interest agreed to be paid under the bond alleging that he had never received any rents under the jamg. Held that the effect of the jamg or mutation was that the plaintiff's right to recover interest from the defendant was gone and the plaintiff was therefore not entitled to maintain his suit against the defendant in respect of the interest which was payable under the bond. ACRU SINGH v AGARWALA DANA

No instalment was paid and when the suit was brought defendant pleaded that the suit was barred as three years had elapsed from the date on which the last instalment became due. Held that the usual clause that on failure to pay one instalment the whole amount shall be payable on demand gave a mere election to plaintiff of converting the obligation into a different one that that election was never exercised and that the document continued to be one securing the payment of a debt by instalments as to all of which the action had long been barred; and that it was unnecessary therefore to consider whether in the present case, on demand must not be construed according to its meaning at the period at which the words were written EATHAMAKALA SUBBAMMAH v RAOHIAH

33 — Waiver of default—Limitation Acts 1871 and 1877 art 75—Civil Procedure Code 1859 s 194 1877 s 210—Power of Court to alter contract between the parties—Where a bond is payable by instalments and expressly stipulates for the payment of the whole debt on failure in the payment of any instalment the law of limitation runs in the whole amount of the bond against the obligee from the day on which the obligor first makes default in the payment of any instalment unless the obligee waives the default and afterwards from the day on which any fresh default is made in respect of which there is no waiver. The obligee may waive the default under Acts IX of 1871 and XI of 1877 sch. II art 75 but the Courts have no authority to compel him to waive it. Neither Act VIII of 1859 s 194 nor Act X of 1877 s 210 confers any authority on the Courts to relieve a contracting party from such an express stipulation in a bond payable by instalments as to the consequence of default in punctual payment of the instalments. A debt being presently due an agreement to pay it by instalments with a stipulation that in default the creditor may demand immediate payment of the whole balance due with interest is not to be relieved against in equity. Such a stipulation is not in the nature of a penalty inasmuch as its object is only to secure payment in a particular manner. The defendant extended to the plaintiff a bond payable by instalments and expressly stipulating for the payment of the whole amount on failure to pay any instalment on the day fixed. He paid the first instalment but made default in paying the second which fell due in the 3rd August 18 8. On the 20th August plaintiff sued to recover the whole balance due on the bond. Defendant admitted the bond but pleaded tender of the amount of the second instalment six months after the due date and prayed for payment by instalments with at any interest. The first Court passed a decree in the plaintiff's favour for the amount claimed with costs but ordered defendant to pay Rs 100 and the costs at once and the balance by yearly instalments of Rs 100 each with interest at six per cent till payment. The District Judge on appeal affirmed the decree with a slight variation as to interest which he directed the defendant to pay on overdue instalments only. Held by the High Court on second appeal that neither of the lower Courts had jurisdiction with it the consent of the parties to substitute for the contract made by them terms which the Court preferred. Held also that plaintiff was entitled to sue on the day after that on which the default was made—viz on the day after that fixed for the payment of the instalment—and that the subordinate Judge had no power to rule the contrary. RAOHO GONDIA v. RANJIT v. DIFCHAND I L R 4 Bom 96

34 — Waiver of default—Limitation Act 1871 art 75—Where a bond is payable by instalments with a provision that upon default of payment of any instalment the whole sum then unpaid shall become due with interest the creditor though he can elect but once to enforce this provision may waive the benefit of it not only on the first but on any subsequent default. SATRACHERA v. SEYARAMA I L R 3 Mad, 61

35 — Default in payment—Expiration of time for specific enforcement of contract—A bond for money provided that on failure on the part of the obligor to pay interest as agreed in the bond and within a certain period from the date of the bond the obligee might sue for possession of the immovable property mortgaged in the bond. Default was made in the payment of interest as agreed but the obligee deferred bringing a suit for possession of the mortgaged property so long that the time mentioned in the bond expired before he could obtain a decree. Held that under these circumstances a decree for possession of the property could not be granted to him. BALWANT SINGH v. GUMANT PAM [I L R, 6 All 591]

36 — Suit on bond—Limitation—Burden of proof—Indorsement of payment of instalments—Where a defendant sets up the defence of limitation he must plead it and show that the claim is barred. If when the plaintiff has proved his case the facts show that the cause of action accrued at a date earlier than the period of limitation and the plea of limitation has been set up by the defendant the latter will be entitled to take advantage of the plaintiff's evidence that the claim is barred and to have judgment given in his favour. The obligee of a bond by which obligor covenanted to pay the sum of Rs 600 by annual instalments of Rs 200 and in which it was also agreed that payments of the instalments should be made on the bond brought a suit against the obligor alleging default in payment and claiming to recover the amount of the bond. He gave credit for payment of the instalments for seven years and alleged that his cause of action arose upon

1. ——— Demarcation of boundary line—Beng Reg X of 1822 ss 2 3 and 8—Dut for declaration of boundary contrary to survey award—Proprietary rights Exercise of—Presumption of ownership—Beng Reg XI of 1825 s 6 cl 12—At the time of the Permanent Settlement the northern boundary of the pergunnah Shooosung (situated in Mymensingh at the foot of the Garo hills) was not defined by Government. From before that time and certainly for more than sixty years the zamindars of the pergunnah have always but in an irregular and uncertain manner exercised certain rights in the Garro hills and over the inhabitants who are half savages such as hunting elephants cutting wood levying cesses on the inhabitants when possible (including in some parts of the hills a tribute of one rupee per but) and exacting occasional services from them. Government held a survey and declared the northern boundary of pergunnah Shooosung to be a line running along the base of the Garro hills. The zamindar thereupon sued to set aside the survey and for a declaration that the northern boundary lay many miles further north and that the intermediate hill country belonged to him as forming part of pergunnah Shooosung. Held (by STON HARR J) that the acts of possession proved by the zamindar were sufficient under the circumstances to prove his proprietary right in the disputed tract and for the passing of a decree in his favour. Held (by MACPHERSON J) that they were not sufficient to entitle him to a decree being acts of mere easement independent of possession. Held by PEACOCK C J JACKSON and PHEAR JJ on appeal under the Letters Patent—The rules laid down by Regulation X of 1802 were intended to take effect only within the tract of country described in s 2 within which the administration of civil and criminal justice etc was by s 3 declared to be vested in an officer to be designated the Civil Commissioner of the north eastern parts of Rungpre. The proviso in s 8 was not intended to give substantive powers to the Governor General in Council in respect of other tracts of the country and cl 2 of the same section did not intend to take away the power of any Civil Court except within that tract. The proviso contained in s 8 does not authorize Government to separate any part of the Garro country beyond that described in s 2 from the district and from the general Regulations but merely directs the separation of such tracts from the estates of the neighbouring zamindars and the discontinuance of the collection of cesses by the zamindars from the Garrows. By cl 2 s 8 the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts is taken away only in respect of acts of the above description done under the authority of the Government but that does not take away the right of a zamindar to contest a survey award drawing a line which deprives him of part of his zamindari and his permanently settled estate. Where a Rajah had exercised rights and collected dues on certain hills and in forests north of an alleged line and it was the unanimous opinion of all the revenue authorities that the forests were within his permanently settled estate the assumption by them and Government of such line as the boundary of the Rajah's estate throwing upon him the onus of proving his claim to any portion north of that line was held to be arbitrary and anomalous. If such proceedings were adopted under cl 1 s 6 Regulation IX of 1825 they were wholly irregular and the irregularity can be no ground for excluding the Court from examining them. When a man is found exercising on both sides of a boundary line with objection rights of ownership or proprietary rights, and when it is not shown that there is any other owner of the soil or that any objection to the exercise of such rights was made during a long course of years his acts cannot be treated as the encroachments of a wrong doer. Per PHEAR J—Where acts of user illustrate all the modes of enjoyment of which a disputed property can reasonably be expected to be capable it can be rightly attributed to proprietary right of the tract upon which they were exercised.

The Priy Council will never interfere with the finding of an Indian Court upon a question of boundary unless they are clearly satisfied that there has been some plain miscarriage in the conduct or decision of the case upon which they can put their hands and make it the ground for an order reversing or varying the decree

L— Position and rights of broker—Agent—Right to commission—Claim of brokerage from both vendor and rentee—Vendor and purchaser—A broker is entitled to his commission if the relation of buyer and seller is really brought about by him although the actual sale has not been effected by him. A broker is entitled to his commission where he has induced in the vendor the contracting mind the willingness to open negotiations upon a reasonable basis even though a change or modification of the terms of the contract is made by the buyer and seller without his intervention. A broker sued the Municipality of Bombay for brokerage in respect of lands purchased by them. Held that if during the time that the broker was negotiating with the vendor the latter was induced to consent to the sale the broker was entitled to his brokerage. It was not material to inquire what operated upon the mind of the vendor and whether it was the advice of friends or the knowledge that his land would be acquired compulsorily or the persuasions of the broker. It was sufficient to support the broker's claim if the vendor's acceptance of the term was brought about during his intervention and the fact that the Municipality Commissioner stepped in at the last moment and himself actually struck the bargain did not deprive the broker of his brokerage. Primarily a broker is merely the agent of the party by whom he is originally employed. To make the other side liable to pay him brokerage it must be

2— Suit for brokerage—Contract effected by broker not carried out by purchaser—Quantum meruit—The plaintiff was employed by the defendants as broker to sell certain property. The defendants' letter dated 3rd January 1890 engaging him as broker stated as follows— "It is understood that the brokerage will be paid on receipt by us of the money and that this transaction is to be completed within a fortnight from date. The plaintiff negotiated with one Pestinji Patel and his brother who eventually agreed to become purchasers but stipulated for four or five months within which to pay the purchase money. On the 1st February 1890 the defendants through the plaintiff finally closed the contract with the purchasers one of the terms of which provided that Rs 10,000 should be paid immediately as earnest and the balance (Rs 1,000) of the purchase money to be paid within four months. The purchasers were however unable to pay the Rs 10,000 earnest money and they handed to the defendants three Bank of Bombay shares as earnest for the performance of the contract. One of the purchasers shortly afterwards died. The defendants apparently abandoned the idea of enforcing the contract, and at the end of the year they returned to the purchaser's family two of the Bank of Bombay shares having (as they alleged) sold the third to defray the expenses which they had incurred in connection with the transaction. The plaintiff sued to recover Rs 1,000 as brokerage from the defendants. Held that under the circumstances the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the Rs 1,000 but only to a quantum meruit there being no previous agreement as to the time when the brokerage was to be paid; and that he was only entitled to a percentage (5 per cent) on the value of the shares which had been actually received by the defendants. BUILDING LEASE.

— Party wall Liability for cost of—
Agreement to refer disputes to a third person—
Effect of such agreement on the right to sue—Award of such third person essential to right of action—Surveyor's certificate—Limitation—Covenant—Right to sue—Stranger to consideration—Landlord and tenant—The plaintiff sued to recover from the defendant half the cost of a party wall. The plaintiff and defendants were lessees of adjoining pieces of land under agreements made between them respectively and the Secretary of State for India in Council as lessor. The terms and conditions of the two agreements were the same. By these agreements the plaintiff and defendant respectively agreed to build houses upon the said pieces of land in the manner therein specified, and the agreements contained the two following clauses—(1) "The buildings to be continuous with party walls common to both adjoining houses." (2) "All disputes regarding the cost and maintenance of party walls to be decided by the Government surveyor whose decision shall be binding on both parties." In pursuance of the said agreements the plaintiff and defendants respectively erected buildings on the said pieces of land. The plaintiff caused the northern wall of his building to be built as a party wall and it was used by the defendants as the southern wall of the building erected by them. The defendants paid the builder who was employed by the plaintiff a sum of Rs 700 on account of the cost of erecting the party wall but the rest of the cost was defrayed by the plaintiff. The party wall was completed in November 1871 but in consequence of disputes which arose between the plaintiff and the building contractor the sum payable to the latter was not ascertained for some years. In March 1879 the plaintiff caused the party wall to be measured by a surveyor and on the 13th June 1879 demanded from the defendants payment of half the cost. The defendants never failing to pay the sum demanded the plaintiff after notice the defendants caused the cost of the said party wall to be ascertained by the Government surveyor who by a certificate dated the 2nd February 1880 certified that the share of the cost to be borne by the defendants for the said party wall was Rs 221. The plaintiff in this action sought to recover the sum from the defendants under the Rs 700 which as above stated the defendants had already paid and for which the plaintiff gave them credit. The defendants in their written statement alleged that the party wall had been partly built with materials supplied by them and that in the year 1870 they had adjusted accounts with the plaintiff in respect of the said materials and the said party wall and it was then agreed that the sum of Rs 700 paid by the defendants should be treated as a final settlement. They also alleged that the plaintiff had settled disputes with the building contractors and had only paid them three annas in the rupee in the amount of their claim in full satisfaction. The defendants pleaded that they ought not to be charged with more than their due proportion of such reduced amount. It was further contended for the defendants that their obligation to pay half the cost of the party wall existed independently of the arrangement between them and the plaintiff to refer the matter to the Government surveyor that this latter covenant was only collateral and did not interfere with the plaintiff's right to sue the defendants for their half share of the cost that the plaintiff's cause of action in this respect arose on the 13th October 1878 when the contractor's claim was finally settled and that this suit not having been brought for more than three years after that date it was barred by limitation. It was held that the suit was not barred. There was no right of action independently of the valuation and award of the Government surveyor. There was no separate covenant to pay compensation to which the covenant for reference to the Government surveyor could be collateral. The rights of the parties were defined by the contracts and under those each lessee might have the benefit of a party wall on such terms and on others as he might submit to. Payment of a share of the cost was not one of these terms except in so far as each lessee if a dispute arose was bound by the decision of a Government surveyor. That decision was not final arriving to give greater explicitness to a matter already fully substantiated. It was essential to the suit itself and until it was made no cause of action for the moiety of the cost arose. Where an lessee granted by one lessor to several lessees taking sites for buildings intended to be contiguous and to form one block or group in mutual relation there is a common covenant which is an inducement to the lessee to take the lease and which he must know is equally an inducement to his neighbour to take his lease neither can be called a stranger to the consideration. Each may be regarded as an equitable assignee of the covenants which the lessor made for his benefit as lessee. Each consequently has an equitable right to enforce against the other the obligation stipulated for in his interest and serving as a part of his inducement (as the other knew) to the contract. BUILDING ERECTED BY ADJOINING OWNERS

Liability of adjoining owners for costs of party wall—Agreements for building—Decision of Government surveyor made final in case of dispute—Right of suit—Right of one owner over portion of party wall not used or built on by the other—Under separate agreements made by them respectively with Government the plaintiff and defendant held adjoining plots of land for building. The agreements contained the same terms and stipulations among which were the following—(a) The buildings to be continuous with party walls common to both adjoining houses. (b) All disputes regarding the erect and maintenance of party walls to be decided by the Government surveyor whose decision shall be binding on both parties. The plaintiff employed a contractor to erect a house upon his plot of land. The house was completed in 1870 the north wall of which was built as a party wall in pursuance of the conditions contained in the agreement with Government. Disputes subsequently arose between the plaintiff and his contractor which were not settled until the 26th August 1878 on which date the plaintiff paid the contractor a sum of Rs 20 51 -4-11 which included the cost of the party wall. After the plaintiff's house had been completed the defendant built his house upon the adjoining land and in so doing he used a large portion of the party wall as the southern wall of his house. He paid the plaintiff half the cost of the portion so used by him. The rear portion of the said wall was not used by the defendant as his house did not extend so far to the rear as the house of the plaintiff. The plaintiff demanded payment of half the cost of that part of the wall not used by the defendants but the defendants refused to pay. The plaintiff then claimed that part of the wall as his own property and proceeded to open windows in it. The defendants objected. The plaintiff subsequently filed the present suit claiming from the defendants payment of half the cost of the said portion of the wall not used by the defendants and in the event of such payment not being awarded he prayed for a declaration that he was the sole owner of the said portion of the wall and for an injunction restraining the defendants from disturbing him in the enjoyment thereof. The plaintiff (Khatay Luddha) of the first defendant was originally made the second defendant in the suit. He however disclaimed all interest in the premises and it appeared that in 1876 the first defendant had sold the property to him (Khatay Luddha) who in 1879 sold it to his wife. The first defendant's wife Khasrabai accordingly was made the second

defendant in the place of Khatay Luddha. Both the defendants pleaded limitation and denied their liability to pay a part of the cost of that part of the wall which they did not use. The first defendant further alleged that he had paid the whole cost of the foundation and other parts of the said wall and claimed to set off this payment against the claim of the plaintiff. At the original hearing SCOTT J held (1) that the part of the wall in dispute although not used by the defendants was a party wall having regard to the terms of the agreement under which the said wall was erected (2) that Khasrabai was liable equally with the first defendant to pay a part of the wall having purchased the property subject to the terms of the original agreement of which she presumably had notice (3) that the suit was not barred but that there was no right of action for the cost of the party wall independently of the award of the Government surveyor in whose decision lay all disputes as to such cost and that until his decision was given there was no complete cause of action. SCOTT J accordingly on 11th December 1882 decreed that the defendants were severally liable to pay the half of whatever sum the Government surveyor might certify to be due for the cost of the disputed part of the said wall and that the defendants were entitled to set off in the calculation of what was due from them the cost of any work or materials which the Government surveyor might find had been contributed by the first defendant. The case was thereupon adjourned in order that the certificate of the Government surveyor might be obtained. The Government surveyor subsequently gave his certificate as to the cost of the unused portion of the said wall but stated that on the evidence before him he was unable to decide as to the ownership of the foundations etc. of the wall. The case came on again before SCOTT J who decided to take evidence on the points left undetermined by the Government surveyor. Witnesses were accordingly examined and on 11th December 1883 the Court disallowed the defendant's claim of set-off and gave judgment for the plaintiff for half the sum certified by the Government surveyor as the cost of the disputed part of the wall. The defendants appealed. Held that having regard to the terms of the agreements under which the plaintiff and defendants respectively held their property the Court was not competent to determine the question of the defendant's act or the other points raised by the pleadings. These were matters to be decided by the Government surveyor whose certificate was a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to sue and upon which the Court might give judgment. Held also that the plaintiff was not entitled to use the portion of the wall not occupied by the defendants in any way except as a party wall. It was erected under the agreement as a party wall and that it should be used for no purpose inconsistent with the idea of its being a party wall. It be applied to the true intention of the parties to the agreement whether Government or the work. The plaintiff was not entitled to the full right of ownership as if it had been built on his own ground and the declaration and injunction asked for therefore were refused. CHITRAI LUDHA v MOHAMMAD PIRZA

s 4—Buddhist law of marriage in British Burma—Wife's claim upon husband for maintenance—By the Buddhist law of marriage as administered in the Courts of British Burma it is the duty of the husband to provide subsistence for his wife and to furnish her with suitable clothes and ornaments. If he fails to do so he is liable to pay debts contracted by her for necessities but it appears that this law would not be applicable where she has sufficient means of her own. No authority has been found for saying that, where the wife has maintained herself she can sue her husband for maintenance for the period during which she has done so. A wife married according to Burmese rights and customs claimed from her husband in a Court in British Burma a certain sum for her expenses of necessities and living for a past period during which she had maintained herself. Held that this was a question regarding marriage within the meaning of the Burma Courts Act XVII of 1875
s 4 and that therefore the Buddhist law formed the rule of decision. The law as stated above was accordingly applicable. Semble—That if this had been a case in which by the above Act a Court would have had to act according to the rule of justice equity and good conscience there would have been no ground for

of Justices—Procedure—The Chairman of the Justices of Calcutta on the complaint of the Health Officer issued a warrant for the seizure of certain articles of food and without notice to the owners or reducing the proceedings to writing condemned them as unfit for use. In support of a rule nisi for a certiorari for bringing up the order that it might be quashed it was argued that the Chairman had not as such jurisdiction to make the order and that it was invalid as notice had not been given and the proceedings had not been reduced to writing. Cause was shown that the description of the Chairman was immaterial as he was also a Justice of the Peace and that such summary proceedings were necessary for the public safety. Held that the Act does not empower the Chairman of the Justices as such to issue a warrant under the 200th section that such a warrant must show on the face of it that the Justice issuing it had jurisdiction that the application under s 200 must be reduced to writing that the evidence taken therefrom must be recorded and that notice must be given to the party proceeded against. DAT & Co v JUSTICES FOR THE TOWN OF CALCUTTA Bourke, O C 232

The case was subsequently heard by B and it was shown that notice of the assessment under s 11 sch 3 had been duly served on A and that though he then denied his liability to take out any license and stated that he carried on no business as alleged B had not appealed against the assessment under s 79. It was further shown that the assessment had been confirmed by the Chairman of the Corporation but that the amount

On an application under the above circumstances to the High Court under s 147 Act X of 1875—Held that the finality of the decision of the Chairman referred to in s 79 has only reference to the class under which a particular person who is admittedly bound to take out a license under s 75 should be assessed and not to the case where the liability to take out a license at all is denied this being a question which can only be determined judicially after taking evidence by a competent Court in a prosecution under s 77 and that therefore the refusal of B to hear the evidence tendered by A on this point was illegal. WOOD v CORPORATION OF THE TOWN OF CALCUTTA to sue—Suit for damages—Notice in writing—Continuing damage—The plaintiff in April 1888 sued the defendants for damages for injuries caused by the defendants' works to his house. On the case coming on for hearing it appeared that the notice of action served upon the defendants was defective in form and the suit was on the 11th December 1888 dismissed with liberty to the plaintiff to bring a fresh suit on the same cause of action. On the 15th December 1888 the plaintiff served the defendants with a fresh notice and on the 15th March 1889 instituted the present suit. It appeared from the plaintiff's evidence that in the beginning of December 1888 the house had been reduced to such a condition that it was incapable of sustaining further damage. Held that the right to sue accented to the plaintiff upon the happening of damage by reason of the subsidence arising from the defendants' act; that the plaintiff had not shown that a right to sue upon which the suit could be maintained had accrued within three months before the institution of the suit as required by s. 357 of the Municipal Act (Bengal Act IV of 1876) and within the terms of the notice of the 15th December; and that the suit was therefore barred. *Darley Main Colliery Co v. Trespass—Suit for damages—S. 2 para 5 of Bengal Act II of 1888 the Calcutta Municipal Consolidation Act by which the former Calcutta Municipal Act (Bengal Act IV of 1876) is repealed provides that pending proceedings which may have been commenced under any repealed Act shall be deemed to have been commenced under the new Act; but though commenced before the passing of the new Act they must to be effectual be continued under its provisions and can only be used to enforce rights and powers in existence at the time when it is sought to enforce them. Where therefore before the passing of Act II of 1888 and whilst Act IV of 1876 was in force the municipality took measures under the latter Act to cleanse basti land which was in an unsanitary state and notwithstanding the passing of Act II of 1888 which provided totally different preliminaries and procedure for the purpose continued the improvements practically under the Act of 1876. Held that even if the proceedings could be considered under s. 2 of Act II of 1888 to have been commenced under the new Act the action of the municipality amounted to trespass for which they were liable in damages to the owner of the land. CORPORATION OF CALCUTTA v. 1 ——— Grant of land for building purposes—Right of Government to eject grantee—Regulations and orders for the Bengal Army—Alluvial land—Assessment of rent—Certain ground situate within the limits of a cantonment was granted for building purposes by the military authorities in 1802. In June 1873 such cantonment was abandoned and the ground comprised therein was made over to the Collector of the district in which it was situate. The Government subsequently sued P who had succeeded to such grant claiming (i) a declaration of its proprietary right to the ground comprised in such grant and to the alluvial accretions to such ground (ii) that P should be directed to pay rents for such ground and such alluvial accretions and (iii) that should P refuse to pay the rents fixed, she might be ejected and the Government put in possession. Held that inasmuch as under the Military Regulations relating to such grants such a grant cannot be resumed by the Government without a month's notice and without payment of the value of any buildings which may have been authorized to be erected and as the Civil Court had no jurisdiction in the matter of assessing rent on such alluvial accretions which were outside the original grant the Government was not entitled to the second and third reliefs it claimed but was entitled only to a declaration of its proprietary title to such ground and to such alluvial accretions. PATTERSON v SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA might have been authorized to be erected. The land was subsequently resumed by the civil authorities, and the land being within municipal limits the ground rents on it were assigned to the municipality. The Municipal Committee having demanded ground rent in respect of the buildings erected on such land under such grant from the representative in title of the original grantee and the latter having refused to pay the same or to vacate the land, the Secretary of State for India in Council sued him in the Civil Court for a declaration of proprietary right to the land for its assessment to ground rent and in the event of the refusal of the defendant to pay such rent when fixed for his ejectment therefrom and for mesne profits of the land for six years. The cause of action was stated in the plaint to be the refusal of the defendant to pay ground rent or to accept a lease or to surrender the land after a notice to that effect had been issued to him by the Municipal Committee as the plaintiff's agents. Held that the Municipal Committee were the plaintiff's duly authorized agents to lease and obtain rent for the land occupied by the defendant's buildings with their compounds, that such notice was properly issued in that character on behalf of the plaintiff; and that the defendant's subsequent refusal to pay rent or to accept a lease or vacate the premises amounted to a sufficient denial of the plaintiff's title to afford him a good cause of action; that assuming that no agreement to pay rent existed the plaintiff was entitled to demand and recover reasonable compensation for the use and occupation of the land by the defendant; that the suit was maintainable in the Civil Court and it had power to grant the plaintiff the reliefs sought; that by the conditions of the grant by the military authorities the plaintiff was not disqualified from demanding ground rent for the land before he had paid the defendant the value of the buildings; but that looking to those conditions it would not be fair or equitable to grant the plaintiff a decree pure and simple for the ejectment of the defendant but he should be put under the condition that if in case of the defendant's refusal to pay the rent fixed he desired to eject him the value of the buildings as cantonment residences must first be determined and when determined must be tendered to the defendant, and if the latter refused to accept it the plaintiff would then be entitled to eject him. 2. — Time for delivery of goods.—Liability for carriage of goods.—Although a carrier may not be bound to deliver goods on any specific day or within any specific time he is bound to deliver them within reasonable time and what constitutes reasonable time must be determined upon the consideration of all the circumstances of the case. A carrier is entitled to his freight and charges and he is entitled to retain the goods in satisfaction of his lien upon them. BURDIO DASS & NATHOOLUL [2 Agri 132]

so long as goods though delivered to a common carrier appointed by the consignee remain at the risk of the consignor they are not delivered to the consignee. WINTER & WAT 1 Mad, 200

4. — Delivery of goods carried by sea.—Landing goods.—Custom of port of Bombay.—Possession of goods.—A carrier by sea is obliged to make an actual delivery of goods carried by him to the consignee but such prima facie obligation may be affected by the custom of the port where the goods are to be delivered. Neither by the custom of the port of Bombay nor by the provisions of the Customs Act is the master of a ship bound to wait fifteen days before commencing to land his cargo but within a reasonable time after the arrival of his ship—48 hours in the case of a sailing vessel, and somewhat less in the case of a steamer—he is at liberty to land goods if the consignee has not sent boats for them and such landing is not unlawful nor a breach of contract as carrier on the part of the master. The landing of the goods under the above circumstances and setting them apart for the consignee do not constitute a delivery of them to the consignee; but such goods after being so landed continue in the possession of the master as carrier. Course of legislation with reference to the landing of goods in the customhouse wharf reviewed. Query—Whether under the special circumstances of this case the goods when so landed remained in the custody of the master in his capacity of common carrier or as a warehouseman? 5. — Dāk carriage proprietor.—Bailee for hire.—Negligence.—Onus of proof.—A person carrying on the ordinary business of a proprietor of dāk carriages does not come within the term common carrier as that term is understood in the English law. Such a person is bound to exercise reasonable and ordinary care in respect of baggage entrusted to him but is not responsible for any loss which may not arise from the negligence or default of himself or his servants he not being a common carrier bound to ensure the safe conveyance of the baggage against all risk save the act of God or the Queen's enemies. He is to be rewarded as a bailee for hire and the fact that he does not deliver the baggage at the end of the journey should be accepted as prima facie proof that the loss has been occasioned by negligence for which he is responsible and consequently the onus of proof lies on him that reasonable care was exercised by him. TOPAL SINGH & THOMPSON 2 N W 237

for conveyance, and if goods are stolen through the negligence of its servants it is liable to make good the loss to the consignor. But it may as may any other carrier for hire limit its liability by conditions provided these conditions are not repugnant to public policy or positive law. 8 ——— Passenger's luggage. Loss of.—Negligence—Conditions endorsed on ticket.—Foreign Steamship Company—Contract Act s 151.—In a suit for damages for loss of passenger's luggage by the wreck of a ship belonging to a foreign company it appeared that the plaintiff had received a ticket in the French language which on its face stated that it ought to be signed by the passenger and that it was issued subject to certain conditions on the back. These conditions among other things stated that the company would not be responsible for loss or damage arising from accidents or risks of the sea, that the ticket was delivered subject to the conditions that certain articles of a specified nature should be made the subject of a special declaration in default of which the company would not be liable; that the company would not be answerable for unregistered luggage and that luggage might be insured at any of the company's offices. It was not stated where registration of luggage might be effected. The ticket was not signed by the plaintiff. The plaintiff alleged that he did not understand the French language and that the conditions had not been explained to him by any person. Held that the company being a foreign company were not common carriers that the plaintiff was bound by the clauses and conditions on the back of the passage ticket; that none of the conditions had the effect of relieving the company from the consequences of their own negligence, that in order to establish a defence upon the ground that the plaintiff's luggage was not registered it was necessary for the defendants to prove not only that the plaintiff was bound by the conditions but also that they were ready and willing to register the plaintiff's luggage and that the plaintiff did not in fact register it that as the contract was made in Calcutta the defendants were bound by the provisions of s 151 of the Indian Contract Act. *MACHILLAN v. The goods were so delivered and the plaintiff brought a suit to recover the value. Held per GARTH C J PRINSEP J and WILSON J that the Railway Company could not be held liable to account to the consignee for any loss from any cause whatever during the whole time that the goods were under their charge inasmuch as the plaintiff had entered into a special contract to hold them harmless in accordance with s 10 of Act IV of 1879. Held per O'KENEALY J that it was doubtful whether ss 151 and 161 of the Contract Act applied to carriers by rail but even assuming that these sections did not apply the Railway Company would be in the position of carriers before the passing of the Carriers Act and were entitled to protect themselves from liability by special contract. *MONESWAN DAS v. There was no special contract of the nature provided for by s 8 Act III of 1865. Held that ss 151 152 of the Contract Act did not apply and that the defendants were liable for the loss of the goods. *MOTHOORA HANT SHAW v. His liability as an insurer is an incident of the contract between him and the owner not inconsistent with the provisions of the Contract Act and the Law of Carriers partly written and partly unwritten remained as before that Act. Loss by—Special contract—Suit for damages—The plaintiffs delivered to the defendants certain goods for carriage to Calcutta in a flat belonging to the defendants. The goods were carried under the terms of a special contract or forwarding note signed by the shipper. One of the conditions of the forwarding note was as follows—The Company will not be under any liability for damages or compensation in respect of loss of or damage to goods except such liability as they are or may be subject to under the provisions of any law for the time being in force or of any contract other than this for the time being in existence between the Company and the shipper. While on board the defendants flat the goods were destroyed by fire. At the trial of the case the defendants gave evidence showing the state of things before the fire occurred the circumstances leading to the discovery of the fire (but not the cause or origin of it) and the measures taken to extinguish the fire. Held that the occurrence of a fire under the circumstances disclosed in the case without any explanation as to the origin of it was of itself evidence of negligence. Held also reversing the decision of SAH J that the defendants had not discharged the onus cast upon them by law of showing that there was no negligence. Central Cocker Tea Company v Rivers Steam Navigation Company I L R 24 Calc, 767 note explained. Held on the construction of the above clause (per SAH J, in the Court below and per TREVELYAN J, in the Court of Appeal) that the words in any law for the time being in force must be taken to refer not to the common law but to the law as laid down in the Carriers Act (III of 1865) and that unless their liability was enlarged by express contract the defendant company were liable only for loss or damage of which under a 6th that Act they were not allowed to relieve themselves that is only for loss occasioned by the negligence or criminal acts of themselves, their servants or agents. The Judicial Committee dismissed an appeal in the above case from the decree of the Appellate High Court which proceeded on a 9 of the Carriers Act (III of 1865) that Court having taken the non-delivery as placing the burden of proving absence of negligence on the carriers. The words of the section are imperative and not permissive. The use of the words 'may appoint' in this section does not imply that the District Judge has any discretion in a proper case to appoint or not to appoint an administrator. If any discretion is given as to the exercise of the power thereby conferred it is that of determining whether the occasion has arisen in the particular case. *VIJAYASHANKAR PRADIP v. has been determined between the rival claimants who is the heir of the deceased but to give full effect to the object of the Regulation the word determined must be understood finally determined. Where the Judge considered that he was bound to make an order directing administrators appointed under Regulation VIII of 1827 to make over the property of the deceased to one of the rival claimants who was judicially declared to be the heir of the deceased—Held that so long as the party against whom the decision in the matter of the rival claims was given had a right of appeal the order of the Judge was one which he could not make under the Regulation and that in exercising his jurisdiction under the Regulation he had exercised it illegally and, that being so, the High Court had power under s 623 of the Civil Procedure Code to interfere in the exercise of its extraordinary jurisdiction. *ISHVAMBHAR PANDIT v. 10 ——— Certificate under Act XXVII of 1860—Bombay Regulation VIII of 1827 s 9—Jurisdiction to grant certificate of administration on—Foreigners residi abroad— Under s 3 of Act XXVII of 1860 a certificate can be granted only for the estate of a British subject either resident within the district where the certificate is sought or else having no fixed place of residence. The Act does not make provision for administration of the effects of a foreigner domiciled abroad. While Act XXVII of 1860 has regard to the person Regulation VIII of 1827 on the other hand looks simply to the locality of the assets as the ground of the Court's jurisdiction to grant a certificate of administration. The intention of s 9 seems to be that when there are assets within a zilla and the circumstances exist which are specified in the section a certificate of administration may be granted. The authority given under s 9 must be understood to be the same as under s 7. B a sardar of Baroda, residing within the Gaikwar's territory died there leaving considerable property in the district of Surat. On his death L the Assistant Collector of Surat was appointed administrator of B's estate under s 9 of Regulation VIII of 1827. Shortly after his appointment as administrator L went to England on furlough. During his absence the plaintiffs sued as heirs of B to recover the balance of principal and interest due on a bond executed by the defendants in favour of B. Held that the plaintiffs were incompetent to sue. L having been appointed administrator of B's estate and never having been relieved of his office as administrator by the Court as contemplated by s 9 of Regulation VIII of 1827 his status still subsisted and while it subsisted no one else could represent the estate. The appointment of an administrator excludes all other representatives so long as it endures. IAKABIM ALIKHAN v. ZIAULHISAB LADLI BEGUM I L R, 13 Bom 150

11 ——— Act XIX of 1841—Summary procedure—Act XXVII of 1860—A (a Hindu) died intestate in December 1865 leaving his widow in possession of his property moveable and immoveable. The descent of A's property was admittedly governed by the law of the Mitakshara. On the 19th January 1866 A's nephew presented a petition to the Zillah Court under Act XIX of 1841 denying the title of the widow. Upon this alone the Judge directed the widow to come in and show cause which she did on the 2nd February following. A's daughter of A on the 19th March presented a petition in opposition to the nephew's claim for possession. The nephew filed a reply in the meantime the widow applied for a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 which was opposed by both nephew and daughter. The nephew also filed a cross-petition under Act XXVII of 1860. All these petitions came on by consent together for adjudication on a state of facts admitted by all parties through their pladers who also by consent between themselves submitted their view of the question of law to be decided on the Acts of 1841 and 1860. The questions so submitted were—(1) Did it appear on the evidence that there was a separation between A and his nephew according to the Mitakshara doctrine? (2) If the evidence per se established a legal separation was such separation negated by certain admissions of A? The Judge refused the application of the widow under Act XXVII of 1860 and granted possession to the nephew under Act XIX of 1841. The nephew was a man of substance and able to bring a regular suit and there was no evidence of possession by force or fraud on the part of the widow the only question being her right according to the Mitakshara law. Held that the Judge was in error in proceeding summarily under Act XIX of 1841 on the declaration of the applicant alone and without other enquiry but that this defect was cured by the widow's appearing. That the Judge ought not to have tried the cases under Act XIX of 1841 and Act XXVII of 1860 together and on the same issues but the Judge having jurisdiction over the subject matter and to frame the issues his order was not open to appeal or review. *JHODA MOONWEE v. In other words the objects of the Act are to enable debtors to get sufficient acquittances when they pay money due to the estate of a deceased and to preserve that estate from loss by giving some one the right to collect the debts lest they should be lost e.g. by the operation of the law of limitation. Where a debtor of a deceased Hindu who died intestate declined to pay the debt to his widow unless she produced letters of administration to the estate of the deceased and the widow sued to recover the debt without taking out a certificate or letters of administration and it was found that there was no reasonable doubt that the widow was entitled to the debt but that the debtor refused to pay neither from any fraudulent nor vexatious motive but to avoid the risk of having to pay the debt twice over—Held that the suit must be dismissed. MUTFAMBAL & BANK OF MADRAS I L R. 7 Mad. 115 time after the institution of the suit the parties compromised the claim. The plaintiffs applied to the Court to pass a decree in terms of the compromise. The Subordinate Judge referred the question whether a certificate under Act VII of 1889 was necessary before he could pass a decree as applied for. Held that a certificate was necessary by s 4 of Act VII of 1889 distinctly and peremptorily forbids any Court from passing a decree against a debtor of a deceased person for payment of his debt except on production by the person claiming of probate or letters of administration. A decree would be against the debtor when passed although he consented to it. SAS TARI KHANDEBAO v. RAJJI I L R. 15 Bom., 105

T and others who were entitled to recover from the Government treasury a certain sum on account of deshmukhi hak sold it to B in 1833 in consideration of a debt due to him. B died in the year 1884. In the year 1886 T and his co-vendors themselves recovered from the Government the said sum which under the sale deed was recoverable by B. Act coming into force while suit was pending—Effect of suit—Suit for foreclosure or sale—Mortgage by conditional sale—On 28th March 1871 the defendant's father borrowed a sum of money from the plaintiff's father and placed him in possession of certain land under an instrument of mortgage which provided for the application of the usufruct in liquidation of the interest and then in reduction of the principal. The instrument also contained a covenant for the repayment in four years of the balance that might then be due by the mortgagor and a stipulation that on default, the mortgagor was to surrender the property to the mortgagee as if it had been sold to him. In 1874 the mortgagor resumed possession without discharging the mortgage debt. The mortgagee having died his sons on 15th April 1888 filed the present suit on the mortgage and prayed for a decree for foreclosure or sale. During the pendency of the suit the Succession Certificate Act of 1883 came into operation but the plaintiffs obtained no certificate under it. Afterwards some of the partners of the mortgagee firms having died the surviving partners and the sons of the deceased brought a suit against the mortgagor firm to recover rent which accrued due after the deaths of the deceased partners. The Judge held that the plaintiffs could not proceed with the suit without a certificate under the Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889). Held reversing the order that as the rent sued upon became due after the deaths of the deceased partners it formed no part of their estates at the time of their respective deaths and no certificate was therefore necessary under the Succession Certificate Act. *RAJCHORDAS NATHUBHAI v. —A mortgage bond was executed by the defendant in favour of H who died leaving two sons J and S the elder of whom J took out a certificate to collect the debts of his father and instituted a suit on the bond in which he asked both for sale of the mortgaged property and for a personal decree against the defendant. Whilst the suit was pending J died and S was allowed to be substituted in his place as plaintiff. A decree was made for sale of the property but the personal relief was not granted as it was held to be barred by lapse of time. Held that this was not a decree against a debtor for payment of his debt within the meaning of s 4 of the Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889). *Kogha Nath Saha v. 184. ———— Act XXVII of 1860 s 6—Grant of certificate by District Court—Petition to High Court by objector for fresh certificate—Supersession of certificate granted by District Court—S 6 of Act XXVII of 1860 contemplates two different proceedings which may arise under different circumstances. One of these proceedings is an appeal which has the effect of suspending the granting of the certificate and the intention of the Legislature was that upon an adverse order being made the person objecting to it might thereupon appeal and the effect of this would be to oblige the District Judge to hold his hand and not to issue the certificate until this decision of the appeal. The other proceeding is by way of petition to the High Court after the certificate has been granted by the District Court to grant a fresh certificate in supersession of the first and the latter portion of s 6 shows that the person who obtains the fresh certificate need not be the person who obtained the first and there is nothing to limit the powers of the Court on petition to grant a fresh certificate to any person including the person who opposed the granting of the original certificate who may prove himself entitled thereto or to confine the exercise of such powers to cases where the first certificate was defective in form. GANGIA v RANJOI SINGH

Act (XIII of 1856) did not give jurisdiction to the High Court when a case was brought before it on certiorari to enquire whether the Magistrate had come to a correct conclusion as to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner. The object of that section was to limit the objections to a conviction to some substantial meritorious ground such as want of jurisdiction or the like and to prevent a conviction from being quashed on a mere error of form or of procedure. But the section did not give the High Court any right to interfere on the ground that the Magistrate had come to a wrong conclusion on the question of the guilt or innocence of the accused person. Though affidavits may be used to show a want of jurisdiction in a Magistrate even though such affidavits contradict for this purpose the finding of the Magistrate they cannot be used as affording materials for reversing the Magistrate's decision on the merits. RZO r NATHOLAL PITAMBAH 10 Bom, 103 in the land in respect of which the cesses are levied.

The words "owner and holder" in s 4 of that Act are not limited to any one person nor for the purposes of that section must the owner be in actual possession. The plaintiff who was a putnada of the defendants having paid certain cesses in respect of what he described in his plaint to be debutter lakhray lands lying within the ambit of his patta sued the defendant to recover the amount of such cesses. The defendant admitted that he was proprietor of the estate in which the lands were situated but denied his liability for the cesses. Held that the defendant was not liable to pay the amount of the cesses but that the person liable was the idol through its shebait or some person in receipt of the rents and profits of the land or some person in actual possession of the land in occupation of it. GOPAN

Held on appeal to the Privy Council as follows—Sembly—That the general and abstract doctrine laid down by the High Court at Bombay that it is beyond the power of the British Crown without the consent of the Imperial Parliament to make a cession of territory within the jurisdiction of any of the British Courts in India in time of peace to a foreign power

is erroneous. Where an objection is taken to the territorial jurisdiction of a British Court on the ground that the territory over which the jurisdiction of the Court extended has been ceded to a foreign power such a cession must be regularly proved and cannot be established by uncertain inference from equivocal acts. An agreement on the part of the Government of India purporting to transfer certain villages forming part of a Regulation province will in the Bombay Presidency and subject to ordinary British jurisdiction to the extraordinary jurisdiction of the Political Agency of a Native State does not constitute a cession of territory. A re-arrangement of jurisdiction within British territory in India by the exclusion of certain district from the Regulations and Codes there in force and from the jurisdiction of all the High Courts with a view to the establishment thereof of a native jurisdiction under British supervision and control cannot be carried out except by legislation under the provisions of the Imperial Statutes 3 & 4 Will IV c. 85 s 43; 24 & 25 Vic c. 67 s. 22 and 24 & 25 Vic c. 104 s. 9. The Governor General in Council being precluded by the Act 24 & 25 Vic c. 67 s. 22 from legislating directly as to the sovereignty or dominion of the Crown over any part of its territory in India or as to the allegiance of British subjects cannot by any legislative Act (e.g. by The Evidence Act of 1822 s. 113) purporting to make a notification in the Government Gazette conclusive evidence of a cession of territory exclude judicial enquiry as to the nature and lawfulness of that cession. Where the foundation of the jurisdiction of a British Court over the subject matter of a suit and the parties thereto is territorial and the territory by a valid cession ceases to be British the jurisdiction of the Court can no longer be exercised whatever be the stage or condition of the litigation at the time of such cession. DAMODHAR GORDHAN v DEVRAM KANJI I L R 1 Bom 367 [25 W R 261 L R 3 I A 102]

1 ——— Maintenance—Void agreement—
Alienation by Hindu widow—Waste—A Hindu widow as the heirs of her husband sued his four surviving brothers who retained the enjoyment of the whole joint estate for the recovery of her share. While the suit was pending on the 24th April 1859 she entered into an agreement with the defendant G by which, after recting the nature of her claim and stating that she was too poor to prosecute it she assigned to him all she might be entitled to receive from the joint estate in right of her deceased husband together with all interest and accumulations thereon and all advantage to be derived from the suit about to be instituted by the defendant G and she appointed him her attorney to institute and carry on any suit in her name for recovering her right and share in the property it being agreed that he should retain one moiety of what might be recovered absolutely for his own benefit as remuneration and out of the other moiety should repay himself such sums as he might from time to time have advanced or paid for her maintenance with interest at 12 per cent per annum and also all such sums and costs as he might from time to time have advanced or been put to in carrying on the suite with interest at 12 per cent per annum and should pay over the residue to the widow herself. Subsequently that suit was withdrawn. In May 1859 the widow by G filed a fresh bill against her husband's surviving brothers for recovery of her husband's share in the estate together with accumulations and in August 1861 obtained a decree for a large sum of money out of the joint estate—the whole to be enjoyed by her as a Hindu widow in the manner prescribed by Hindu law. By a deed dated November 14th 1860 G assigned his interest under the assignment of April 1859 to H S the defendant. In a suit brought on the 22nd February 1866 by the reversionary heirs of the husband in the Court of the Principal Sudder Ameen of Hooghly against the widow G and H S the last one of whom alone resided in Calcutta which suit was on the 23rd of April 1866 removed into the High Court on the application of G and H S it was prayed that the agreement of April 1859 and all suit assignments that might have been made be set aside as void and that the money should be paid into Court and kept there during the life of the widow defendant for the benefit of the reversionary heirs and in order to prevent waste. Held by PHILLIPS J the suit being one to prevent contemplated waste was not barred by lapse of time. The agreement of 4th April 1859 was void as being without definite consideration and being in the nature of a gambling transaction not valid against heirs under Hindu law and it was also void being of a champertous nature and contrary to public policy. The law which forbids and avoids all acts contrary to public policy and subversive of the general interests of society is in force in this country. Independent of the Charter there is a power inherent in any Court of Justice which receives its authority from the State to make the interests of private persons subordinate to those of the public and to take care that where they are in conflict the latter should prevail. Held on appeal by PHILLIPS CJ and MACPHERSON J that the suit could be maintained for the relief sought and for the protection of the property that the deed of the 4th April 1859 so far as it related to the moiety of the property assigned to the defendant G absolutely was not binding on the plaintiffs or on the persons who upon the death of the widow might succeed to the property of her deceased husband. Though not void on the ground of champerty it was an unconscionable bargain and a speculative if not a gambling contract, and there was no necessity for such an alienation by the widow. But so far as regards the assignment of the moiety as security for the advances and expenses which G or his assigns might reasonably and properly make or incur for the maintenance of the widow for carrying on the necessary proceedings to enforce her rights with 12 per cent interest on such advances, it was not void but created a charge upon that moiety which was binding upon the reversionary heirs of the husband to the extent of such advances and expenses. There was legal necessity for such charge and it affected the moiety both of principal and accumulations. Held by MACPHERSON J the agreement of April 1859 was void by English law as being a mere gambling transaction and contrary to public policy and illegal. GROSS & AMBARTANIAN DASSER

2 ——— Assignment of debutter land in consideration of defendant ejecting by suit at his own cost the Brahmins etc.—A Hindu widow together with the next heir joined in assigning to the defendant a debutter estate in consideration of the defendant conducting at his own cost proceedings for the ejection of Brahmins and Banias then in occupation as pooraries to conduct the worship of the idols and upon the condition that he should thereafter conduct such worship and out of the proceeds and offerings retain three-fourths for his own purposes and for hospitality and pay the remaining fourth for the maintenance of the widow and the heir. Held that the assignment was valid the purpose for which the lands were dedicated being provided for and that although the transaction amounted to champerty that was no ground for treating it as invalid. An assignment between Hindus of property the subject matter of litigation on conditions which constitute champerty is not on that ground invalid.

8 ——— Maintenance.—Application of law of champerty—Duty of Court—Specific performance of lease savouring of champerty—The law of England as to the offences of maintenance and champerty does not apply to natives of India. In dealing with objections to their contracts on the ground of maintenance and champerty the Court must look to the general principles regarding public policy and the administration of justice upon which that law at present rests. To constitute maintenance improper litigation must have been stirred up with a bad motive for purposes contrary to public policy and justice. Champerty is a species of maintenance and of the same character but with the additional feature of a condition or bargain providing for a participation in the subject matter of the litigation. Specific performance decreed of a lease though the lease formed part of an arrangement whereby as a consideration for the lease the plaintiff was to lend the defendant money to enable him (inter alia) to commence proceedings against the then tenant of the subject matter of the intended lease. 10 ——— Invalidity of contract on ground of maintenance.—Agreement against public policy—A commissariat officer named M had a butler named L who was employed to put forward with the money of M or his own various large contracts. Two accounts were opened in several houses of agency in the names of V and L. To secure himself M caused L to execute a will leaving his whole estate to M. Testator and legatee perished together in the Peruvia steamship in 1864. The Administrator General of Madras administered to L's estate but the personal representatives of M contested the right of the Administrator General to pay over the fund to those of L. The result was that L's representatives were recommended by their attorney C to apply to one J (the present plaintiff) who was also a client of C's for the necessary funds. J consented to advance money for the purpose of the suit and on the 28th July 1869 a so called deed of mortgage drawn up by C was executed between the present defendants as mortgagors and the plaintiff J as mortgagee whereby in consideration of an advance of the sum of Rs 5000 (the receipt of Rs 5000 of which was by the instrument acknowledged) to be made by J to such attorney as he should select before the 31st of December 1869 the defendants mortgaged everything which they might be entitled to recover by suit the mortgage to be defeasible on payment of 50 per cent of what they might recover by suit and a further 50 per cent upon all to which they might be entitled as the persons entitled to L's estate. They also covenanted to repay the money lent with interest. The present defendants succeeded in their suit against the Administrator General and this suit was brought by J to recover a commission of 50 per cent on the sum recovered and the sums advanced, with interest. Defendants denied that plaintiff had fulfilled his part of the agreement and alleged that in consequence of his neglecting to supply funds they had been compelled to borrow of a third party. They also pleaded that the agreement was void for champerty and maintenance. Held that by the law of England which prevailed in the present suit this contract was clearly void being contrary to the plain provision of the common and statute law against maintenance and that it was also void as being contrary to public policy. The Court further found that the plaintiff had failed to fulfil his part of the contract but allowed him to recover the sum really advanced by him viz Rs 2,200 with interest. MULLA JAFFARJI FYED ALL v YACALI HADAB BI

15. — Alienation by Hindu widow.—A Hindu widow having applied to H S to aid her in leaving the family dwelling house of her late husband G C C where she alleged she was improperly treated and placed under restraint by the plaintiff her husband's sole surviving brother H S at his own cost enabled her to do so. She then applied to H S to advance funds for the payment of certain debts incurred by her in consequence of the plaintiff's refusal to pay her any portion of the family estate to allow her a monthly sum for maintenance and to manage and conduct for her a suit which she proposed to institute to establish her right to a portion of the joint estate and H S consented to do so upon certain terms which were embodied in a deed by which K D assigned to H S all her right share and interest as widow of G C C in the joint estate and in the accumulations thereof and in the separate estate of G C C and all benefit to be derived from the intended suit on trust first to repay all the costs of the suit secondly to retain by way of remuneration for managing the suit one half of what might be recovered therein and thirdly to hold the residue as security for repayment with interest at 12 per cent of the sums advanced by H S the surplus after satisfying all such sums to be paid to K D. Then K D with the aid and under the management of H S brought a suit against the plaintiff and other members of the joint family of G C C for a declaration of her rights under the will of his father R C and for the administration of G C C's share of the joint estate. The result of this suit was that K D was (among other things) declared entitled as a Hindu widow to Rs 101,302 14 10 in respect of the accumulations of the joint property between the deaths of R C's and G C C's deaths. The plaintiff paid the Rs 101,302 14 10 into Court under an order made in the suit. K D subsequently obtained an order under which she took this sum out of Court notwithstanding that the plaintiff applied for an injunction to restrain her taking it out. Upon her obtaining that order the plaintiff as immediate reversionary heir of G C C instituted the present suit against K D and H S to restrain K D from taking the Rs 101,302 14 10 out of Court and to compel her to bring back any portion thereof which she might have already received and for a declaration that the assignment to H S effected no valid charge thereon. Held (following the decision in the case of Gross v Amritnari Das) 4 B L R O C 1 that the assignment to H S was not binding on the reversionary heirs of G C C except as regards the charge on one moiety for expenses incurred and advances made by H S whether by way of maintenance or otherwise with interest thereon at 12 per cent. HISWATH CHUTTAR v KHANDYAMANI DASI

The property was afterwards taken possession of by the Court of Wards on behalf of one S who claimed under an alleged adoption by one of the persons last in possession. Thereafter A sold his interest under the ikramama, which he valued at Rs 1500 to the plaintiff for the sum of Rs 100. In a suit brought against the Court of Wards as representing S for the recovery of a moiety of the property its value in which A refused to join as plaintiff and was made a defendant—Held that the suit was not maintainable. Previously thereto they had obtained advances of money from the present plaintiff and executed in his favour an agreement and a bond whereby they secured to him the payment of large sums in case they recovered the husband's estate and virtually gave to him the entire control of the suit. Subsequently they agreed with the rightful heir to compromise the suit which compromise however was never acted upon. partly owing it was alleged to the subsequent conduct of the heir. of right and without any evidence that the sum claimed was really due to the plaintiff to execute a bond in his favour whereby he bound himself to pay a large sum of money claimed by the plaintiff as being due from the widows. The plaintiff on his part avowed that he would treat such payment as a satisfaction of his claim against the widows but meanwhile that he would retain the securities which he held from them. In a suit brought by the plaintiff against the heir to enforce the last mentioned bond—Held that the bond was wholly invalid and fraudulent as against the defendant and that as there was no privity of contract between the plaintiff and defendant independently of the bond it could not stand as a security for anything which might be justly due from the widows. Quare—Whether the plaintiff could have recovered from the widows if they had been successful against the heir the large sums of money secured by their bond and agreement. The law of champerty and maintenance is not the same in India as in England. The English statute with regard to champerty is not applicable in the mofussil in India. The Indian Courts in every transaction must decide upon the fact whether it is merely the acquisition of an interest in the subject of litigation bona fide entered into or whether it is an unfair or illegitimate transaction got up for the purpose merely of spin or of litigation disturbing the peace of families and carried on for a corrupt or other improper motive. CHANDAMANA CHETTY v. 19 — Agreement against public policy—Maintenance—Malicious prosecution—Reasonable and probable cause—Practice—Security for costs by a person not a party to the suit—In a deed dated 17th July 1867 it was recited that A was entitled to certain property then in possession of D and B and that A and B her husband having no funds to adopt or to commence legal proceedings for the recovery of the property had applied to C to assist them in commencing and conducting the necessary suits and to make all the requisite disbursements connected therewith until their final termination and that C had agreed to do so and also as A and B had no means whatever to pay to them or the survivor Rs 150 a month until the final termination of the litigation. Then followed the appointment by A and B of C to be their attorney to institute and prosecute all necessary suits to sign all papers and documents to receive all moneys and take possession of all lands etc. to which A and B might become entitled under any decree or order that might be made and to appoint attorneys and vakils. C then covenanted to institute and prosecute the necessary suits and to make the necessary advances and payments and to pay Rs 150 a month to A and B. Then it was agreed that out of the moneys or proceeds of lands etc. recovered C should in the first place retain and reimburse him if all advances and payments made by him with interest thereon at 10 per cent in the second place retain to himself by way of remuneration for his trouble and risk one third of the nett proceeds of the litigation and in the third place make over the remaining two thirds to A and B. A and B covenanted not to intermeddle with C in prosecuting the litigation that they would render him all possible assistance and that the power of attorney given by them to C should be irrevocable so long as he prosecuted the litigation and paid the monthly allowance of Rs 150. It was provided however that if B wished to devote all his time thereto he might have the management of the litigation but under the control of C and that A and B might revoke the power of attorney on repayment to C of all money advanced by him with interest at 12 per cent and the sum of Rs 2000 by way of liquidated damages. A power was also reserved to A and B to compromise but only with the consent of C unless the sum to be received on the compromise should exceed the total amount of C's advances with interest at 12 per cent. In pursuance of this agreement a suit was instituted in the names of A and B against D and E to recover possession of the property. This suit was by the High Court decreed in the plaintiff's favour but was on appeal dismissed by the Privy Council with costs. While the suit was in the Court of first instance D and E applied to have C added as a party. This application was refused and D and E did not appeal from that refusal. Pending the litigation A and B brought a suit against D and E for wasilat and obtained a decree. On the 21st September A and B executed a memorandum of agreement whereby C purchased all their rights in the two suits brought by them against D and E. D and E now brought a suit against C alleging that they had suffered loss and damage by the litigation instituted by A and B that C was guilty of champerty and maintenance that the litigation was commenced and continued maliciously by C in the names of persons who had no legal or equitable right and without reasonable or probable cause that the agreement of 17th July 1867 was illegal and contrary to public policy that the litigation was carried on by C at his own expense and for his own benefit and that C was the real mover in the proceedings and illegally used the procedure of the Court to the damage and injury of the plaintiffs. Held in the Court below and on appeal that there was reasonable and probable cause for the institution of the wasilat suit brought by A and B against D and E. Held by MACPHERSON J that the agreement of July 1867 was illegal and against public policy as also were the subsequent institution and maintaining of the suit against D and E by C and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover from C the loss they had sustained by reason of the suits which he (substantially only for his own benefit) had maintained against them. Held on appeal (reversing the decision of the Court below) that the suit was not maintainable. The English statutes with regard to champerty and maintenance do not apply to India. In England champerty and maintenance were offences punishable by the Common Law and the ground on which an action is allowed in England—viz that C had been guilty of an offence by which the plaintiff

had suffered damage—does not exist in India. The only ground on which agreements which favour of champerty or maintenance are held to be void in this country is that they are contrary to public policy. Assuming that the agreement of July 1867 was a valid one and that C did thereby acquire an interest in the subject matter of the suit and supplied the means of carrying it on such acts did not entitle the plaintiffs to maintain the present suit or to recover against C the costs of the former suit. C on his part had been made a co plaintiff with A and B in the former suit or he ought to have been called upon to give security for the costs of that suit. CHUNDER KANT MOOKERJEE v RAMCOONAR KOONDOR

In the same case—Held on appeal to the Privy Council the English laws of maintenance and champerty are not of force as specific laws in India either in the mofussil or in the presidency towns. The ground on which contracts of the nature of champerty and maintenance should be held by the Indian Courts to be invalid is that they are contrary to public policy. An agreement to supply funds to carry on a suit in consideration of having a share in the property if recovered is not necessarily opposed to public policy since cases may easily be supposed in which it would be in furtherance of right and justice that a suitor who had a just title to property and no means to support it should be assisted in this way. But agreements purporting to be made to meet such cases when found to be extortionate and unconscionable so as to be inequitable or to be entered into for improper objects as for the purpose of gambling in litigation or of injuring others by encouraging numerous suits are contrary to public policy and ought not to have effect given to them. Since by the law of India a champertous agreement does not constitute a punishable offence an action in that country founded on alleged champerty to recover losses and costs incurred in litigation cannot be sustained on the ground that a remedy by action accrues where an indictable offence has been committed. No action will lie for improperly putting the law in motion in the name of a third party unless it is alleged and proved that it has been done maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause. In the absence of such proof an action for losses and costs incurred in defending a suit will not lie as against a person who is alleged to have been a mover in that suit and to have had an interest in it but who had not been made a party to the record since such a state of things creates no legal privity from which a promise can be implied on which an action on contract can be founded nor does it ex hypothesi constitute a legal wrong. RAMCOONAR KOONDOR v CHUNDER KANT MOOKERJEE policy or merely on this ground void. But in agreements of this kind the questions are (a) whether the agreement is extortionate and unconscionable so as to be inequitable against the borrower or (b) whether the agreement has been made not with the bona fide object of assisting a claim believed to be just and of obtaining reasonable compensation therefor but for improper objects as for the purpose of gambling, in litigation or of injuring others so as to be for these reasons, contrary to public policy. In either of these cases effect is not to be given to the agreement. Here upon the facts the above case (b) did not arise and this agreement was not contrary to public policy. But this agreement fell within case (a) and the judgment of the High Court was affirmed that the agreement was so extortionate and unconscionable in regard to the excess of the reward that it was inequitable and, therefore not enforceable against the defendant. Ramescoor Coondoo v Chaudhary Kanto Mohapatra I L R 2 Cal 233 L R 4 I A 23 referred to and followed. MONKRAM SINGH v LUP SINGH

The agreement provided that V should defend the suit but if the result of the suit should be to establish the plaintiff's right to seize the house in execution then that H should be at liberty to cancel the contract of sale. Held that the agreement of 12th December amounted to an absolute sale by V to H of the equity of redemption of the house in question and that it was not champertous. *ANNEBHOOT HANBHOOT v. 25. — Agreement to share property the subject of suit—Claim for payment for work done and expenses properly incurred—Agreements not opposed to public policy—The English law of champerty is not in force in India. Agreements made by claimants of property in litigation to share it with others on their obtaining decrees in consideration of funds being supplied by the latter for carrying on their suits are not in themselves opposed to public policy nor are they necessarily void. But such agreements when extortionate are inequitable and in that case should not receive effect. 27 ————— Maintenance—

*Gambling in litigation—Agreement opposed to public policy—Contract Act (IX of 1872) s. 23—The judgment of the Privy Council in Ramcoomer Coomdooy v Chander Kanto Mookerjee I. R. 41 A. 23 I. L. R. 2 Cal. 233 shows that while the specific English law of maintenance and champerty has not been introduced into India and while fair agreements to supply funds to carry on litigation in consideration of having a share of the property if recovered should not be regarded as per se opposed to public policy yet such agreements should be carefully watched and if extortionate and unconscionable or made not with the bona fide object of assisting for a reasonable recompense a claim believed to be just, but for the purpose of gambling in litigation or of injuring or oppressing others by encouraging unrighteous suits should be held contrary to public policy and not enforced. For the purpose of meeting the expenses of an appeal to the High Court the appellant on the advice of his legal adviser executed a bond for Rs 20,000 in consideration of the obligee agreeing to defray such expenses. The obligor agreed to pay the Rs 20,000 within one year from his recovering possession of the property in suit and at the request of the obligor's pleader the obligee advanced Rs 700 which was applied to the expenses of the appeal. The High Court dismissed the appeal and in a deed executed by the obligor in favour of the obligee and others for the purpose of defraying the expenses of a further appeal to the Privy Council he admitted his liability under the former bond. The Privy Council decreed his appeal and he obtained possession of the property in suit but declined to pay the Rs 20,000 upon which the obligee sued upon the bond. It was found that apart from the moneys borrowed by the obligor from time to time he was without even the means of subsistence that he executed the bond with his eyes open and perfectly understood his position and the effect of both the instruments executed by him that no fraud or improper pressure appeared to have been applied to him that his legal advisers had acted honestly and to the best of their ability in his interests that there was nothing to show that having regard to the risks of the litigation he could have obtained the assistance necessary for the prosecution of his appeal on better terms than those contained in the bond that without such assistance he could not have appealed to the High Court and that the obligee gave him such assistance upon his application. Held also that the obligee could not under the circumstances have considered both that the obligor's claim was a just one and reasonably likely to succeed and that the Rs 20,000 was a reasonable recompense in the event of success for the advance of Rs 700 and the bond was therefore a gambling in litigation which it would be contrary to public policy to enforce. The Court gave the plaintiff a decree for the Rs 700 actually advanced with simple interest at 20 per cent per annum from the date of the bond to the*

The Court of first instance held that the assignment was a gambling transaction and entered into with the object of gaining the spoils of an unrighteous litigation and null and void as opposed to public policy and that the release set up by the defendant could not be given in proof of want of registration and therefore rejected the plaintiff's claim. 57 ——— Alternative charge—Common object—Unlawful assembly—Criminal Procedure Code (1892) s 236—Fourteen accused were charged with rioting armed with deadly weapons and with murder and causing grievous hurt during such riot. The common object alleged by the prosecution was to compel the payment of certain money by one of the persons of the opposite party. Some of the accused who admitted their presence at the scene of the occurrence stated that they had been attacked on account of an allegation being made that one of the opposite party had enticed away another's wife and that they had merely acted in self defence. On the close of the case for the prosecution the Sessions Judge considering that possibly the common object alleged by the prosecution might be considered not to have been proved amended the charge and added an alternative common object to it namely that the object of the assembly was to punish one of the opposite side for enticing away another's wife. There was no evidence on the record to prove the alternative common object it being based solely on a portion of the statements of some of the accused. Held that if the Sessions Judge was of opinion that there were grounds for charging the accused with a common object other than that alleged by the prosecution his proper course was not to amend the charge but to add a separate count or counts to the charge upon which a separate verdict could be taken. S 236 of the Code of Criminal Procedure only authorizes a charge in the alternative when it is doubtful which of several offences the facts which can be proved will constitute and not where there may be a doubt as to the facts which constitute one of the elements of the offence. WAPADAR KHAN v. Counsel for the prisoner was asked by the Judge if he desired to have a new trial on the charge as amended but he declined. The three charges (i.e. the two original charges and the additional charge) were then read to the jury who after deliberation returned a verdict of 'not guilty' on charges Nos 1 and 2 and of 'guilty' on charge No 3 of abetting of murder by a certain person or persons unknown. On the application of counsel for the prisoner the following points were reserved:*

(1) whether under the circumstances the Court had power to add a new charge (2) whether the verdict returned on the new charge was valid, the prisoner not having been called on to plead to it. Held (SCOTT J. dissentiente) that the Judge was wrong in framing a new charge in addition to the original charges. The error however was one of form and not of substance and under s. 537 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1892) the Court declined to interfere with the conviction. Held also that having regard to ss. 229, 229 and 230 of the Criminal Procedure Code the charge of abetment of murder by B might have been changed into one of abetment generally. Held also that in any case the conviction was good under ss. 236 and 237 of the Criminal Procedure Code. It was doubtful whether the evidence would establish the offence of murder abetment of murder by B or abetment of murder by some one unknown. Even if there had been no charge properly framed the Judge might under s. 237 have accepted the verdict returned by the jury and entered it on the record. The fact that the Judge framed a charge which ex hypothesi was beyond his authority and accepted a verdict on that charge did not affect the legality of the conviction. Held that the omission to read and explain the charge to the prisoner did not under the circumstances prejudice the prisoner and was therefore immaterial. In the Criminal Procedure Code generally the word charge is used as the statement of a specific offence and not as indicating the entire series of offences of which a prisoner is accused. There is nothing in the Code to indicate that the word is to have a different construction in ss. 226 and 227 from what it has in other sections. The words without a charge in s. 226 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1892) will properly apply not only to a case in which there is no charge at all but also to a case in which there is no charge of such an offence as the Sessions Judge or Clerk of the Crown may think the prisoner ought to be tried for. If the word alter in s. 227 is to be taken to include addition as it does in s. 226, the addition permitted must be an addition to some specific charge in the nature of an alteration and not the addition of a new charge. The words return of the verdict in s. 227 mean the return of the final verdict which the Judge is bound to record. Per SCOTT J.—The test of the admissibility of proposed amendments to a charge is whether such amendment will prejudice the prisoner. The word charge is used in the Code both as indicating the whole series of counts or heads of charge and also as indicating a charge of one specific offence. In s. 227 it is used in the former sense. The word alter in s. 227 must be taken to be equivalent to the words add to or otherwise alter which are used in s. 226 and consequently the addition of a new head of charge is an alteration within the meaning of s. 227. QUEEN EXPRESS v. At the trial the Sessions Judge added a charge against all the accused of causing hurt to C and convicted them upon both the original charges and the added charge. The assault upon C took place either at the same time as or immediately after the attack which resulted in the death of J. Held that the case did not come within the terms of s. 226 of the Criminal Procedure Code and the adding of the charge was an irregularity which was not covered by ss. 236 and 537 those sections having no application to such a state of things; but that, inasmuch as the Sessions Judge was addressed by the pleader who appeared for the accused and heard all the objections raised and witnesses might have been called for the defence upon the added charge the provisions of s. 537 were applicable to the case. QUEEN EXPRESS v. in British India. The Magistrate who held a preliminary inquiry into the matter committed the accused to the Sessions Court on a charge under s. 35 of the Penal Code (XIV of 1860). The Sessions Judge amended the charge to one under s. 30 on the ground that as the accused had been extracted on a charge under s. 30, they would be tried and convicted only under that section and no other. At the end of the trial, the Sessions Judge found that the accused were guilty of theft, but not of dacoity as charged them. Held, reversing the order of the Sessions Judge, that the Sessions Judge altered the charge under s. 22 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1872) and under s. 225 to convict the accused of the minor offence which the law envisaged. Held also, that the Code of Criminal Procedure was applicable as lex fori. QUEEN EMERALD v. EUGENIA LINA

He did that he was guilty of an attempt to commit an offence under s. 471 of the Penal Code but of the offence itself. If the prosecution established certain facts constituting an offence and the Court misapplied the law by charging and convicting an accused person for an offence other than that for which he should have been properly charged, and if notwithstanding such error the accused has by his defence endeavoured to meet the accusation of the commission of the offence then the Appellate Court may alter the charge or finding and convict him for an offence which those facts properly constituted provided the accused be not prejudiced by the alteration in the finding. Such an error is one of form rather than of substance and the alteration by an Appellate Court of the charge or finding would not constitute a retrial expressly on a charge of that offence. LALA OSHA v. In appeal the District Magistrate held that no theft had been committed but he convicted the accused of being members of an unlawful assembly. Held that on the trial the accused were called upon to answer only a charge of theft, they were never called upon to answer any other charge and they therefore could not fairly be convicted on their answer of an offence of an entirely different character. It is on the proceedings taken before the Magistrate that the facts constituting an offence for which a trial is held are made known to the accused, and the law is applied by the Magistrate to the facts established, so as to constitute the charge which the accused is called upon to answer. It therefore cannot be said that sufficient notice was given to the accused, because mention of s. 147 of the Penal Code (making) together with theft was made in the final report of the police as the offences considered to have been established and that the accused must have been made acquainted with such report. JAT SING v. On appeal the Sessions Judge not only found that the common object was the taking of the manroes, but that the dispute between the parties was as to certain land. He, however, dismissed the appeal and confirmed the conviction. 2. — Criminal Procedure Code (Act 2 of 1892) s. 228—Duty of Judge when the jury are uncertain as to the offence committed—A jury after retiring returned to the box and after unanimously finding both prisoners not guilty of the charges framed against them stated to the Judge that they thought an offence had been committed by one of the prisoners but were uncertain as to the section of the Penal Code applicable to his case. The Judge thereupon made over to them a copy of the Penal Code leaving them to decide under what section the offence fell. Held that he had failed in his duty and that he should have asked the jury what doubts they had as to the crime which had been committed, and should have explained to them the law and informed them what offence the facts would prove against the prisoner if they believed those facts. JASPAT SINGH v. QUEEN EMPRESS 1 L. R. 14 Cal. 164

3. — Omission to point out legal bearings—Leading evidence to jury in important cases—On a trial by jury a Sessions Judge in summing up should give a full and detailed statement of the evidence on both sides. He should point out the legal bearing of it and what weight the jury ought to attach to its several parts. His omission to do so if the accused is thereby prejudiced, amounts to such an error in law as would justify a Court of Appeal in setting aside the verdict. No general rule can be laid down as to when a prisoner is prejudiced by a defective summing up but in general if the finding of the jury in such a case is one that an Appeal Court would set aside if the trial had taken place with the aid of assessors the Court will interfere and set the verdict aside. In capital cases and all cases of a serious or complicated nature the Judge ought to read over the evidence in extenso to the jury. REG v. FATECHAND VASTACHAND

[5 Bom. Cr. 85]

4. — Duty of Judge in charging jury—In delivering a charge to the jury it is the duty of the Sessions Judge to call the attention of the jury to the facts and then to leave it to them to consider whether from the facts they conclude that a particular criminal act was done and if they so conclude then to direct them that the case comes within a particular section of the Code. *SRI PRASAD MISHRA v. Where facts are as consistent with a prisoner's innocence as with his guilt, innocence must be presumed; and criminal intent or knowledge is not necessarily imputable to every man who acts contrary to the provisions of the law. *QUEEN v. has made upon his own mind. QUEEN v. DWARKA BATH SEN 13 W. R. Cr. 34

14. ————— A Judge may give the jury his opinion of the guilt or innocence of the prisoner if he shows them clearly that the decision rests with them. QUEEN v. ABDOL JULEEL [W. R. 1884 Cr., 5]

15 ————— A Judge in directing a jury should confine himself to a general commentary on the evidence and a statement of the legal offence proved; should such evidence be credited, he should not give a positive opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the accused person. QUEEN v. BHARTY CHANDER 1 W. R. Cr. 2

QUEEN v. GUNOA BISHEN 1 W. R. Cr. 28

18 ————— Judge's opinion as to certain portion of evidence—It is open to a Judge in charging the jury to express his opinion as to the effect of a certain portion of the evidence, but he should always be careful to add that it is for the jury to form their own opinion. QUEEN EMPRESS v. RUPIN BISWAS 1 L. L. R., 10 Cal. 970

17 ————— Expression of opinion by Judge upon questions of fact—Charge to the jury Form of—Subs. (2) of s 298 of the Code of Criminal Procedure allows a Judge to express to the jury his own opinion upon any questions of fact provided that he leaves the decision upon the questions of fact entirely to the jury. The tendency of the charge as a whole ought to be to give a correct direction to the mind of the jury. Queen v. Gajulu 6 B. L. R. Ap. 50 12 W. R. Cr. 80 referred to. RAHAMAT ALI v. EMPRESS 4 C. W. N. 196

18 ————— Bare statements of prisoners—Evidence taken before Magistrate—Bare statements of prisoners are not admissible in and ought not to be alluded to by the Judge as evidence, nor is evidence taken before the Magistrate unless contradictory of the evidence of the same witnesses as given before the Sessions Court. Evidence in the trial or proper to be put to the jury. QUEEN v. HIRAO SINGH 7 W. R. Cr. 108

19 ————— Evidence of person not having knowledge from his own observation—The evidence of a person stating before the jury upon oath facts which he does not know of his own observation, facts which constitute the substance of the charge against a prisoner and which the jury themselves have to enquire into and arrive at as their verdict, ought not to be allowed to go to the jury and still less so when the person does not orally depose before the jury, but his evidence is presented to them in the form of a written deposition. QUEEN v. I AMOOPAL DHUR

20 ————— Different trials for same crime—Fresh charge to jury—When different trials are held at different times and against different prisoners in respect of the same crime, a new charge to each jury should be delivered in each case. It is

2 MISDIRECTION

21 ——— Misdirection—In giving a warning to a jury not to disbelieve a mass of otherwise consistent evidence because in one or two minor and immaterial points the witness made different statements a Judge exercises a wise discretion and affords no ground for the objection of misdirection to the jury QUEEN v. BUSTE KRAY
[J W R, Cr, 17]

22 ——— Omission to direct on important point—In considering whether a Judge has misdirected the jury the tenor and general effect of the whole summing up should be looked at and if upon the whole summing up the Court is of opinion that substantially the proper direction has been given to the jury it will not interfere though the Judge has omitted to direct the jury expressly on some important point REG v. IESTANT DRYNA
10 Bom 75

23 ——— Omission to aid jury as to facts—Finding on fact by Judge—A summing up to the jury in which the Sessions Judge gave no aid to the jury in the arrangement of the facts which were spoken to by the witness and himself found facts which he should have put to the jury was pronounced defective and a verdict founded thereon was set aside and the prisoner ordered to be released QUEEN v. RAM GOPAL DUTTA
[10 W R, Cr 7]

24 ——— Omission to call attention of jury to evidence of witnesses for defence—In summing up a case to the jury the Judge omitted to call their attention to the evidence of the witnesses for the defence This evidence appeared to the High Court to be untrustworthy Held that the summing up was not defective on account of this omission on the part of the Judge IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF ROCHIA MONATO EMPRESS v. ROCHIA MONATO

25 ——— Judge stating what facts are proved—Erroneous view of law—Evidence Act s 103—Onus of proof—Criminal Procedure Code s 53—It is the province of the jury and not of the Judge to say what facts are or are not proved Where a Judge in giving charge to the jury after stating certain fact said "Hence the reasons given (in the deed for it) are not" then out to be false—Held that the Judge should have left it to the jury to form their own conclusion When there has been a material misdirection in a charge to a jury it is not covered by s 537 of the Code of Criminal Procedure The Judge in stating to the jury that under s 103 of the Evidence Act the onus may be said to lie on the accused to show that the fact in respect of which he was charged with forgery was genuine took an erroneous view of the law and misdirected the jury Empress v. Dhunoo Ka ; I L R 8 Cal 121, followed SADHU SHEKH v. EMPRESS

[4 C W N 576]

28 ——— Duty of Judge—Omission to explain law as bearing on the facts—Per FIELD J—It is the duty of a Judge to give a direction upon the law to the jury so far as to make them understand the law as bearing upon the facts; and if he does not give them an explanation of the law sufficiently comprehensive to enable them to decide the particular issue it is a misdirection IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF JHUBBOO MAHON EMPRESS v. JHUBBOO MAHON

27 ——— Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882) ss 297 423 (d)—Effect of omission to explain the law to jury—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860) ss 143 147 380 395—Practice—In a trial by jury the accused were charged with offences under the Penal Code The Judge while charging the jury omitted to explain the law by which they were to be guided The jury returned a verdict of guilty on all counts except one and the Judge agreeing with the verdict convicted the accused Held that the omission to explain the law to the jury amounted to a misdirection vitiating the verdict within the meaning of s 423 (d) Criminal Procedure Code Wafadar Khan v. Queen Empress I L R 21 Cal 305 relied upon Some statements should appear in the record of a trial by jury to show that the law bearing upon the charges has been explained to the jury JIRAT MANDAL v. QUEEN EMPRESS
I L R, 25 Cal 561

28 ——— Case under cl 26 Letters Patent 1865—Charge to jury Al under standing of—Were misunderstanding on the part of bystanders in Court or counsel engaged in a case of expressions used by a Judge in charging a jury (where it appears that the expressions used by the Judge were such as ought to have been understood by any reasonable man having regard to what was proved in the case and what was said to the jury afterwards) will not constitute misdirection. QUEEN EMPRESS v. SHIB CRUNDER MITTAL
[J L R, 10 Cal 1079]

29 ——— Omission to point out weakness of evidence for prosecution—Error of law—The omission of a Judge to point out to the jury the weakness of the evidence against the accused and the possibility of other persons being the guilty parties does not amount to a positive misdirection. In a case where there was some evidence to go to the jury and no error in law was committed the Court cannot interfere QUEEN v. CHOOVER
[5 W R, Cr, 13]

30 ——— Omission to call attention to fact in favour of accused—Three persons who were attacked and wounded in an affray informed the police on the same day that the persons who had attacked them were A B and C Fifteen days afterwards the same complainants gave to the Magistrate enquiring into the case the names of four witnesses who they said, with the three persons first accused, formed the attacking party. The seven accused were tried jointly at the instance of the Additional Recorder of Lahore and a jury. In his charge to the jury the Additional Recorder omitted to call their attention to the fact that four out of the seven accused had not been mentioned by the prosecutors until after eighteen days had passed over. The prisoners were convicted. Held that the Additional Recorder misdirected the jury that under the circumstances the misdirection prejudiced the four persons last accused; and that the verdict must be set aside as far as they were concerned. LEITCH v. QUEEN EMPRESS

31. Omission to state the defence of accused whether a misdirection—Where the charge to the jury places prominently before the jury all the circumstances that go against the accused, but does not call their attention to any of those that are in their favour and especially when it omits to tell the jury what the defence of the accused is there has been a misdirection sufficient to vitiate the trial. LEITCH v. QUEEN EMPRESS 1 L. L. R., 11 Cal. 10 referred to. RAHMAT ALI v. EMPRESS 4 C. W. N., 100

32. Admission of an admission by defence—Prejudice to prisoner—Held—Where a Judge in his charge to the jury admitted, as receivable evidence, a hearsay statement against the accused, and also an anonymous letter which was put in without an attempt to show how or by whom it was sent it was held that the jury had been misdirected and the accused prejudiced. The High Court on this not being able to say positively on a perusal of the evidence that the accused was innocent did not dispose of the case but ordered a new trial. QUEEN v. CHUNDER MOOMAN MOZOOM DAR 24 W. R. Cr. 77

33. Erroneous direction as to corroboration of accomplices a violence—Held in a case of murder that the Judge had not given a proper direction to the jury in telling them that it was for them to consider whether the evidence of the accomplice was strictly corroborated as to the prisoners that it was not enough that the evidence did disclose a state of facts consistent with the possibility of the truth of the accomplice's story; and that the Judge ought to have gone through the history of the crime as detailed by the accomplices to point out any independent evidence proving facts showing that the prisoners were or must have been present at or cognizant of the murder. QUEEN v. KAROO 8 W. R. Cr. 44

QUEEN v. KHOTUB SHIEH 8 W. R. Cr. 17

34. Erroneous direction where evidence of accomplice is uncorroborated—Held that where the evidence of an accomplice is uncorroborated the correct practice requires a Sessions Judge not merely to tell the jury that it is unusual to convict on such evidence but that he should also tell them that it is unsafe and contrary both to principle and practice to do so; yet that it is omission to state this does not amount to an error in law. REG v. INAM 3 Bom. Cr. 57 commented on REG v. GANU BIV DHARONI 6 Bom. Cr., 57

35. Erroneous direction where evidence of approver is uncorroborated—Conviction and sentence set aside (OLOVEN J. dissenting) as to two of the prisoners on the ground that there was a misdirection to the jury because the Judge in summing up omitted to advise the jury not to convict upon the uncorroborated evidence of an approver and because he treated as corroborative that which was no corroboration in law. QUEEN v. NAHAB JAN 8 W. R., Cr. 19

36. Criminal Procedure Code s. 297—Evidence of accomplices—Corroboration—A Judge should caution a jury not to accept the evidence of an approver unless it is corroborated; the omission to do so amounts to misdirection. QUEEN EMPRESS v. AHMEDOJA

37. Corroboration—

Improper reception of evidence—Accomplices—Evidence Act (I of 1872) ss. 114 and (b) 113—Criminal Procedure Code (X of 1852) ss. 237-261—Letters Patent of 1866 s. 20—Rivier—(see his which upon review a certificate having been granted by the Advocate General under a 26 of the Letters Patent a conviction was quashed on the ground of improper reception of evidence and misdirection) The accused being upon his trial at the Assize at Farnham the two principal witnesses for the prosecution were G and J to whom pardons were tendered by the committing Magistrate under s. 237 of the Criminal Procedure Code and who had accepted the pardons. The Judge read to the jury statements (which had not been admitted in evidence) by G and J for posting to have been taken under s. 261. Held that the improper reception of such evidence constituted a decision erroneous in point of law calculated to prejudice the prisoner. The Judge further charged the jury that they were not to convict upon the evidence of G if satisfied that he was an accomplice and uncorroborated but coupled the direction with a strong expression of opinion that it was not an accomplice. Held that this constituted a misdirection in fact though not in form calculated to prejudice the prisoner's case. QUEEN EMPRESS v. O'HARA 1 L. L. R. 17 Cal., 643

38. Omission to tell jury that evidence is inadmissible—Material error—Held (WARDEN J. dissenting) that the omission of the Sessions Judge to tell the jury that the statement of one prisoner is not evidence against his fellow prisoner is a material error and on that dealt with the evidence of each of the prisoners separately. REG v. MIYA TALAB JALAN

[6 Bom. Cr., 10]

39 ————— Confession of accused—Subsequently retracted—Criminal Procedure Code s 103—Search by police of stolen property—It cannot be laid down as an absolute rule of law that a confession made and subsequently retracted by a prisoner cannot be accepted as evidence of his guilt without independent corroborative evidence. A jury should be asked with reference to such confessions not whether they were corroborated by independent evidence but whether having regard to the circumstances under which they were made and retracted and all the circumstances connected with them it was more probable that the original confessions or the statements retracting them were true. Criminal Procedure Code s 103 does not justify the view that the persons called upon to witness a search are to be selected by any person other than the officer conducting the search. If the Sessions Judge considers that the evidence of an Inspector of Police is necessary he ought not to annul it on his absence in charging the jury but he should intimate his opinion to the Public Prosecutor and give him the opportunity of calling that official. It is wrong for a Judge in charging the jury to say that a head constable committed a breach of the police regulations in conducting a search with a loose shirt on without examining him on the matter and taking evidence as to whether or not his body was examined before he began the search. QUEEN EMPRESS v RAMAN

40 ————— Retracted confessions—Misdirection as to admissibility of such confessions without corroborative evidence—Error in mode of treating evidence—The accused were tried for murder. The Sessions Judge in his charge to the jury discussed the evidence generally describing it as very poor evidence which standing alone amounted to nothing. He also told the jury that as regards retracted confessions the law is that you are to look for corroboration in independent evidence. If that supplies such corroboration that you can confidently say the confessions must be absolutely true you can act upon them otherwise not. Held that the charge was defective. The Sessions Judge ought to have summed up the evidence to the jury calling their attention to the material parts of it and leaving them to form their own opinion on it in trial treating it generally. Held also that the Judge misdirected the jury as there is no law that a retracted confession cannot be taken unless it is corroborated in material parts by independent reliable evidence. 42 ————— Alibi Proof of—Erroneous direction as to admissibility of document—Upon a plea of alibi by the prisoners that they had left Patna on the 12th April 1869 and reached Port Canning on the 20th of the same month and were not at Patna on the 30th May the prosecutor adduced in evidence a written statement engrossed on two pieces of stamp paper one bearing the endorsement of a stamp vendor as sold on the 13th and the other on the 18th April filed on the 20th April and alleged to bear the verification of the prisoners. No evidence was adduced to prove that the prisoners had signed it. The Judge drew the attention of the jurors to this document and adverted to it in these terms. If the written statement was drawn up on an earlier date than the date it bears it could not have been prepared earlier than the day on which the principal stamp was bought—i.e. 18th. Held that the document should not have been received in evidence and that there was a misdirection which contributed materially towards the jury finding the prisoners guilty. QUEEN v GAJRAJ

43 ————— Belonging to gang of thieves—Penal Code s 401—Proof of association—In the trial of prisoners for the offences of belonging to a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing theft or robbery (s 401 Penal Code) the Judge should in his charge put clearly to the jury—(1) the necessity of the proof of association; (2) the need of proving that that association was for the purpose of habitual theft and that habit is to be proved by an "aggregate of acts." [I.L.R. 27 Cal. 130]

44 ————— Culpable homicide—Provocation—In charging a jury on the point of provocation in a case of culpable homicide a Judge should tell the jury that to bring the case within the exception to a 300 Penal Code the prisoner must have been deprived of the power of self-control by grave and sudden provocation; that there ought to have been sufficient cause for such loss of self-control; and that the provocation was not wilfully caused by the prisoner as an excuse for his harm. 48 ——— *Acquittal—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1882) s 423—Settled as a result of the judgment—Power of Appellate Court to deal with the case—Charge under Penal Code ss 395 412—It is the duty of the Judge to call the attention of the jury to the different elements constituting the offence and to deal with the evidence by which it is proved and to make the accused liable. Failure to do so amounts to misdirection. Queen Empress v. Balga Ramya I L R 15 Bom 369 followed. Statements by some of the accused persons which do not amount to a confession and which do not in any way incriminate them are not admissible in evidence against any persons other than those making them. Omission to direct the jury that in dealing with the evidence against the accused other than those making the statements they are not to take into consideration such statements also amounts to misdirection. If the verdict of the jury is set aside on any of the grounds mentioned in cl (d) of s 423 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1882) then there is no restriction on the powers of the Appellate Court to deal with a case of which it has complete jurisdiction in any of the manners provided in that section. The law now lays down that when the verdict of the jury is set aside the Court must necessarily direct a new trial. Nasir Khan v. Queen Empress I L R 21 Cal 290 disapproved. The Curator v. The charge concluded with these words—'I now leave the case in your hands. If you believe the charge of dacoity to be false then you shall find the prisoner guilty under s 211 Penal Code otherwise you shall acquit him.' Held that the charge was erroneous and defective. Held further that the Judge was in error in not putting before the jury all the elements which constitute the offence under s 211 of the Indian Penal Code. Held also that the Judge should in the operative part of the charge instead of directing as he did have prominently placed before the jury one of the most essential elements of the charge under s 211 namely that in instituting the false charge of dacoity there was no just or lawful ground for the charge and the jury should have been asked to say whether the charge was false and whether in instituting that charge there was no just or lawful ground. Tomislav Manovic v. [7 W R, Cr 105

49 ——— *Misdirection—There is no misdirection in a case of false evidence in a Judge pointing out to the jury the contrast between the evidence for the prosecution and the course followed by the prisoner (namely a simple denial of the charge coupled with a refusal to examine the witnesses in attendance) so long as the Judge leaves it to the jury to decide between the opposing statements and to credit whichever they thought most worthy of belief. QUEEN v. It was proved that the endorsement of registration which appeared on the document was a forgery. In his charge to the jury the Sessions Judge omitted to deal with the fact of the accused being in possession of the property. He also directed that the registration endorsement having been proved to be a forgery it was for the accused persons to establish the genuineness of the document. Held that the Sessions Judge in omitting to deal with the fact of the possession of the accused and in throwing the onus of proving the genuineness of the document upon them had misdirected the jury. ANCOUSHEED KAZI v. CHARGE TO JURY—continued3. SPECIAL CASES—continued

Intention—In a trial with a jury under a 366 of the Penal Code the Judge on the question of intent charged the jury in the following words—It remains only to consider the question of intent. The charge was that the girl was kidnapped in order that she might be forced or seduced to illicit intercourse. As to this it is sufficient to say that no other inference is possible under the circumstances. When a man carries off a young girl at night from her father's house the presumption is that he did so with the intent indicated above. It would be open to him if he had admitted the kidnapping to prove that he had some other object but no other object is apparent on the face of the facts. Held that this amounted to a misdirection of the jury. The question of intent was a pure question of fact but the way in which it had been put to the jury left them no option but to adopt the view taken by the Judge. QUEEN EMPRESS v. HUJRES

54. — Murder—Distinction between murder and culpable homicide—When a prisoner is on his trial by a jury upon a charge of murder it is the duty of the Judge to point out to the jury accurately the difference between murder and culpable homicide not amounting to murder and to direct the attention of the jury to the evidence and to leave them to find the facts and say (under the direction of the Judge as regards the law) of what offence the prisoner is guilty. QUEEN v. [9 W. R. Cr. 61]

55. — Possession of forged document—Penal Code as 474 475—Possession of forged documents bearing counterfeit marks—Ingredients of the offence—To support a charge under s. 474 of the Penal Code it is necessary for the prosecution to prove (1) that the documents in respect of which the charge is brought are forged (2) that the accused knew them to be forged (3) that he was in possession of them (4) that he intended that they should be fraudulently or dishonestly used as genuine and (5) that each of the documents is of the description mentioned in s. 466 or s. 467 of the Penal Code. To support a charge under the latter part of s. 475 of the Penal Code it is necessary for the prosecution to prove (1) that the accused was in possession of the papers referred to in the charge (2) that the devices or marks were counterfeited on them; (3) that the marks were such as are used for the purpose of authenticating any document described in s. 474; and (4) that the accused intended that the marks should be used for the purpose of giving the appearance of authenticity to documents either then forged or thereafter to be forged. The accused was charged with being in possession of forged documents an offence punishable under ss. 474 and 475 of the Penal Code. In his summing up the Sessions Judge after stating that the documents were admitted by the defence to be forged, told the jury that the only issue they had to decide was whether the forged documents were in the possession of the accused and whether the nature of one or all events of the documents was such as to connect them with the accused being the kind of document he would be likely to have in his house and he alone and that if they found this issue in the affirmative they must return a verdict of guilty. Held that the charge to the jury was defective and misleading and insufficiently complied with the requirements of s. 297 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. QUEEN EMPRESS v. 57. — Rape—Erroneous verdict owing to misdirection—Failure of justice—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882) ss 418 423 (d) and 537

—On a charge of rape the Judge in his charge to the jury said You will observe that this sexual intercourse was against the girl's will and without her consent etc. instead of saying as he ought to have done you will have to determine upon the evidence in this case whether the intercourse was against the girl's will etc. and the charge went on in the same style of stating to the jury what had been proved instead of leaving it to them to decide what in their opinion was proved. In the concluding sentence of the charge the Judge said You have seen the witnesses and I have no doubt that you will return a just verdict. Held that such a charge amounting to a clear misdirection and that the verdict was erroneous owing to such misdirection. Even the concluding sentence did not satisfy the requirements of a proper charge. The provisions in s. 413 (f) and s. 537 of the Criminal Procedure Code do not require that the Court is to go through the facts and find for itself whether the verdict is actually erroneous upon the facts. ALI FAKIR v. The common object alleged by the prosecution was to compel the payment of certain money by one of the persons of the opposite party. Some of the accused who admitted their presence at the scene of the occurrence stated that they had been attacked on account of an altercation being made that one of the opposite party had enticed away another's wife and that they had merely acted in self-defence. The case was tried before a jury and on the close of the case for the prosecution the Sessions Judge concluding that possibly the common object alleged by the prosecution might be considered not to have been proved amended the charge and added an alternative common object to it viz. that the object of the assembly was

When a man carries off a young girl at night from her father's house the presumption is that he did so with the intent indicated above. It would be open to him if he had admitted the kidnapping to prove that he had some other object but no other object is apparent on the face of the facts. Held that this amounted to a misdirection of the jury. The question of intent was a pure question of fact but the way in which it had been put to the jury left them no option but adopt the view taken by the Judge. QUEEN EMPRESS v HUGHES

54. — Murder—Distinction between murder and culpable homicide—When a prisoner is on his trial by a jury upon a charge of murder it is the duty of the Judge to point out to the jury accurately the difference between murder and culpable homicide not amounting to murder and to direct the attention of the jury to the evidence and to leave them to find the facts and say (under the direction of the Judge as regards the law) of what offence the prisoner is guilty. QUEEN v SHAHJEE BEO

55. — Possession of forged document—Penal Code ss 474 475—Possession of forged documents bearing counterfeit marks—Ingredients of the offence—To support a charge under s 474 of the Penal Code it is necessary for the prosecution to prove (1) that the documents in respect of which the charge is brought are forged (2) that the accused knew them to be forged (3) that he was in possession of them (4) that he intended that they should be fraudulently or dishonestly used as genuine and (5) that each of the documents is of the description mentioned in s. 466 or s. 467 of the Penal Code. To support a charge under the latter part of s. 475 of the Penal Code it is necessary for the prosecution to prove (1) that the accused was in possession of the papers referred to in the charge (2) that the devices or marks were counterfeited on them; (3) that the marks were such as are used for the purpose of authenticating any document described in s. 467; and (4) that the accused intended that the marks should be used for the purpose of giving the appearance of authenticity to documents either then forged or thereafter to be forged. The accused was charged with being in possession of forged documents an offence punishable under ss. 474 and 475 of the Penal Code. In his summing up the Sessions Judge after stating that the documents were admitted by the defence to be forgeries, told the jury that the only issue they had to decide was whether the forged documents were in the possession of the accused, and whether the nature of one at all events of the documents was such as to connect them with the accused being the kind of document he would be likely to have in his house and he alone and that if they found this issue in the affirmative they must return a verdict of guilty. Held that the charge to the jury was defective and misleading and insufficiently complied with the requirements of s. 297 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. QUEEN EMPRESS v ARAJI PANCHANDRA

56. — Private defence Right of—Penal Code s 100 cls 1 2 and 6—Misdirection—Held that it was no misdirection on the part of the Judge in not calling the attention of the jury to cls. 1 and 2 of s. 100 of the Penal Code when he particularly called their attention to cl 6 of that section. QUEEN v MOOKHTARAM MUNDLE

57. — Rape—Erroneous verdict owing to misdirection—Failure of justice—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1852) ss 418 423 (d) and 537—On a charge of rape the Judge in his charge to the jury said You will observe that this carnal intercourse was against the girl's will and without her consent etc. instead of saying as he ought to have done you will have to determine upon the evidence in this case whether the intercourse was against the girl's will etc. and the charge went on in the same style of stating to the jury what had been proved instead of leaving it to them to decide what in their opinion was proved. In the concluding sentence of the charge the Judge said You have seen the witnesses and I have no doubt that you will return a just verdict. Held that such a charge amounted to a clear misdirection and that the verdict was erroneous owing to such misdirection. Even the concluding sentence did not satisfy the requirements of a proper charge. The provisions in s. 423 (d) and s. 537 of the Criminal Procedure Code do not require that the Court is to go through the facts and find for itself whether the verdict is actually erroneous upon the facts. ALI FAKIR v QUEEN EMPRESS

58. — Rioting—Unlawful assembly—Common object—Verdict of jury—Alternative common object—Criminal Procedure Code (1852) s 303—Fourteen accused were charged with rioting armed with deadly weapons and with murder and causing grievous hurt during such riot. The common object alleged by the prosecution was to compel the payment of certain money by one of the persons of the opposite party. Some of the accused who admitted their presence at the scene of the occurrence stated that they had been attacked on account of an allegation being made that one of the opposite party had enticed away another's wife and that they had merely acted in self-defence. The case was tried before a jury and on the close of the case for the prosecution the Sessions Judge, enquiring that possibly the common object alleged by the prosecution might be considered not to have been proved, amended the charge and added an alternative common object to it viz. that the object of the assembly was to punish one of the opposite party for enticing away another's wife. There was no evidence on the record to prove the alternative common object it being based solely on a portion of the statements of some of the accused and the Sessions Judge put it to the jury that it was an inference that could possibly be drawn from the evidence but it was for them to draw that inference or not. The jury convicted all the accused without specifying which common object they relied on and were not asked under s 303 of the Code of Criminal Procedure any questions for the purpose of ascertaining what their verdict was based on. Held that the Judge had misdirected the jury and that the verdict of the jury leaving it uncertain what was the common object which actuated the accused, was bad in law and that the conviction must be set aside and the case retried. Held further that it was unfair to use a part of the statements of some of the accused put forward in their defence as justifying the use of force by them in repelling the attack of the opposite party for the purpose of showing a common object as against them and that the statements should have been taken in their entirety and could not in any event be used as against the rest of the accused. WADAB KHAN v QUEEN EXPRESS

59 ——— Stolen property retaining of—Penal Code s 411—The accused were charged with retaining stolen property under s 411 of the Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860). The Sessions Judge in his charge to the jury merely directed them to find whether the property was stolen and whether it was retained by the accused. Held that the charge was defective and amounted to a misdirection. The Sessions Judge should have directed the jury to find (1) whether the property was stolen; (2) whether it was dishonestly retained; and (3) whether the accused knew or had reason to believe the same to be stolen property. Unless these questions were found by the jury in the affirmative the accused could not legally be convicted of an offence under s 411 of the Penal Code. QUEEN EXPRESS v BABA SOKTA of mind and he directed them to find whether the accused was insane at the time he committed the offence. Held that the issue as to whether the accused was of unsound mind at the time of the trial and incapable of properly making his defence was a preliminary issue to that put by the Sessions Judge and should under s 425 of the Code of Criminal Procedure have been first submitted to the jury. QUEEN v DOORJODHIV SHAMONTI alias DEKIO BOZ

1 — Nomination of ship's agents by freighters—Right of agents to sue on charter-party—Ships going seeking *Meaning of—A charter party made between the defendants (the owners of the Seaforth) and H & Co (the freighters) provided that the owners should employ at the ports of discharge the consignee nominated by the freighters to transact the ship business there inwards and outwards on the customary terms, not exceeding 21 per cent. on an amt of freight payable inwards and 6 per cent outwards. H & Co nominated the plaintiffs to transact the ship business in Bombay (a port of discharge) with the knowledge and consent of the master of the Seaforth and the plaintiffs accepted and acted under such nomination. The defendants refused to pay the plaintiffs commission on the outward freight of the Seaforth on the ground that under the circumstances under which such freight was procured the plaintiffs were not under the charter party entitled to receive commission on it. It is held that the plaintiffs were sufficiently within the operation of the charter party to maintain a suit for it in breach of such clauses if it as were inserted for their benefit. Meaning of the mercantile expression of ship going seeking discussed. BLACKWALL & Co v Jones & Co 7 Bom O C 144*

on unloading and right delivery of the cargo; one third by A's acceptance at three months from the sailing of the ship (the same to be returned if the cargo were not duly delivered) and the remainder by like bill at three months from the date of delivery in London of the certificate of right delivery of the cargo. The charter party provided for payment of a commission on the contract ship lost or not lost that the £150 should be advanced in cash at the port of discharge on account of the freight against the captain a draft on M. The cargo was loaded accordingly a bill of lading was given for the same and the ship sailed from Cardiff on the 8th October 1863. M having consigned the cargo to A & Co who carried on business at Madras. On the same day the owners drew a bill on M at three months for £261 1s 10d, being one-third of the freight. On the 10th October 1863 the general agents in London of A & Co advanced to M on A & Co's account and out of their funds £700 received as security for such advance the bill of lading blank and endorsed and forwarded the bill to A & Co. On the 29th October 1863 M accepted the bill for £261 1s 10d and in the following December he suspended payment and the bill was protested. On the 14th January 1864 the ship arrived at Madras and thereupon A & Co withheld payment of the bill of lading applied for the delivery of the cargo and offered to advance the £150 in cash pursuant to the charter-party but the captain claimed to retain the cargo for the value of the dishonoured bill and the balance of freight due. Held that the terms of the contract were at variance with the right of lien so claimed and that it was not suspended by the bill nor revived by the freighters' insolvency. ABDUTH NOT v DARGIE 3 Mad., 58

3 — Freight—Bill of lading—Liability of master where quantity signed for is more than cargo shipped—The plaintiff chartered a ship of which he was master to one C H C of Calcutta, under a charter party by which it was agreed that the ship (which was then at Melbourne) should proceed to certain ports and there load a cargo for Calcutta, the cargo to be delivered to the charterer at Calcutta on being paid freight at and after the rate of the lump sum of £1 150 for the full reach of the ship; the said freight to be paid on the unloading and right delivery of the cargo as customary less any advances that may have been made. On the arrival of the ship at Calcutta C H C requested the plaintiff to deliver the cargo to the defendants as his agents, which the plaintiff agreed to do on having payment of the freight guaranteed by the defendants. The defendants were bona fide holders of the bills of lading which had been signed by the plaintiff in respect of the cargo. They sent to the agents of the plaintiff in Calcutta the following letter: As it will be necessary for us for the protection of our interests to get delivery of the cargo, and as we do not care about further trouble in the matter we agree to guarantee payment of the balance of freight due on the charter party less any claims for short delivery etc. On an unloading there was found to be a deficiency in quantity between the goods mentioned in the bills of lading and those actually shipped and delivered. Held that notwithstanding this the plaintiff was entitled to the whole of the freight specified in the charter party and was justified in keeping the cargo until the freight was paid. DONS v. STEWART

4 ——— Conditions precedent—Non on her passage—Breach of warranty—Principal and agent—Undisclosed principal—The plaintiffs entered into a contract of charter party with the defendants whereby it was agreed between them and the defendants acting for the owners that the steamer Atoll now on her passage to Calcutta being tight staunch and strong etc. shall receive on board from the charterers a complete cargo of merchandise to consist of 700 tons dead weight and being so laden shall therewith proceed to London with liberty to call for any legal purpose at any intermediate port or ports; freight to be paid on the above cargo on right delivery of the same at and after the rate of £4 2 6 per ton; charterers to have the option of cancelling the charter party if the steamer has not arrived in Calcutta on 15th April 1871. The defendants signed the charter party as agents of steamer Atoll. The steamer was not at the time the charter party was entered into on her way to Calcutta being then in the port of London and she did not start for some days after the date of the charter party. She touched at Madras and Colombo on her way and did not arrive in Calcutta until 11th April. Rates of freight having declined since the middle of March at which time it was alleged the steamer ought to have arrived the plaintiffs sued the defendants for damages. Held the defendants were liable. The statement in the charter party that the steamer was on her passage to Calcutta was a condition precedent. SCHILLER v. FINLAY

5 ——— Ship unable to enter port or lie there without previous lightening—Safe port or as near thereto as she may safely get always afloat—Rights of parties—Where a vessel is chartered to load a full and complete cargo and being so loaded to proceed therewith to a safe port or so near thereto as she may safely get and deliver the same always afloat the master is not bound to sign bills of lading for or to sail to a port where the vessel cannot by reason of her draught of water lie and discharge always afloat without being previously lightened even if the cost of the requisite lightening would by the charter party fall on the charterers. By the terms of a charter party a vessel was to take in a full cargo at Bombay and therewith proceed to a "safe port in the Mediterranean (Spanish ports excluded)" as ordered on signing bills of lading or so near thereto as she may safely get and deliver the same to the said charterers or their assignees always afloat. Marseilles was at first named as the port of discharge but subsequently the vessel was ordered to Cette a French port a little to the west of Marseilles and bills of lading made out for Cette were tendered to the master for signature. The master refused to sign the bills of lading or sail for Cette. The vessel a draught of water when loaded was such that she could not have entered or lain afloat in Cette harbour without discharging a portion of her cargo. The cost of lightening the vessel by lighters outside the harbour would under the charter-party fall on the charterers and they were willing to incur the expenses necessary for that purpose. Held that it was no breach of the charter party by the master to refuse to sail to Cette or to sign bills of lading for that port. *GRAHAM & Co v. 8 ——— Principal and agent—Charter party a deed by agents for master and owner—Parties to suit—Liability of master—Liability of Agents—Master of ship the agent of charterer to sign bill of lading—Right of master to recover from charterers sums paid by master as damages for short delivery of cargo—Appropriation of payments—Contract Act (IX of 1872) ss 69 230 235—By a charter party dated 10th September 1880 F M & Co as agents for master and owner let the steamship Hutton to E for a term of not less than three and not more than four months for the sum of Rs 15 000 per month payable in advance. By subsequent agreement the term was extended to 30th March 1881 and the charterer was to pay at the rate of Rs 18 000 a month for the extended time. On 21st February 1881 the ship being about to proceed on her last voyage to Calcutta and thence to Bombay E finding himself unable to pay more than Rs 6 000 out of the sum of Rs 18 000 which was then due as hire for the month ending 9th March 1881 requested the plaintiff to pay F M & Co on his behalf the remaining Rs 12 000. The plaintiffs did so in consideration of an agreement whereby E assigned to them all the freight payable to E and all benefits under the said charter-party in respect of the then intended voyage of the Hutton. It was also agreed between the plaintiffs and F that the said ship should be consigned to the plaintiffs at Calcutta and also to them at Bombay and that the plaintiffs should receive all the freight, passage money etc. to be recovered for the said voyage the plaintiffs charging two per cent commission on the gross value of the freight shipped in Calcutta and two per cent on the amount of freight collected by them in Bombay and interest on the said sum of Rs 12 000 at the rate of nine per cent per annum. Due notice of this agreement was given to F M & Co on the 11th March E being unable to pay the Rs 6 000 requested the plaintiffs to pay that sum to F M & Co on his behalf which the plaintiffs did—E agreeing that the said payment should be on the same terms as those on which the Rs 12 000 had been paid. The ship having proceeded to Calcutta returned with cargo to Bombay where she arrived on 2nd April 1881. F M & Co, as agents for master and owner refused to allow the plaintiffs to collect the freight payable in Bombay and collected it themselves. The plaintiffs brought his suit in the first instance against the owner and the master of the Hutton (first and second defendants) praying for an account of the moneys received by the defendants or their agents in respect of the freight and for payment of the balances found due after deducting the sums properly payable to the defendants for hire of the ship and for R400 damages sustained by the plaintiffs by reason of the wrongful act of the defendants whereby the plaintiffs had been deprived of the two per cent commission. The plaintiffs alleged that the balances due to them would be about R9 500. The first defendant did not appear. The second defendant (the master) contended that he was not liable that F M & Co had been especially appointed as agents of the owner; that they were not his (the master's) agents, and that they had no authority to sign the charter party for him. He admitted that the sum of R12 000 had been paid to F M & Co by the plaintiffs as agents for the owner but as to the R6 000 he denied that it had been paid to F M & Co on his account or on account of the owner. He further alleged that there was a large sum due by E in respect of hire of the ship and other proper claims against him under the charter party and that the defendants were therefore justified in refusing the demands of the plaintiffs as assignees of E until the whole of their claims against E were liquidated. He alleged that F M & Co had received the freight of the ship amounting to R20 420 and he claimed a lien on this sum in respect of the sum of R19,282 due for hire and other charges on the said ship and R605 for money paid for short delivery of goods. The plaintiffs subsequently made F M & Co defendants to the suit. In their written statement F M & Co stated that they had signed the charter party as agents only and not as principals and they contended that the plaintiffs could not proceed simultaneously against the first defendant and the second defendant but must elect to proceed separately against either and further that the plaintiffs could not proceed simultaneously against themselves (F M & Co) and the second defendant but should elect to proceed separately against either. They admitted the receipt of the R12 000 as agents for the first defendant and not as agents of the second defendant. As to the R6 000 they alleged that it had been paid to them not on account of the Hutton but in respect of claims which they had against E in connection with the Glan Gordon, another ship which had been chartered by E. They admitted the receipt of the freight of the Hutton amounting to R20,426 but claimed a lien on this sum in respect of hire and other proper charges due under the charter party. Held that the second defendant (the master) was not liable on the charter party. He had given no authority to F M & Co to sign it as his agents and his conduct in acting under the charter party being referable to his character of and duty as master did not amount to ratification. But inasmuch as he claimed to deduct from the freight received in Bombay sums which were paid either by him or to F M & Co for him he was so far a proper party to the suit. Held also that under s. 230 of the Contract Act (IX of 18,2) F M & Co were not liable as principals on the charter party as they appeared on the face of the charter party to have signed merely as agents. But they were liable under s. 235 of the Contract Act

for having untrue represented themselves to be the authorized agents of the master to enter on his behalf into the contract therein contained. Their liability was limited to the amount which could have been recovered from the master if he had really been their principal. No difference was made in their liability by the fact that the owner was also liable. As to the R6 000—Held on the evidence that the plaintiffs at the time of the payment had specifically appropriated this sum to the hire then due for the Hutton. Held further that the charter party was one of the class known as locatio navis et operarum magistri; that under such a charter party the master would as between owner and charterer sign bills of lading as agent of the charterer; that as between the owner and the charterer the latter was liable to defray the damages for non performance of the contracts contained in the bills of lading including damages for short delivery of cargo; and that such being the liability of E as charterer the plaintiffs as his assignees were bound by all the equities affecting him so that the defendants might set off as against the plaintiffs whatever the owner of the Hutton might have set off against E if he had been the plaintiff. The second defendant (the master) alleged that he had paid in Bombay certain sums of money to consignees as damages for short delivery of cargo and he claimed credit for such payments as against the plaintiffs. Held that he had no power to bind E by making such payments on his behalf in Bombay where both E and the plaintiffs were resident without the consent either of E or of the plaintiffs. In order to establish these charges against E and his assignees (the plaintiffs) it was necessary for the defendants to prove either that they were in fact due in which case the master would be justified in paying them under s. 69 of the Contract Act or that their correctness had been admitted by E or his agents. The defendants having failed to produce the required proof the claim of the second defendant was disallowed. HASONDHOY VISRAM v CLAPHAM

7 — Misdescription of tonnage of ship—Misrepresentation in contract—Contract Act (XI of 1872) ss 10 13 14 18 19—Condition precedent—The defendants in Bombay chartered a ship from the plaintiffs which was described in the charter party as of the measurement of about 2 700—2 800 tons nett register. The ship had never been in Bombay and was wholly unknown to the defendants. Evidence was given that in the negotiations for the charter party the plaintiffs stated to the defendants that the ship was certainly not more than 2 800 tonnage register. She however turned out to be of the registered tonnage of 3 045 tons and the defendants refused to accept her in fulfilment of the charter party. Held by PARSONS J that the defendants were entitled to treat the contract as void by reason of the erroneous statement of the plaintiffs with regard to the size of the ship (Contract Act IX of 1872 ss 10 13 14 18 19). Held on appeal by SAROJY C J and PARSONS J (1) that the representation in the charter party as to the tonnage of the vessel was intended to be a substantive part of the contract between the parties (2) that the statement in the contract was a condition precedent of which the defendants were entitled to avail themselves whether or no they would have suffered loss had they accepted the ship (3) that the facts justified the defendants in repudiating the contract OCEANIC STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY v. 8 ————— Optional clause—

Choice of ports to load cargo—Election of port — The plaintiff chartered the defendants ship to proceed from Bombay to Jeddah and thence carry a cargo of pilgrims to Calcutta. The charter party contained the following clause — Owners to have the option of requiring the charterer to ship salt at Ras Rawayah or at Aden to fill up the lower holds of the steamer at a lump sum of Rs 12,000 payable before delivery at the port of discharge Rs 2,000 to be deposited by the charterer on account of the above freight, out of which Rs 1,500 to be paid here (Bombay) 48 hours before sailing and Rs 600 before departure of the steamer from Jeddah. Before the ship left Bombay the plaintiff was called upon to pay and paid the Rs 1,500 advance freight. On the ship's arrival at Jeddah the plaintiff was required by the defendants' agent to name the port where he intended to load the salt and pay the Rs 500 named in the charter party. The plaintiff in reply named Aden and paid the Rs 500 which the defendants' agent acknowledged as received for filling up salt to go to Aden. This was on the 22nd July. The captain however, believing that the plaintiff would not find salt at Aden for Calcutta, refused to send to Aden to load the salt unless the expenses of going there and returning to Jeddah for the pilgrims was guaranteed by the plaintiff which the plaintiff refused to do. Subsequently on the 30th July the captain on the instructions of the defendants, informed the plaintiff that the choice of the port to load salt was with the defendants and that they named Ras Rawayah as the port where the plaintiff was required to load his salt and refused to go to Aden. The plaintiff refused to go to Ras Rawayah. There was to the defendants' knowledge no salt at Ras Rawayah. There was plenty of salt at Aden though none offering for Calcutta owing to the prices ruling at the latter port. The captain refusing to load the pilgrims unless the balance of the Rs 12,000 salt freight was paid in advance the plaintiff paid it and brought this suit to recover the whole of the said sum. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to succeed (1) because by the true construction of the contract the choice of the port must be taken to be with the plaintiff who had to do all that was necessary to provide the salt the option given by the contract to the owners being as to whether they should require salt to be loaded or not; and (2) because if the election of the port was with the defendants they through their agent at Jeddah, conclusively determined their election in favour of Aden at latest on the 22nd July when they accepted the Rs 500 for filling up salt to go to Aden. ABDUL RAHMAN ALLARAKHIA v. HASANBHAI VISRAM

9 ————— Mistake in date—

Mistake mutual or unilateral—Rectification or rescission of contract — The plaintiffs required a steamer to sail from Jeddah fifteen days after the Haj in order to convey pilgrims returning to Bombay. They chartered a steamer from the defendants in June 1891 for that purpose. The defendants chartered their steamers by English dates. The date inserted in the charter party was the 10th August 1891 (fifteen days after the Haj). The 10th August 1892 was given or accepted by the plaintiffs in the belief that it corresponded with the fifteenth day after the Haj. The defendants had no belief on the subject and contracted only with respect to the English date. The 19th July 1892 and not the 10th August 1892 in fact corresponded with the fifteenth day after the Haj. On finding out the mistake in March 1892 the plaintiff brought this suit for rectification of the charter party by the insertion of the correct date the 19th July 1892 instead of the erroneous date the 10th August 1892. Meanwhile the defendants had let all their steamers and could not give the plaintiff one for the 19th July 1892. Held that the agreement was one for the 10th August 1892 and that as that date was a matter materially inducing the agreement there could be no rectification but only rescission even if both parties were under a mistake. Held further that the mistake was not mutual but on the plaintiffs' part only and therefore there could be no rectification. A plaintiff seeking rectification must show that there was an actual concluded contract antecedent to the instrument sought to be rectified, and that such contract is inaccurately represented in the instrument. ABDUL RAHMAN ALLARAKHIA v. BOMBAY AND PERSIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY

10 ————— Bill of lading—

Freight—Rate of freight in charter party—Contract by sub-charterer with shipper for freight at lower rate—Refusal by captain to sign bills of lading at lower rate than rate in charter party—Payment by shipper of difference under protest — On 3rd March 1898 A. D. & Co. a firm of freight jobbers in Bombay contracted to provide the plaintiffs with freight for 3,000 tons of cargo to Liverpool at 16s 6d per ton in a steamer to be subsequently named and on the same day handed to the plaintiffs three shipping orders addressed to the captain of the ship the name of which was to be afterwards inserted. In these shipping orders the higher and lower rate clause was as follows — "Bill of lading if required at lower or higher rate difference payable here as customary. This clause the plaintiffs struck out from each of the shipping orders according to their usual practice. On 11th May 1898, the defendants chartered the steamship Paddislow of which they were also the owners' agents in Bombay and on the 12th May assigned a half share of their interest under the charter party to K D & Co. By the charter party a full and complete cargo was to be loaded and the freight was to be £1 10 per ton. The captain however was authorized to sign clean bills of lading at any rate of freight required by the charterers without prejudice to the charter-party but at not less than the chartered rate unless the difference was paid in cash before sailing. K D & Co having thus sub-chartered the Paddington declared that steamer to the plaintiffs for 2747 tons of cargo under their contract of the 3rd March 1898 and the name of the steamer was then entered in the shipping orders for that amount of cargo. The plaintiffs thereupon commenced to load a cargo of wheat. By the 21st June 2100 tons had been put on board; mate's receipts were given to the plaintiffs and bills of lading were prepared by them stating the rate of freight to be 16s 6d per ton as per the shipping orders and were presented for signature to the captain. He refused to sign them unless the difference between 16s 6d and the chartered rate of £1 10 was paid to him as provided in the charter party. The plaintiffs thereupon refused to ship any more cargo and demanded the return of the cargo already shipped on board the Paddington. On the 4th June the Paddington sailed from Bombay the captain having previously authorized the defendants to sign bills of lading for him after his departure provided they were in accordance with the charter party. After some delay the plaintiffs on the 29th June accepted bills of lading for the 2100 tons at £1 10 and paid under protest the difference between that rate and their contract rate (16s 6d) and certain other sums for which the defendants as agents for the owners claimed a lien. The plaintiffs now sued to recover from the defendants the amount so paid under protest. The defendants contended that as agents for owners they were justified in refusing to give bills of lading until the sums due and for which they claimed a lien were paid. Held that the defendants had no lien for the sums paid and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the amount claimed. Per CASBY J—The plaintiffs were entitled upon demand to have the said 2100 tons re-delivered to them by the captain. On 29th June the plaintiffs were entitled to clean bills of lading at 30s and the sum paid by them under protest in order to obtain such bills of lading was recoverable by them. Under the circumstances the defendants had no lien for freight and demurrage. Per STARLING J—The captain was justified in refusing to re-deliver the said 2100 tons. The plaintiffs were entitled to clean bills of lading at 30s and there was no lien for freight and demurrage in respect of which the plaintiffs had paid under protest the sum claimed by defendants. *RALLI BROTHERS v. ss 2 3 (c) 4 12—Meaning of the words holder and heir—Capacity to mortgage—The words holder and his heir are used throughout the Chota Nagpore Encumbered Estates Act in the sense of the holder of the property at the time of the determination of the debts and liabilities under s 8 of the Act and his heir. The word heir in the Act always applies to the person who is the holder's heir at the time of such determination of the debts and liabilities and to no other heir nor to the heir's heir. The estate of F came under management under the Chota Nagpore Encumbered Estates Act in 1880. He had several sons of whom B was the eldest and J the next in age. F died in 1884 and according to the custom of the family B succeeded him to the estate and on B dying in 1892 without leaving a male issue J succeeded him. On the 8th June 1891 J mortgaged a village which had been granted to him by his father for his maintenance and which never came under the management of the Encumbered Estates. Held that there was nothing in s 3 cl (c) of the said Act to incapacitate J from mortgaging the property. The object of Act VI of 1876 explained. The effect of the second portion of a 3 is to bar all suits instituted after the vesting order is made and whilst it is in force. S 7 of the Act applies mutatis mutandis to create a bar in respect of the debts dealt with in s 1 cl 4 of the Deo Estate Act 1886. The result of ss 3 and 7 of the Deo Act VI of 1876 when read with regard to the whole scope of the Act, is that suits or proceedings to enforce such debts or liabilities as are contemplated by the Act that is other than debts due or liabilities incurred to Government are if pending at the time of the vesting order barred if instituted after it in respect of such debts and liabilities, null and void in their inception. 1 ——— Effect of repeal of Civil Procedure Code 1859—General Clauses Consolidation Act I of 1866 s 6—Proceedings—Procedure—In all suits instituted before Act X of 1877 came into force in which an appeal lay to the High Court under Act VIII of 1859 an appeal still lies notwithstanding the repeal of that Act by Act X of 1877 Per GARTH C J—A suit is a judicial proceeding and the words any proceedings in s 6 of Act I of 1868 include all proceedings in a suit from the date of its institution to its final disposal and therefore include proceedings in appeal. The word procedure in s 3 Act X of 1877 has not the same meaning as the word proceedings in the above mentioned section. The proceedings in a suit instituted before Act X of 1877 came into force including a special appeal if the old Code allowed one go on to the end of the suit notwithstanding the repeal of the old Code. This procedure—that is to say the machinery by which those proceedings are conducted—is after decree to be that provided by the new Code RUNJIT SINGH v MEHERRAN KOER

2 ——— Suit instituted before but appeal brought after repeal of Act VIII of 1859—Effect of repeal—Civil Procedure Code 1877 ss 506 558 and 568—Appeal—Where a suit had been instituted under Act VIII of 1859 but decided at a time when Act X of 1877 had come into operation and an appeal was presented against such decision s 3 of Act X of 1877 distinctly indicates that such an appeal is to be governed by the law of procedure in force at the date of the presentation of the appeal. Where therefore an appeal presented when Act X of 1877 was in force has been dismissed under s 558 of that Act the appellant may apply for its re-admission under s 558 and if such re-admission is refused he is entitled to an appeal under s 588 (c) ELANI BUKAN v MARACHOW

3 ——— Decree Meaning of—The effect of the proviso to s 3 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1877 taken in connection with the definition of the word decrees in s 2 is that in all suits pending when that Code came into force the practice and procedure to be followed down to the final result of such suits (i.e. when nothing remains to be done but to execute the decree or to appeal from it) are the same as previously existed but that in all subsequent proceedings in execution of the decree or in appeal from it the practice and procedure provided by the Civil Procedure Code of 1877 are to be observed. The word decree in s 3 of the Civil Procedure Code 1877 means an order final in its nature and does not include an interlocutory order such as an order of reference to take accounts although such order may in general be properly termed a decree and therefore a suit which has been referred by the Court to the Commissioner to take accounts is still in a stage prior to decree within the meaning of s 3 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1877 RUSTOMJI BUNJORJI v KESROWJI DAIK

4 ——— Effect of change of law on proceedings already commenced—Attachment—Enforcement of decrees—Political pension—On the 28th of September 1877—i.e. three days before the new Code of Civil Procedure (Act X of 1877) came into operation—an application was made for the enforcement of a money decree by attachment (inter alia) of a political pension enjoyed by the defendants. Under s 216 of the former Code (Act VIII of 1859) a notice was issued on the same day to the defendants calling upon them to show cause why the decree should not be executed. The defendants accordingly appeared on the day fixed at which date the new Code had come into force and contended that under s 266 cl (g) of the new Code the pension was no longer attachable. Held that all proceedings commenced and pending when Act X of 1877 became law were under the General Clauses Act (I of 1868) s 6 to be governed by the Code theretofore in force the general rule of construction contained in that section not being affected or varied by ss. 1 and 3 of Act X of 1877; and that a bond fide application for enforcement of a decree in a particular way coupled with an order of the Court in furtherance of that object as much constitutes a proceeding in execution commenced and pending as the actual issue of a warrant of attachment VIDYARAM v CHANDRASEKHARAM

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, ACT XIV

5 — Effect of repeal of Civil Procedure Code 18—Proceedings commenced before repeal— Cl. 3 of s. 3 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882) provides that nothing in that Code shall apply to any proceedings after decree that had been commenced and were still pending on the 1st June 1882. In case of any question connected with proceedings commenced prior to that date the applicability of the Code of 1882 depends on whether the new proceeding subsequent to that date out of which the question has immediately arisen is so intimately connected with the proceedings prior to that date as to be regarded as part of them. A decree was passed in 1880 by which the suit was referred to the Commissioner to take accounts. On the 1st June 1882 the Commissioner in the course of taking the said accounts issued a warrant ordering the defendants to show cause why they should not give inspection of certain books. Held that the question as to inspection was so intimately connected with the taking of the accounts that it should be regarded as part of the same proceedings and as these had commenced and were still pending on the 1st June 1882 the question whether the order refusing inspection was appealable or not was (under s. 3 of Act XIV of 1882) to be determined by the Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII) of 1859 and not by the Code of 1882. *RUSTOMJI BUXBORJI v. in the Satara District. The defendants raised a preliminary objection to the institution of the suit by the Political Agent on the ground (among others) that he was not a recognized agent within the meaning of s. 37 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that the Political Agent was not a recognized agent of the Chief of Mudhol within the meaning of s. 3, cl. 8. — Agent's right to execute decree obtained by him as agent—Waiver—Execution of decree—P filed a suit in the second class Subordinate Judge's Court at Mahad. As P resided at Thana outside the jurisdiction of the Mahad Court she authorized her agent under a general power of attorney to conduct the suit on her behalf. The agent carried on the litigation up to a final decree passed by the High Court on appeal in P's favour. The agent then sought to execute the decree. The Court at Mahad passed an order upon his request granting only partial execution. Against this order the agent filed an appeal in the District Court at Thana. Then for the first time the judgment debtors challenged the agent's right to represent P who was residing within the District Court's jurisdiction. This objection prevailed and the appeal was dismissed. Held that the agent could not be prevented from executing the decree which he had obtained as agent. No objection had been taken to the agent's right to represent P at any stage of the litigation prior to the final decree. That objection must therefore be deemed to have been virtually waived and could not be raised after the defendants had had their chance of success in the litigations. PARVATIBAI v VINAYEK PANDURANG in the Satara District. The defendants raised a preliminary objection to the institution of the suit by the Political Agent on the ground (among others) that he was not a recognized agent within the meaning of s. 37 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that the Political Agent was not a recognized agent of the Chief of Mudhol within the meaning of s. 3, cl. (c) of the Code of Civil Procedure. VENKATRAY RAJE GHOORADE v MADHARAY RAMCHANDRA

8 ——— Agent's right to execute decrees obtained by him as agent—Waiver—Execution of decree—P filed a suit in the second class Subordinate Judge's Court at Mahad. As P resided at Thana, outside the jurisdiction of the Mahad Court she authorized her agent under a general power-of-attorney to conduct the suit on her behalf. The agent carried on the litigation up to a final decree passed by the High Court on appeal in P's favour. The agent then sought to execute the decree. The Court at Mahad passed an order upon his draft granting only partial execution. Against this order the agent filed an appeal in the District Court at Thana. Then for the first time the judgment debtors challenged the agent's right to represent P who was residing within the District Court's jurisdiction. This objection prevailed and the appeal was dismissed. Held that the agent could not be prevented from executing the decree which he had obtained as agent. No objection had been taken to the agent's right to represent P at any stage of the litigation prior to the final decree. That objection must therefore be deemed to have been virtually waived and could not be raised after the defendants had had their chance of success in the litigations. PARYATIDAI v VINAYAK PANDURANG

When the petition came on for hearing no one appeared to support it or to show cause against it and it was accordingly rejected. An application was subsequently made on behalf of the petitioner praying that the case might be restored to the register on the ground that counsel for the petitioner was absent on the occasion of the hearing for fifteen minutes only and that as no one on behalf of the appellant had appeared to show cause the petitioner should have been granted and the absence of petitioner's counsel was immaterial. Held that the matter was governed by s. 98 of the Civil Procedure Code and that a case of the Code prescribing that it is necessary and

When read with s. 103 it precludes a fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action referring irrespective of the defence or the relief prayed entirely to the grounds or alleged media on which the plaintiff asks the Court to decide in his favour. Brother's sons as nearest agnates of a deceased proprietor sued for a decree declaring that a gift before then made by the widow in favour of her daughter's son of the estate of her late husband would not operate against their right of succession on her death. A prior suit before the date of the gift brought by two of the plaintiffs for a declaratory decree and an injunction restraining the widow from alienating the same estate had been dismissed under the provisions of ss 102 and 103 (Act X of 1877) Civil Procedure Code. Held that the causes of action in the two suits were not identical and the fresh suit was not precluded by s. 103 the gift having afforded the new ground of claim which also had subsequently arisen. CHAND HOUZ v. On that day A the counsel who was instructed for the defendants in the first suit and B for the plaintiffs in the second was unable to attend and B another counsel held his brief and appeared on his behalf and applied for two months' adjournment of both suits. The summons of his clients was then in Court. B was unable to state what was the defence if any to the claim of the plaintiffs in the first suit. The adjournment was refused and B said he withdrew from the case. Both suits were then and there disposed of the claim of the plaintiffs in the first suit being decreed the second suit being dismissed for non appearance. On the 7th May following an application was made for a rehearing of both suits. The Court regarding the decrees as ex-parte decrees granted a rule for a new trial which was made absolute. On appeal to the Full Court the matter was referred to the High Court. Held that under the circumstances the suits were to be considered as having been disposed of under ss 100 and 102 of the Civil Procedure Code respectively and that whether or not they or either of them fell within the category of contested suits as defined by s 38 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act the remedy under s. 103 of the Civil Procedure Code was open to the plaintiffs in the cross suit. be appeared or the action which he took on appearance are immaterial. But where the party is absent and an application for adjournment is made on his behalf by a pleader who has no other instructions and whose functions are at an end when the adjournment is refused in the case the party has not appeared within the meaning of the chapter. Where the pleader who applies for an adjournment is accompanied by a recognized agent of the party but the latter rather makes any application nor does any act the question is whether he intends to appear and in fact does appear for the party in the exercise of his powers under s 36 of the Civil Procedure Code. That action is merely permissive and enabling. If the recognized agent although able to do so does not think proper to conduct the case on behalf of his principal his mere presence in Court is not an appearance in the suit. An appearance may be made by a pleader or a recognized agent but the concurrence of the pleader or agent is essential. As soon as he ceases to intend to represent the principal the latter is unrepresented. s 38 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act does not preclude a plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed for default from applying under s 103 of the Civil Procedure Code to have the order of dismissal set aside. There is no inconsistency between the two sections. A plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed for default has two separate remedies under different enactments. If he chooses to apply for a new trial under s 38 he must do so within eight days. If he professes to apply for an order setting aside the dismissal under s 103 of the Civil Procedure Code he can do so within thirty days (Limitation Act XV of 1877 s 2 art 163). BOONDEHAL v GOORPRASAD

the Court gives of its action and apart from the actual fact of the plaintiff's appearance or non-appearance the real meaning and substance of the Court's action is that it dismisses the suit on the view whether right or wrong that the plaintiff appears and the defendant does not appear. Where his suit having been dismissed for default of appearance under s 102 of the Code the plaintiff applies for its restoration the defendant cannot contest the application as in rem as one which cannot be entertained at all under s 103 by showing that at the time of the dismissal there was an appearance by the plaintiff in fact or in law but as an answer to the application on the merits the defendant can raise the contention that the plaintiff was not prevented from appearing because in fact he did appear. It is not an appearance within the meaning of s 102 of the Code when the plaintiff is represented only by a pleader who is without instructions enabling him to proceed with the case and who is merely instructed to apply for an adjournment. SHANKAR DAT DUBE v MADHA KRISHNA I L R., 20 All. 190 and SOONDERLAL v GOORPRASAD I L R. 23 Bom. 414 approved. MAHOMED AZEM OLLAH v ALI BUKH 6 N W 74 KANH PARLAD v DEVI DAT 7 N W 77 and KANAH LAL v NAWDAR RAI I J B 3 All. 518 referred to. AMITA PRASAD v NAND KISHORE I L R. 22 All. 68

1. — Suit by purchaser of mortgaged land against mortgagee for redemption—Subsequent suit by purchaser against vendor and mortgagee for possession—Cause of action—In 18 9 the plaintiff purchased from one B (defendant No 1) the land in question in the suit which was then in the possession of one R (defendant No 2) as mortgagee. B undertook to pay off the mortgage but failed to do so. In 1881 the plaintiff brought a suit for redemption against R which was dismissed for non appearance of the plaintiff under s 102 of the Civil Procedure Code (X of 1877). He subsequently filed the present suit against B and R to recover possession of the land. The defendant pleaded that the suit was barred under the provisions of s 103 of the Civil Procedure Code. On application under s. 103 to set aside the order of dismissal—Held refusing the application that the above circumstances did not amount to "sufficient cause" for his non-appearance when his suit was called on for hearing. Upon the date so fixed it was necessary to take evidence upon issues of fact which had previously been settled. The plaintiffs appeared on that day. The defendants did not appear but there was in Court a pleader who had been instructed by the two principal defendants at the outset and who had filed his vakalatnama. There was nothing to show that he had ever received any other instructions whatever either as to the facts of the case or the conduct of the defence or that the defendants had done anything beyond giving the pleader the instructions above referred to. Under these circumstances the plaintiffs gave their evidence and the Munsif decreed the claim. Held that under the circumstances stated the defendant's pleader must be taken not to have been in Court on the date fixed for the purpose of defending the suit on behalf of the defendants inasmuch as upon that part of the case he had not been instructed that it was therefore a fair inference that the defendants did not appear and the case was disposed of under s. 157 of the Civil Procedure Code; and that under these circumstances the provisions of s. 108 were applicable and the decree was an ex parte decision which it was open to the Munsif to reconsider. Hira Das v Hira Lal I L R 7 All 588 followed. RAMTAHAL RAM v RANESHAN RAM I L R 8 All 140

DOYANOTI DAS v. SARAT CHANDR MOJUMDAR
1 C W N., 656]

36 ———— Effect of setting aside ex parte decree and re-opening the case.—Ex parte decree against one defendant—Applicant by recede da t to set aside decree—Civil Procedure Code s. 106—Where a decree is set aside on the application of a defendant against whom it was passed ex parte the case is not re-opened as against a co-defendant who had appeared and defended the suit. MANARU v. SITARAM ATMARAM VAON

37 ———— Sufficient cause for non appearance—Mistake—On appeal from the rejection of an application made under s. 119 of Act V of 1859 to set aside a judgment by default—Held that in order to satisfy the Court "that the plaintiff was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing" it was enough to show that there had been a bona fide mistake which was not unreasonable. HARDATH SRIKANDAS v. VICTORIA FINANCE AND BULLION ASSOCIATION

[3 Bom. O. C., 60]

38 ———— Non appearance of one of several defendants—Ex parte decree—In a case in which one of many defendants who was made a party to the suit did not appear and a decree for possession was passed without any such special orders regarding that defendant as might have been passed under s. 116 Act VIII of 1859—Held that no ex parte judgment was passed against her and she could not re-open the suit under s. 119 Code of Civil Procedure. SHREELAKSHI DEVI v. TANIBEZ CHURN CHUCKREBUTTE

9 W. R. 597

39 ———— Right of party who has not come in to take benefit of order of dismissal of suit.—A suit having been decreed against a number of defendants some of whom did not appear one (Z) of the latter applied for a new trial under s. 119 Act VIII of 1859 and the case was remanded by the Judge to the Sudder Ameen. On the last day of the new trial another (K) of the defendants against whom judgment had been given ex parte tendered a written statement in which it was alleged that summons had not been duly served upon her. The statement was received and the suit was dismissed in toto. In appeal the Principal Sudder Ameen reversed that part of the decree which related to K on the ground that she had presented no petition in conformity with s. 119 of the Code. Held that K was properly before the Sudder Ameen's Court and was entitled to the benefit of the order of dismissal and that the Principal Sudder Ameen went on too narrow a ground and should have tried the case on its merits. KORODVAKOTTA DEVI v. NUSORISNEY MOOKERJEE

40 ———— Effect of a decree set aside at the instance of some only of several defendants against whom the decree was ex parte—Decree upheld on appeal by the other defendants by District Court and High Court—Where a decree had been made by a Munsif against several defendants only two of whom appeared and these two appealed from the decree both to the Subordinate Judge and to the High Court the decree being upheld in both Courts; and the defendants who had not appeared nor been parties to the appeals applied to the Munsif and got the decree (ex parte against them) set aside altogether and the Munsif made an order allowing the two defendants who had appeared to defend the suit de novo.—It was held that the Munsif had no jurisdiction to set aside the decree as against the two defendants who had appeared; it was not an ex parte decree as against them nor was it a decree of the Munsif's Court but of a superior Court. S. 103 of the Civil Procedure Code contemplates the case of a Court setting aside its own decree and not that of another and a higher tribunal. MAHOMED HAMIDULLA v. TONTREYVISA BISI [L. L. 41 ———— Decree obtained on document afterwards alleged to be forged—Ex parte decree—W obtained a decree against D and others founded upon a solehnamah said to have been put in by them. Certain property belonging to D was attached in execution and a notice of sale proclaimed. Thereupon D came into Court alleging that she had never had notice of the original suit and that the solehnamah put in, as far as she was concerned was a cheat and a forgery and asked for an enquiry and to be relieved from the execution. Held that the decree was not an ex parte decree and could not therefore be disturbed by a resort to the provisions of s. 119 Act VIII of 1859. HUKMO MOYEE DAZEE v. WATSON & Co 14 W. R. 297

42 ———— Insufficient reason for non appearance—Ex parte decision—Where defendants summoned under a 41 of Act VIII of 1859 did not appear on the day fixed for them to appear and answer and their reasons for non attendance not being considered sufficient they were not allowed to appear in the case—Held that the lower Appellate Court was right in refusing to hear an appeal from that decision. JOR PROFASH SINGH v. MOUNRAJ SINGH 12 W. R., 307 earlier than fifteen days after service of process and sworn that no summons had been served on him in the case which led to the ex parte decree and that the contract under which the case had been decreed against him had been broken by the plaintiff himself it was held that good and sufficient cause was shown for defendant's previous non appearance and a prima facie case had been made out to lead to the conclusion that there had been failure of justice. Held that as this evidence was given in the presence of the mooktears on both sides the Court's order that the case should be entered on the register of cases was a proper order admitting the review. ANUND MOYEE DASSEE v. ANUND SOOTDUR MOZOOMDAR

44 ————— Defendant showing no sufficient cause for non appearance—Appearance by vakil—Ex parte case—One of several defendants in a suit did not enter appearance until nearly a month after the date fixed for the first hearing when he applied by a vakil for leave to be heard in answer under the last part of s 111 Code of Civil Procedure. In the absence of good and sufficient cause for previous non appearance his application was rejected and an ex parte judgment given against him. After this he applied at the instance of the Appellate Court for a re hearing on the ground that the summons had not been duly served upon him. This application was rejected and the order of rejection was upheld on appeal. In special appeal he contended that the case did not fall within s 119 and that he was entitled to have the regular appeal previously preferred determined upon the record as it stood notwithstanding his prayer had been rejected under s 118. Held that the mere fact of the special appellant having appeared by a vakil in the way mentioned above could not be taken as an appearance within the meaning of s 119 and was not sufficient to prevent the Court from passing a judgment ex parte against him. MAHOMED HOSSEIN v. MUNTOZUL HQ

45 ————— Cause for non appearance at adjourned hearing—Appearance at first hearing—Where a defendant was prevented by the fraud of the plaintiff from appearing on the last day of hearing the suit was held to have been decided ex parte notwithstanding that the defendant had been represented on the first day of hearing and the first Court was held to have done right in restoring the case to the file under Act VIII of 1859 s 119. DESOO LAROTE v. CHINTA MOYEE CHOWDHRY

46 ————— Prevention from appearing by sufficient cause—Ex parte decrees ago & in suits—An ex parte decree having been granted in a suit against A personally and as guardian of his infant sons the infants subsequently applied under s 119 of Act VIII of 1859 to set aside the decree on the ground that the summons had not been duly served upon A and the application was dismissed. On appeal to the High Court—Held that although so far as the decrees made A personally liable the Court had no power to interfere yet as the infants were not responsible for their non appearance it might be said that they had been prevented by sufficient cause from appearing and that the decrees might be set aside under s 119 of Act VIII of 1859 (Act X of 1877 s 108) as against them. KESHO PERSHAD v. HIRDOY NARAIN

47 ————— Dismissal for default of prosecution—Absence of witnesses—The plaintiff's witnesses not being present on the day fixed for the hearing of the plaintiff's suit it was dismissed for default of prosecution under s 114 of the Code of Civil Procedure and was afterwards re-admitted under s 119. Held that the default not being of the nature described in s 114 the suit was wrongly dismissed under that section and for the same reason that the suit was improperly dismissed under that section it was also improperly re-admitted under s 119. MAHOMED AZEEMOOLLA v. 49 ————— Decree ex parte—Death of judgment debtor—Application by legal representative to have the decree set aside—Held that where a defendant against whom a decree has been passed ex parte for default of appearance dies his legal representative is not competent to apply under s 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure for an order to set the ex parte decree aside. JAYKEE PRASAD v. 50 ————— Procedure on grant of new trial of ex parte case—Where the lower Appellate Court admitted an application under s 119 for re trial of a case which had been decided ex parte by the Munsif it was held to have done right in sending for the record in order that the case as a suit should be heard and tried by the Appellate Court; the object of the law being that a suit should assume a complete form and go to a full trial and not be divided between different Courts. KHOOR LALL SANOOT v. VIII of 1892 s. 119 and their application being rejected, it was applied to the District Judge who referred them to the High Court. Held that the Subordinate Judge had no jurisdiction but the proper course for the parties was to apply to the District Judge under s. 119. ZIMTUNGI SA. BIEZZ v. MURDER MOUNTAIN. 23 W. R. 637

52. — Appearance of defendant under Civil Procedure Code ss 100-101—Ex parte decree—The first hearing of a suit was fixed for the 17th December 1883 on which day the defendant did not appear and the case was adjourned to the 18th December and as the defendant did not then appear a decree was passed in favour of the plaintiff. A vakalatnama had been previously filed on the defendant's part and he had also objected to an application filed by the plaintiff for attachment of the defendant's property before judgment. Held that these acts on the defendant's part did not constitute an appearance by him within the meaning of s. 100 of the Civil Procedure Code which referred to an appearance in answer to a summons to appear and answer the claim on a day specified issued under s. 64 that the decree was therefore ex parte within the meaning of ss 100 and 105 and an appeal consequently lay to the High Court under s. 155 cl. (2) from an order rejecting an application to set the decree aside. Zain ul Abidin Khan v. Ahmad Ra a Khan I L R 2 All 67 L R 51 A 233 distinguished. *Administrator General of Bengal v. 53. — Reversal of Judge's order by High Court—Appeal—A suit having been decreed ex parte defendant applied for a reversal thereof under s. 119 Code of Civil Procedure. The application having been rejected defendant appealed, and the first Court was directed to enquire whether there was sufficient cause for the non appearance of the defendant. This was done and the defendant was allowed to defend the suit. The plaintiff then appealed to the Judge who reversed the last order. Both parties then went back to the Munsif who on 26th April 1887 recorded a proceeding that the original ex parte order was to stand. In the meantime the defendant appealed to the High Court which reversed the Judge's order. Held that the effect of the High Court's order was to render valid the Munsif's order admitting the defendant to defend the suit and that no application for review was necessary on the part of the defendant. Held that the High Court's order being a final decision by way of appeal on a question which arose in the suit could not be

54. — Whether an auction purchaser is a necessary party to an application to set aside an ex parte decree—An auction purchaser of property sold in execution of an ex parte decree is not a necessary party to an application made by the judgment debtor to set aside the said decree inasmuch as the auction purchaser does not come under the description of opposite party in a 109 of the Code of Civil Procedure. *JATINDRA MOHAN PONDAR v. appearance of defendant—Appearance by pleader—Where defendants summoned under s. 41 Act VIII of 1859 did not appear on the day fixed for them to appear and answer and their reasons for non attendance not having been considered sufficient they were not allowed to appear in the case—Held that the Court of first instance was justified in disposing of the case in their absence and that s. 125 Act VIII of 1859 contemplates a case in which a party who has appeared at the proper time afterwards appears by pleader. JOY PROKASH SINGH v. MOHARAJ SINGH. [12 W. R. 207]

1. — s 120—Dismissal of suit on inability to answer material questions—The plaintiff a mookteer being unable to answer certain questions necessary for the statement of the proper issue the plaintiff was called upon either to appear personally and reply to the Court's queries or to send some one who could reply. Having done neither—Held that the lower Court was competent to dismiss the suit under s. 127 Act VIII of 1859. NILMOYES SINGH DEO v. RAM HUREN MISAR. 2 W. R. 161

2. — Inability of pleader to answer material questions—Materiality of absent witnesses—Instead of dismissing plaintiff's suit on account of his pleader's inability on the day of trial to prove which of his absent witnesses against whom he had applied for further processes to be issued were material the proper course for the Judge was to allow the plaintiff a certain time to produce evidence upon this point upon payment by him of all the costs of adjournment. *PEARSEN MOHUN BOSS v. 3. — Refusal of a plaintiff to attend as a witness—A plaintiff who was represented by a pleader was summoned at the instance of a defendant to attend the Court and to give evidence on his behalf on the day fixed for final hearing. The plaintiff refused to attend on the ground that he was a person of rank and was exempted from personal appearance in the Courts of a Native State. The first Court considering the personal appearance of the plaintiff necessary issued an order under a 120 of the Civil Procedure Code that he should attend and on his failure to do so passed a decree against him. On appeal the Judge reversed the decree and remanded the case for trial. Held confirming the order of remand that the order and decree of the first Court were alike illegal as the plaintiff having appeared by a pleader the Court had no power to issue an order under a 120 unless the pleader had refused or was unable to answer a material question. SATU v HANMANTRAO GOPALRAO NIMBAIKAR

1. ——— Opportunity for Court to inspect evidence.—A Court cannot be said to have received documents as admissible in evidence when for want of time to inspect and consider them it orders them to be filed nor would it be wrong in law in rejecting or returning them after proper inspection the object of s. 129 Act VIII of 1859 being that papers should be produced in a regular manner and inspected by a Court at its convenience. *BOODU KUNYA CHOWDERY v. 3. ——— Admission and rejection of documents.—At the stage of a suit referred to in Act VIII of 1859 s. 128 129 and 132 the Court ought to sort the documents tendered into two classes those relevant and admissible and those irrelevant and inadmissible and to reject in limine all documents which are evidently such as cannot be used as evidence in the suit. The admission of a document at this stage does not imply that it is evidence but merely declares that it may if properly treated be used as evidence in the suit and filing it as a part of the record does not confer any authority on such document or operate to dispense with any proof of genuineness. Courts of first instance ought to specify what portions of the documentary evidence on the record they have accepted and what portions they have refused to listen to. All the proceedings of the parties in respect of the use of documentary evidence are matters to be recorded on the proceedings of the Court by the Judge's own note. TUMEEZODY v. BISHARUT 31 W. 3. — Dismissal of suit for a sufficient Court fee on plaintiff—The Court of first instance being satisfied that the plaintiff bore an insufficient Court fee and the plaintiff not making good the deficiency dismissed the suit after recording evidence but without entering into the merits. 4. — Adjournment for final disposal—Dismissal of suit after adjournment—Non-appearance of plaintiff—In a suit issues having been settled, the final hearing of the suit was adjourned to a fixed date for final disposal. On that date plaintiff did not appear and the suit was dismissed under s. 148 of Act VIII of 1859. Held that, as this was not a case which had been adjourned in favour of either party to enable him to produce his proofs or cause the attendance of his witnesses, the order was not one which could properly be made. IYALL v. 5. — Dismissal of suit after adjournment—The first hearing of a suit took place on the 16th November when issues were settled and the final hearing of the suit was fixed for the 22nd January following. On the 22nd of January the plaintiff absconded her vakil and applied by the new vakil for a summons for a witness and on the 23rd, the new vakil stating that owing to the absence of his witnesses he was not prepared to go on with the case the Judge dismissed the suit. Held that under s. 148 of the Civil Procedure Code the Judge was justified in dismissing the suit. COMALAKMAL v. 6. — *The first hearing of a suit was fixed for the 10th July 1867. Neither of the parties nor their vakils appeared. Thereupon the Court dismissed the suit under s. 148 of the Civil Procedure Code but afterwards upon the application of the plaintiff's vakil restored it to the file for hearing under s. 119. Plaintiff obtained further adjournments to produce witnesses the last being an adjournment to the 28th September. On that day the vakils of both parties appeared but no witnesses and the Court again dismissed the suit under s. 148 for failure to produce witnesses. On the 22nd of October the suit was again under s. 119 restored to the file on the application of the plaintiff's vakil and a decision was afterwards come to for the plaintiff upon the merits. On appeal the last mentioned decree was reversed and the decree passed under s. 148 (whether the first or second decree was not specified) upheld upon the ground that as s. 119 was inapplicable to a decree passed under s. 148 the Court of first instance had acted without jurisdiction in restoring the suit to the file. Held on special appeal reversing the decision of the lower Appellate Court that the first decree of dismissal being a decree which might have been made under*

s. 147 was one to which s. 119 might be applied. 7. — Application for succession certificate—Order for costs of adjournment against opposing party—Effect of non-compliance with such order—A widow applied for a succession certificate to her late husband. The application was opposed by his brother who claimed to have been undivided from him. The matter came on for hearing but was adjourned on his application he being ordered to pay the costs. He failed to pay the costs and the certificate was issued to the widow. Held that s. 158 of the Civil Procedure Code was inapplicable to the case in the absence of a specific order making the payment of costs a condition precedent to the hearing of the evidence of the party in default. VIJAYADRAPIA CHETTI v. CHIDAMBAM

8. — Refusal to allow examination of defendant as a witness—Dismissal in default of other evidence—The Court of first instance refused to grant plaintiff's application to be allowed to examine second defendant as a witness on her behalf thinking the grounds of such application insufficient for the exercise of its discretion under s. 162 of the Civil Procedure Code. On the adjourned date of hearing plaintiff failed to produce any other witness and the suit was dismissed under s. 148. On regular appeal the Civil Judge considered that the Court of first instance ought not to have refused plaintiff's application but held that the refusal was a final order not open to question in appeal. On special appeal—Held that the Civil Judge was wrong on the latter point; that if the plaintiff had been prevented from examining the second defendant on sufficient grounds she had not committed default under s. 148; that the decree on the finding of the Civil Court was not maintainable without enabling plaintiff to examine second defendant and that that finding was conclusive in the special appeal. The decrees of both the lower Courts were consequently set aside and the case remanded. LATCHMANA RAU SAIB v. ROOVNATHA RAU

9. — Dismissal of suit for non attendance of witnesses—The plaintiff upon whose application the Court of first instance adjourned the hearing of the suit failed to cause the attendance of his witnesses on the day fixed for the further hearing and the Court of first instance threw out the suit stating that it did so under s. 110 Act VIII of 1859. Both parties to the suit were represented on that day by their pleaders. The Court of first instance subsequently entertained and rejected an application under s. 119 for a rehearing. The lower Appellate Court admitted and allowed an appeal against the order of the Court of first instance.

The Principal Sudder Ameen thereupon dismissed the suit on the ground that as the plaintiff's case had not been established he was not entitled to a decree simply by reason of the defendants' failure to enter appearance. Held the suit should not have been dismissed. In a case where a party summoned to attend as a witness refuses to attend and give evidence and the party who requires the evidence is unable to make out his case without it his suit should not be dismissed for want of proof when the points on which his claim depend upon matters of fact which may reasonably be presumed to be peculiarly in the knowledge of the defaulting parties as for instance in the present case the extent of their own shares and the amount they had paid on account of revenue.

There was no order or summons to the first plaintiff to attend to give evidence in this suit but a summons was issued to the plaintiff to attend to give evidence in another suit to which the second plaintiff was no party and which was heard together with this appeal. Held (reversing the decision of the Sessions Judge) that in compliance with the summons to give evidence in the other appeal was not enough to warrant the exercise of the power in this case. ordered the Munsif to give him further time to appear.
This was granted and then extended again and again
by the Munsif who on the plaintiff failing to appear again gave a decree against him under the same law as before. The case was then appealed to the Judge who ordered the case to be tried on its merits remarking that the presence of the plaintiff was not necesand give evidence had been already determined by a competent Court and never denied by himself he could not take advantage of a technical objection to and where it is shown that the discretion was not so exercised the omission will be a ground for inter-

Subordinate Judge's order under s. 170 was set aside on the ground that he had not exercised his discretion at all inasmuch as he had ignored the fact that plaintiff had given very substantial reasons for his inability to attend and give evidence when summoned to the arguments of counsel on both sides was removed and the case came on for hearing before his successor.

The new subordinate Judge took up the case from the point at which it had been left by his predecessor and proceeded to judgment and decree. Held that the only power given by the Civil Procedure Code in such cases is to allow the evidence taken at the first trial to be used as evidence at the second trial and not to allow the two hearings to be linked together and virtually made one; that the Subordinate Judge should have fixed a day for the entire hearing of the suit before himself and should first have heard the opening statement on behalf of the plaintiff, the evidence produced by both sides and the arguments on behalf of both and then finally decided the case which he had himself heard and tried that he might in accordance with the provisions of s. 181 of the Civil Procedure Code have allowed the depositions which had been taken before his predecessor to be put in and that in neglecting to take this course and in

s. 212 (1859 s. 197)—Suit and decree for possession—Assessment of mesne profits—Execution of decree—Where a decree is made under
s. 197 of Act VIII of 1859 proceedings taken after the original decree for possession for the purpose of determining the amount of mesne profits are in effect proceedings in continuation of the original suit and until these proceedings are brought to a close and an assessment of the mesne profits comes to it cannot be said that a decree for any specific amount of money exists. The wording of s. 197 is quite consistent with the view that where a decree for possession is given and an enquiry as to the amount of mesne profits is reserved the decree for possession of the land is only a partial decree in the suit and that there is to be a further enquiry and a further decree in respect of mesne profits. The words for the execution of the decree refer only to the execution of the decree for the land and cannot refer to execution of that which has not then taken the form of a decree. DILBAR

This order was reversed on appeal and the case was sent back for disposal on its merits. The Judge then held that Act X of 1877 which had just come into force applied and on the ground that the decree-holder had failed to get execution upon his former application dismissed the petition. The Judge referred the case to the High Court upon the question whether he was under the circumstances at liberty to grant the application. Held that he was. The decree holder on the 13th June 1879 again applied for execution the decree was transferred to S for execution where on objection that it was more than twelve years old and therefore barred by s. 20 of Act X of 1877 the execution proceedings were again struck off on the 17th January 1880. and eventually on the 20th April 1881 the application was readmitted. In June 1881 an application was made to the S Court for transfer of the case for execution to D which was granted and the case transferred but no steps having been taken by the decree holder in the D Court it was struck off by that Court on the 19th August 1881. On the 4th March 1882 (the judgment 1st having died meanwhile) an application was made to the D Court to restore the proceedings for execution against his representative. Notices were issued and the 2nd June was eventually fixed for the hearing. On that day no one was present on behalf of the decree-holder (whose pleadings had died in the meantime) and the case was again struck off. On the 11th July 1882 application was made to restore the proceedings, notices were issued and a day fixed for hearing and after numerous adjournments the objection of the judgment-debtor were overruled on the 11th March 1883 and execution of the decree granted. On appeal the Judge found that the execution proceedings had been continuous throughout and that there had been no unreasonable delay in the prosecution of the execution proceedings. Held that execution of the decree was not barred by s. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure. BISWA SONAR CHUNDER GOSSYAM v. 25 ———— Meaning of granted—Under a 230 of the Civil Procedure Code after a decree is twelve years old there is a prohibition against its being executed more than once—Hence an application for execution should not be granted if a previous application has been allowed under the provisions of that section. The mere filing of a petition with the result that the application contained in it is subsequently struck off is not granting an application within the meaning of a 230 of the Code and as 245 248 and 249 show that there is a broad distinction between admitting an application for the purpose of issuing notice to the other side and of hearing the objections that may be urged and a decision of the Court as provided in s. 249. In 1865 a decree was passed for a sum of money payable by yearly instalments for a period of sixteen years. Down to March 1877 various amounts were paid on account of the decree. In that month an application was made for execution of the decree the result being, an arrangement for liquidation of the amount then due which was confirmed by the Court. A second application for execution was made on the 9th March 1881 the decree then being more than twelve years old. All that was done with reference to this application was that notice to appear was issued to the judgment debtor's representatives and subsequently a petition was filed notifying that an arrangement had been effected under which a certain sum had been paid by one of the said representatives in satisfaction of the claim against him and that the other had agreed to pay the balance by yearly instalments. Upon this the application for execution was struck off. On the 5th March 1883 another application for execution was made, notice to appear was issued and after this notice a petition was put in intimating that an arrangement had been come to and praying that execution might be postponed whereupon the application was struck off. Again on the 31st March 1884 the decree-holder applied once more for execution of the decree. Held that neither the previous application of the 9th March 1881 nor that of the 5th March 1883 could properly be said to have been granted within the meaning of s. 30 of the Civil Procedure Code and, under these circumstances the decree though twelve years old and upwards was not barred by that section and the application for execution should be allowed.

The judgment-debtor was arrested and brought before the Court. He contended that execution of the decree was barred. Both the lower Courts were of opinion that the decree was not barred and allowed execution to issue. On appeal by the judgment-debtor to the High Court—Held that the application for execution was too late. As there had been an application made and granted on the 29th July 1881 under the Code of 1877 and twelve years from the date of the decree would have elapsed before June 1885 the application in question was barred and was not saved by the concluding clause of s. 230 of the Code (Act XIV of 1882). *VORICHAUD v. 34. — Finality of order made in execution proceedings—Decree payable by instalments.—In 1868 a decree was obtained for Rs. 100 which provided that the amount should be paid in instalments the first instalment being Rs. 20 to be paid at the end of the first year and that the other instalments should be Rs. 100 at the end of each subsequent year and that in the event of failure to carry this out and 2½ months after the falling due of the instalment the whole amount should be exigible in a lump sum with interest at 8 annas percent per mensem. In 1877 the decree holder applied for execution of the decree asserting that Rs. 100 had been paid up to that time by five instalments one of Rs. 20 and four of Rs. 100 each and that default had been made in payment of the fifth instalment of Rs. 100 and he asked to recover the whole amount due on the decree. No order was passed on this application and eventually the case was struck off. In 1880 the decree-holder again applied for execution of the decree upon the same grounds as those upon which the previous application was made. Notice was issued and served and a warrant issued for the arrest of the judgment-debtor but eventually the case was struck off. In 1883 the decree-holder on the same grounds made another application for execution. It was contended by the judgment-debtor that execution was barred by s. 230 of the Civil Procedure Code inasmuch as no instalments had been paid and even if they had been paid they could not be recognized without having been certified. Held that the proper time from which to reckon the limitation of twelve years was the fifth year from the date of the bond the whole claims from the beginning and the order passed in 1880 having gone upon that basis that the Court could not go behind that order and that consequently the decree holder was within time and might take out execution. *KANUJI MAL v. The decree of 1854 so far as the waslat was concerned might be taken to be merely interlocutory and did not become final until January 1881. BARODA SUNDARI DABIA v. FERGUSSON

Subsequently the decree holder having attempted to execute the decree against the share so purchased the appellant in order to protect the share which he had bought purchased the decree himself and proceeded to execute it against the remaining share in the hands of the judgment debtors. Held that the appellant as the transferee of the original decree holder was entitled to execute the decree personally against the judgment debtors and also in the event of their making default in paying the amount due under the decree to proceed against the share of the mahal still in their hands and further that if by reason of it being necessary to sell the remaining share of the judgment debtors any equity should arise between them and the appellant to have the decretal money distributed over the whole property mentioned by the decree that equity must be enforced by an independent suit. NAZIR CHUNDER MUNDUL v. 15 — Execution of mortgage decree by assignee — Separate suit — By a deed dated 2nd July 1876 F mortgaged properties A 1 and 2 to A and subsequently by separate deeds he again mortgaged the same properties respectively to B and C. C afterwards purchased F's equity of redemption in property A 2 and on the 15th November 1880 A obtained a mortgage decree against F which he sold to B who now sought to execute it. C was merely benamidar for B. Held that on B consenting to allow property A 2 to be first sold free of all incumbrances it was necessary for B to proceed by regular suit. IAKOOB ALI CHOWDHRY v. 16 — Application of transferee of decree for execution disallowed —

Omission to give notice of application for substitution of names—Title of assignee—The holder of a decree for the sale of mortgaged property having transferred the same to M by registered instrument M transferred the decree to other persons and the co-transferees applied under s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code to have their names substituted for those of the original decree holders. The judgment debtor opposed the application on the ground that M a name had not been substituted for the names of the original decree-holders who had transferred to him. It appeared that no notice had been issued to M under s. 232 of the Code that he was dead and that his legal representative had not been cited as required by law. The application was allowed by the Courts below. Held that even assuming that the judgment debtor had a locus standi to raise the objection that notice had not been issued to the applicants' transferor he had no possible interest in the question and could not be prejudiced by the passing of the order that it was not necessary to cite the representatives of the transferor and that the order is not being one upon which execution of the decree could issue but merely for a transfer of names the objection that the transferor had not been cited under s. 232 was not a substantial one. Held that it could not be said that where a decree has been assigned by one assignor to another the substitution of his name on the record in lieu of that of the original decree holder was a condition precedent to the assignor's passing title under the assignment. GILLARI LAL v. DATA RAM

29 — Transfer of decree for execution by operation of law—Civil Procedure Code Act XIV of 1882 s. 232—Right of procedure—Execution under Bengal Act VIII of 1869 and Act III of 1890—Upon the death of the full owner the mother took out probate of a will in which she was appointed executrix. The will was afterwards disputed by the minor son of the testator and probate was revoked but while the mother was in possession of the estate as executrix she sued and obtained a decree for rent under Bengal Act VIII of 1869. Upon the application of the minor for the execution of the decree—Held that the minor was in a position to execute the decree his succession to the estate of his father being a succession or transfer by operation of law within the meaning of s. 232 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held also that the mode in which the decree was executed under the old Bengal Act VIII of 1869 was in so far as it was a right at all that belonged to the judgment creditor a private right but a mere right of procedure and the execution was therefore, to be governed by Act VIII of 1882. UMASOONDERY DAS v. 31 — Insolvency—Composition with creditors—Assignment of insolvent's estate to surety—Adjudication set aside—Effect of on previous decree—Suit by official assignee on a debt due to O B S pending the latter's insolvency Plea by defendant that he has paid to the insolvent overruled on the ground that payment to insolvent pending insolvency cannot bind the official assignee and decree made. Subsequently the insolvent entered into a composition with his creditors and executed an assignment of his estate effects and assets in favour of B in consideration of B's becoming surety to the creditors for the payment of the composition. Accordingly an order was made setting aside the adjudication and giving liberty to the official assignee to make over to the insolvent his estate and effects. B now applied for execution of the decree in this suit against the defendant. Held that the order setting aside the adjudication did not have the effect of annulling the decree in any way. It operated in passing the benefit under the decree from the official assignee as representing the creditors to the present applicant and made the latter by operation of law an assignee under s. 232 Civil Procedure Code. It was held to be unnecessary to consider whether there was in fact pending the insolvency a payment to the insolvent in discharge of the claim. MILLER v. ABINASH CHUNDER DUTT 4 C W N 785

32 — Sale of decree holder's interest under a decree—Right of vendor when execution is refused—Right of suit—The assignee for value of a decree obtained by two persons of whom one was a minor applied for execution of the decree but his application was refused under Civil Procedure Code s. 23. He now sued to recover from his assignor the sum paid by him for the assignment. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. 1 AMASAMI v. BASAFAHA

1. QUESTIONS IN EXECUTION OF DECREE

1. Meaning of section—s 244 of the Civil Procedure Code contemplates that there must be some question in controversy and conflict in execution which has been brought to a final determination and conclusion so as to be binding upon the parties to the proceedings and which must relate in terms to the execution or discharge or satisfaction of the decree HULAS PAIR LIRTHI
SINGH I L R. 9 All. 500

2. Proceeding in execution—Suit—Civil Procedure Code 1882 s 12— Seemle—That a proceeding under s 244 is not a suit within the meaning of s 12 of the Code of Civil Procedure VENKATA CHANDRAPPA NATA-NIVARU & VENKATARAMA REDDI

[I L R. 22 Mad. 256]

3. Question raised for first time in execution—Held that a question raised for the first time between the parties to a decree at the time of its execution although not expressly reserved in that decree for determination at the time of its execution may be enquired into and determined by the Court executing the decree under s 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 *JASWJI BHATTAR &
VENKATISH SUBBIVAS*

[3 Bom 393 2nd Ed. 371]

4. Decree subsequently modified—Question as to execution of—Where it is contended that the decree that has been executed is not the decree that was passed between the parties but a decree modified by a subsequent decretal order s 11 Act XXIII of 1861 does not apply the question not being one relating to the execution of the decree and between the parties to the 9 — Applications made by judgment-debtor.—Applicability of section—The provision in s 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure that questions arising between the parties to the suit and relating to the execution discharge or satisfaction of a decree shall be determined by order of the Court executing the decree relates not only to proceedings initiated by the decree holder but also to applications made by the judgment debtor. *ERU RAFFA MUDALIAR v. 10 — Loss or destruction of decree.—Regular suit—A decree passed for money was lost or destroyed the decree-holder on suing out execution was referred to a regular suit. Held that the existence of the decree and of its terms might have been enquired into in the execution department and that the order of the Court to which application for execution was made could not confer jurisdiction on a Court to entertain such a suit. PANJEET CHOONER LALL I. BROJENDRA COOMAR ROY CHOWDHURY* 7 W. R. 372

12 — Question of title between decree holder and third person.—Separate suit—The plaintiffs in a suit for money obtained a decree against all the defendants except P and among them K. On appeal the Court of first appeal gave them a decree against P. In execution of this decree they attached and were paid as belonging to P certain money deposited in the Government Treasury in A's name. On appeal by P the Court of second appeal reversed this decree and restored the decree of the first Court dismissing the suit as regards P. P thereupon applied in execution of his decree for a refund of the money. The plaintiffs objected on the ground that the money belonged to K. Held that the Court executing P's decree was not competent to decide the question whether the money belonged to P or to K such question not being one between P and them only but involving and raising a question of title between him and K as to their conflicting claims inter se to the money. *PRISAI v. to set aside the proceedings on the ground that the execution was fraudulent and not warranted by the decree. Held that the Judge had no right to enter into such an application or to reopen at the instance of a third party execution proceedings which had come to an end. 14 — Suit to set aside sale—Frivolous sale under Act X of 1839—Act XVIII of 1841 s. 11—Reliance on a partly-decree for arrears of rent—Sale under Act X of 1839 and in execution of that decree from the tenure sale. At the sale the tenure was purchased by A. A then brought a suit against B and A to set aside the sale on the ground that the rent-decree and all execution-proceedings taken thereunder were fraudulent and alleging that B was the actual purchaser in the name of A. An objection was taken that the suit would not lie and that the questions in the suit were such as could have been determined and were determined by the Court executing the decree. Held that neither s. 214 of the Civil Procedure Code nor the corresponding s. 11 of Act XVIII of 1841 had any application to proceedings in execution of a decree under Act X of 1839 and that the suit being one to set aside the sale on the ground of fraud, was maintainable. See CHARA CHUCKERBUTTY v. 15 — Question as to whether purchase-money has been paid within time—Cost to set aside decree—The plaintiff in a suit to enforce a right of pre-emption obtained a decree to the effect mentioned in s. 214 of the Civil Procedure Code. On payment by him of the purchase-money into Court the defendant objected in the execution department to such payment on the ground that it had not been made within time. The Court which made the decree disallowed the objection. The defendant appealed from the order dissolving the objection. They had previously appealed from the decree. The Appellate Court earlier both appeals together and holding that the purchase money had not been paid into Court within time reversed the decree and allowed the objection. The plaintiff referred a second appeal to the High Court from the Appellate Court's decree which was admitted. He also preferred an appeal from the appellate order allowing the objection but this appeal was rejected as being beyond time and such order became final. Held that inasmuch as the question whether the plaintiff had paid the purchase-money into Court within time was not one relating to the execution of the decree within the meaning of s. 214 of the Civil Procedure Code, but was one which should be decided in the suit itself and therefore the proceedings in the execution department

17 — Regular suit to set aside summary order—Application in summary suit—A person who, in the course of executing a decree had been turned out of possession by an order made by a Judge of 1840 and who was compelled to pay the costs of that order brought a regular suit for its reversal and obtained a decree which was set aside as to the costs of the summary order in consequence of the plaintiff not having demanded them; subsequently the plaintiff made an application in the summary suit that the costs of the summary order should be repaid to her. Held that the Court had no power to entertain it under s. 11 Act XXIII of 1841. TURROV v. 18. — Resistance to execution as being cultivators—Decree for limited possession—Separate suit—In a suit to recover possession of land the defendants resisted execution on the ground that they were cultivators and that the decree itself nullified the plaintiff to recover possession as proprietor. The objection was overruled and the defendants were set aside. They then sought to set aside the order and in the execution proceedings sought to recover possession. Held that the suit was barred under s. 214 of the Civil Procedure Code. NAJIB v. pay a certain sum by yearly instalments and hypothecated certain lands as security. A memorandum of this decree was registered under s. 42 of Act XX of 1866. The last instalment fell due in February 1870. The decree was kept alive against the zamindar up to his death in 1873. Upon the death of the zamindar proceedings in execution were taken against his son who succeeded to the zamindari but were set aside on appeal. In January 1882 a suit was brought against the son to recover the amount of the last instalment due by his father under the decree of 1867. 21. — Hindu law—Obligation of son to pay debt of deceased father—Nature of obligation—D obtained a decree against the father of A and B Hindus on a hypothecation bond whereby certain land was pledged as security for repayment of a loan. The decree declared the land liable to be sold for repayment of the debt. The judgment-debtor having died before the decree was executed A and B were made parties to the proceedings in execution and the land was attached. A and B objected to the attachment on the ground that their shares in the land were not liable to be sold in execution of the decree as they were not parties to the suit. This objection was allowed and D brought a suit for a declaration that the property was liable to be sold. That suit was dismissed on the ground that a suit for a declaration would not lie. D then sued to recover from A and B the balance due under the decree against their father after crediting the amount recovered by the sale of their father's share. It was objected that the suit was barred by s. 214 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held that the duty of a son under Hindu law to pay his father's debts out of his own share of ancestral estate is not a matter which can be decided under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The questions contemplated by s. 244 are those which relate to the enforcement of the obligation created by the decree. The obligation to pay the father's debts out of the son's share of the ancestral estate is not an obligation created by a decree against the father. ARIASUDHA v. DORASAMI I L R. 11 Mad. 413

22. — Suit against sons of a deceased judgment debtor—Decree for money against father to be discharged by instalments—Separate suit—Liability of son for father's debt—A personal decree on a mortgage was passed against a Hindu (the mortgagor) and his two sons on 19th October 1877. The decree provided for payment of the secured debt in various instalments by May 1895. The mortgagor died in 1883 having discharged part of the debt. The decree-holder having attached certain family property in execution the mortgagor's two younger sons who had not been born at the date of the above decree objected that their shares were not liable to attachment. This objection prevailed the Court expressing the opinion that the matter in controversy should be determined in a regular suit. The other defendants in the suit of 1877 had both died in the interval one of them leaving infant sons. The decree holder (in whose sole name the mortgage stood) now sued the sons of the mortgagor and their infant nephews for payment out of the family property of all unpaid instalments and objection was taken that the question whether ancestral property is liable or not for the father's debt in the present suit was one which related to the execution of the decree in the former suit and that the order whereby the attachment was raised was an order under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code and no fresh suit could be brought. 24. — Mode of redeeming mortgaged lands in execution of former decree—A mortgagee was put into possession of the mortgaged property under a decree obtained by him against the mortgagor to the effect that the mortgagee should remain in possession until the mortgage debt was paid. The mortgagor subsequently paid into Court the money due under the mortgage decree and applied to be restored to the possession of the mortgaged property. Both the lower Courts granted the mortgagor's application. On special appeal—Held (following the decision of the Full Bench in Rao v. Shivram Joshi v. Kaluram Malukhand 12 Bom. 161) that such an application was not the proper mode for the mortgagor to redeem the property and to recover possession from the mortgagee, the previous decree for possession having been fully executed when the mortgagee was put into possession. RAMCHANDRA BALLAL v. 20. _____ Question as to amount received under mortgage.—Attempt to obtain a writ of a writ of habeas corpus by way of an application in execution.—Certain mortgage holders in a village which, in its inception was a simple mortgage but which was to become a usufructuary mortgage upon non-payment of the mortgage money refused them a credit equal with the first instalment. The mortgagees sued on the covenant in that behalf obtained a decree for possession in their favour. They entitled the mortgagee in possession until the mortgage debt was satisfied from the usufruct. Some time after the mortgagees sold the property under the decree the mortgagees applied, ostensibly only as a Bill filed in the Civil Court for recovery of the value of the mortgaged property and the payment of a large sum of money which they alleged the mortgagees had collected as profit in excess of what was due on the mortgage. Held that such an application would not lie. If the allegation of the mortgagees were true their proper remedy was by suit for redemption and not by application in the execution department. *Paji v. 47 — Question whether lands were included in decree—Act VIII of 1859 s 857—Act XXIII of 1861 s 11—The father of the defendant in 1853 obtained a decree against the father of the plaintiff and other persons for partition of village lands. The decree directed that in effecting the partition certain dhara lands then occupied by the plaintiff's father were not to be included. Application for execution of that decree was made in 1861 but the execution proceedings remained pending until 1882. On the 12th December 1882 the decree was executed, and the defendant (his father being then dead) was put into possession of the lands now in dispute as being part of the lands to which he was entitled under the decree. The plaintiff objected that these lands were not subject to partition under the decree and he applied for an order that they should be delivered back to him. His application was rejected and he thereupon brought the present suit to recover the lands from the defendant. The Court of first instance was of opinion that the question raised in the suit related to the execution of the decree made in 1853 and under s 244 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) could not be raised again by a separate suit. 50 ———— Retention by the Court of property not the subject-matter of a decree in the course of its execution—Dismissal of petition for delivery of possession—Appeal from order of dismissal—A decree having been passed awarding to a plaintiff in a suit a moiety of certain jewels which were stored in family boxes in the possession of the defendant the boxes containing the jewels were taken possession of by an officer of the District Court and a division was effected by a commissioner appointed for that purpose by that Court. After the division certain jewels remained which had been set aside by the commissioner as not forming part of the subject matter of the decree and these continued in the custody of the District Court. The defendant thereupon presented a petition to the District Court praying that the jewels so remaining undivided might be returned to him. Plaintiff resisted the application but both parties were agreed that the said remaining jewels were not part of the subject matter of the suit and were not dealt with by the decree. A then brought a suit for the value of crops wrongfully appropriated by B during the period he was in possession. It was contended on second appeal that such a suit was barred by the provisions of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. partition suit brought by the plaintiff a decree was passed in 1882 which provided (inter alia) that the defendant should manage certain devasthan lands and apply the income thereof to devasthan purposes and that if he failed to manage the lands properly or alienated them by sale or mortgage the plaintiff and his younger brother should enjoy the lands and apply the proceeds towards the maintenance of the devasthan.

In execution of this decree plaintiff presented an application on the 28th November 1894 praying that he should be put in management of the devasthan lands on the ground that the defendant was guilty of mismanagement and misapplication of the devasthan property. This application was rejected by the Court of first instance on the ground that the question of mismanagement did not fall within s. 244 cl. (c) of the Code of Civil Procedure. This order was confirmed on appeal on the ground that the decree was a declaratory decree and therefore incapable of execution. Held on second appeal that the decree was not declaratory only and that it could be enforced in execution under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. MADHAVIAO & RAMRAO

TOTTENHAM and PIGOT JJ (GHOSH J dissenting)—that when circumstances affecting the validity of a sale in execution have been brought about by the fraud of one of the parties to the suit and give rise to a question between these parties such as apart from fraud would be within the provisions of a 244 a suit will not lie to impeach the validity of the sale on the ground of such fraud Sarada Chunder Chuckerbutty v Mahomed Isuf Meah I L R 11 Cal 376 Vira raghava Ayyangar v Venkata Charyar I L R 6 Mad 217 Paranp v Kanade I L R 6 Bom 149 and Sakharam Govind Kolo v Damodar Akharam Gujar I L R 9 Rom 468 approved Gobind Chandra Majumdar v Uma Churn Sen I L R 12 Cal 679 dissented from in part. Held that in such a case the judgment-debtor is entitled whether the sale has been confirmed or not to make as against the person guilty of the fraud or accessories thereto such application (if any) under a 311 as he may be entitled to make his time for making it being computed from the time when the fraud first became known to him. Held further that in cases in which the decree or the purchase is made in benami a 244 does not apply and a suit may be held to lie to set aside the sale. Per GHOSH J—An objection under a 311 or upon the ground of fraud raised by the judgment debtor after the sale has been confirmed under a 312 cannot be dealt with under a 244. In such a case the judgment-debtor is entitled upon the ground of fraud to bring a suit to set aside the sale or at all events to have it declared that the sale passed no title to the purchaser or that the purchaser is a trustee for him. There is no special provision in the Code for setting aside a sale on the ground of fraud when it has once been confirmed. MOHENDRO NARAIN CHATURAJ v GOPAL MONDUL

69 — Sale in execution of decree for arrears of rent—Fraud—Suit to set aside sale on ground of fraud—Civil Procedure Code 1882 s 311—Right of suit—A and B were two tenants whose names were registered in the landlord's sherista. B died leaving C, D and E his sons and heirs but no application for mutation of names in the sherista was made. Disputes as to rent having arisen A and C proceeded to make deposits in Court in respect thereof and the landlord instituted a suit against A joining C as a party defendant to recover the amount of rent he claimed and obtained an ex parte decree which inter alia directed that it should be satisfied out of the amount so deposited in Court. That amount according to the landlord's case proving insufficient to satisfy his demands he proceeded to execute the decree and brought the holding to sale and purchased it himself. A and C then applied under s 311 of the Code to have the sale set aside alleging that the decree had been fraudulently executed, the sale proclamation suppressed and that the decree was incapable of execution in the manner adopted and contending that it could only be executed against the amounts so deposited in Court which were more than ample to satisfy the full amount justly due under it. That application was unsuccessful. A, C, D and E then instituted a suit to have the sale set aside on the ground of fraud. Held as regards A and C following the decision in Mohendro Narain Chaturaj v Gopal Mondul I L R 17 Cal 769 that the questions as to the propriety of the execution of the rent-decree by sale and as to the suppression of the sale proclamation were questions which could and ought to have been decided under s 244 and that so far as they were concerned the suit would not lie. Held however as regards D and E that as they were not parties to the rent suit or proceedings had thereon and although as heirs of a deceased tenant who

The plaintiffs in a suit to have the judicial sale of a zamindari set aside alleged that the decree-holder in part satisfaction of his decree had received from them and other co-sharers in the zamindari their proportionate amounts of the debt decreed and had agreed that their shares should be exempt from the execution sale about to take place that the sale took place subject to that exemption that the decree-holder however with whom some of the co-sharers and the purchasers colluded, fraudulently had the sale set aside revived the attachment and caused a second sale at which all the shares in the zamindari were sold. Held that the question besides that the charge of fraud was not sufficiently specific was determinable in virtue of a 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure only by order of the Court executing the decree. *PROSUNNO KUMAR SANYAL v. ment debtor in his own right disallowed—Order reversed on appeal—Claim under s 278 rejected—S mortgaged four parcels of land to M M obtained a decree against S directing the sale of the lands mortgaged. The District Munsif investigated these questions and under s 241 of the Code of Civil Procedure directed that execution should proceed against all four parcels. The District Court on appeal reversed the order of the Munsif on the ground that he had no power to decide these questions under s 241 and that the proper course was for M to attach the properties and for K to make a claim. This course was adopted and K's claim was rejected and the four parcels were sold and bought by F K thereupon brought a suit against M and F to cancel the sales to F. —Fresh suit—In a suit for redemption of a mortgage a decree was passed for redemption by redemption of the plaintiff paying the sum of Rs 43 2s 7d the amount of the mortgage-lit. Prior to the institution of the suit the defendant had taken proceedings in the Indian Court to foreclose the mortgage and the plaintiff paid the above mentioned sum into that Court for the plaintiff who took it. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court from the decree directing him to pay Rs 43 2s 7d as the mortgage-lit. and obtained a decree by which the decree of the first Court was modified and the amount payable on redemption was reduced to Rs 15s. The plaintiff then took an execution of the decree to recover from the defendant the difference between the two sums with interest. Held that the effect of the Appellate Court's decree was to direct redemption of any sum paid under the first Court's decree which was disallowed by the Appellate Court's decree and that the question was clearly one for determination by the Court executing the decree and not by separate suit being expressly provided for by s. 563 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held also that the decree holder was entitled to restitution of the amount with interest. Iyer v Comptoir d'Escompte de Paris L R 8 I C 465 referred to. Ram Ghulam v Diarka Rai I L R 7 All 170 distinguished by MAHMOOD J. Questions that may arise after the sale are not strictly speaking questions relating to the execution discharge or satisfaction of the decree within the meaning of cl (3) s. 214 but as soon as there has been a sale the execution of the decree so far as the decree holder is concerned is over and the question whether the purchaser has purchased anything by the sale is not a question as to the execution of the decree holder's decree. *RAMCHANDRAN MISHRA v. remitted a portion of the decree that the balance should be paid by a certain date and that a certain banker had given a note of hand for the payment of interest on the balance at a certain rate. The judgment debtor then stated as follows: So long as the petitioner does not pay the money to the decree holder — i.e. during the term fixed above — the banker shall pay interest to the decree-holder the decree holder shall not have power to take out execution within the said term but after the expiry thereof he shall be at liberty to realize his money together with interest from the petitioner and his property by executing the decree excepting the property sold all the property mortgaged and attached under the decree shall continue so mortgaged and attached the decree holder's pleader has affixed his signature at the foot of this petition showing that he consents to it the petitioner therefore prays that the case may be struck off as partially executed. The defendant by misrepresentation induced the plaintiff to receive Rs 900 only in full satisfaction of those decrees and to withdraw the application. The plaintiff on discovering the misrepresentation brought this suit to recover the difference. Held that the suit was barred by s 11 of Act XVIII of 1861 (which corresponds with s 214 of Act X of 1877) the question between the parties being a question relating to the execution of a decree. It is always competent to any Court to vacate any judgment or order if it be proved that such judgment or order was obtained by manifest fraud and in the case of orders made in execution s 11 of Act XVIII of 1861 excludes all other remedy. PARANJPE v KANADE I L R. 8 Bom 148

tion for larger amount—Suit for amount of compromise—The parties to a suit agreed upon a compromise the result of which was that the plaintiff obtained by the decree a greater quantity of land than he had originally claimed and a decree was drawn up in accordance with the compromise. In the execution proceedings the defendant raised an objection that the plaintiff could not have execution for a greater quantity of land than he had claimed originally and the Court executing the decree allowed the objection. No appeal from the Court's order was made but the plaintiff brought a suit to recover possession of the larger amount of land mentioned in the compromise. Held that the order of the Court executing the decree was erroneous in law and might properly be reconsidered upon an application for review but that the present suit came within s 214 of the Civil Procedure Code, and therefore could not be maintained. MONT BULLAH v IMANI I L R. 9 All, 229

The decree was affirmed on appeal and the present defendant had the note sold in execution and drew out of the proceeds a sum for mesne profits for subsequent years; but an appeal was preferred in the execution proceedings to the High Court which set aside the execution so far as concerned the mesne profits for the years subsequent to that to which the original decree related. The present plaintiff thereupon attached and sold the village to recover the balance before that amount was paid to the present plaintiff, the present defendant brought a suit against him in the District Court, and there obtained a decree for means profits for the subsequent years and in execution drew the amount of the decree out of Court. In second appeal however the High Court on 26th September 1881 reversed the decree of the District Court whereupon the present plaintiff applied for restitution under Civil Procedure Code s. 533 (which application was ultimately disallowed). The present suit was brought to recover the amount to which that application related. Held that the suit was not barred by the provisions of Civil Procedure Code s. 214. NARAYANA v. 94. — Excess sum retained by decree holder after satisfying decree—Separate suit—Suit brought to recover the amount to which plaintiff was entitled under a decree passed in favour of himself and defendant as co plaintiffs in a former suit. It appeared that defendant purchased the property sold in execution of the decree and that the price for which the asset took place was sufficient to satisfy the decree. Instead of paying the purchase-money into Court defendant with the knowledge and consent of plaintiff retained the whole sum upon the understanding that he should give the Court a receipt for himself and on behalf of plaintiff and afterwards pay to plaintiff his portion of the amount decreed. Accordingly defendant presented a petition to that effect, and obtained a certificate confirming the sale. Defendant having failed to pay plaintiff his portion the present suit was brought. Upon these facts it was held, in special appeal that the decree was satisfied by sale of the judgment debtor's property and that the execution proceedings were completely at an end the defendant having been by the assent of the plaintiff made his agent for the acknowledgment of the satisfaction of the decree. No subsequent application under the decree could have been entertained by the Court which executed it. Afterwards the judgment debt was reduced in appeal to a sum far below the amount realized in execution and the judgment debtor brought a suit to recover the excess monies. Held with reference to Act XXIII of 1861 s. 11 that the suit did not lie but that the Court which charged with the execution of the decree had full jurisdiction to determine the question and order a refund. MOTHOORA PERSHAD SINGH v. Subsequently on the application of the judgment debtor the account was re-opened and had been overdrawn by the decree holders. In 1876 the judgment debtor applied to the Court which executed the decree for an order for the repayment of the amount overdrawn. Held that while the application was not barred by any provisions of the Limitation Act IX of 1871 the English doctrine of laches did not apply in this country and further that the application had been presented in the proper Court as required by s. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 (corresponding with s. 245 of Act X of 1877). ALLIS HOSSAIN v. He subsequently applied for execution of the decree against S claiming the costs which it awarded. S thereupon paid the amount of such costs into Court and, having obtained stay of execution, sued M for such decree, claiming by virtue of such assignment. Held that the suit was not barred by the provisions of s. 244 of Act X of 1877 or of s. 258 of that Act. The last paragraph of s. 258 means that the Court executing the decree shall not recognize as an uncertified payment or adjustment out of Court. He applied to the Court to have the sale set aside but failing in his application he sued both the decree-holder and the auction purchaser for a declaration of his title to the property in question. It could not apply except as regards property affected by the decree and a part of the property claimed by the plaintiff was not included in the decree. 132. — Separate suit on allowance of objection to execution—In execution of a decree the defendant who was sued as the representative of her deceased brother objected under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure to the attachment of certain lands to which she set up independent title. The objection was disallowed and the land was sold. She then sued the execution purchaser to set aside the Court sale and obtained a decree against which no appeal was preferred. She now sued for possession. Held that the suit lay notwithstanding the order under s. 244. KETILAMMA & KILAPPAN

After the settlement of issues but before the suit was finally disposed of I died and his brother J was made defendant as his legal representative. J consented to the suit being tried on the defence raised by I and upon the issues already settled. The suit was decreed it being held that G was the purchaser. In execution of this decree under which G sought to obtain possession J objected that he was entitled to a half share of some and to the entire sixteen annas of the other properties and that his brother I had no right whatever in the same. This objection was disallowed by the Court executing the decree on the ground that it had not been raised in the original suit and that as the decree had been passed in the presence of J he was not entitled now to urge it. Thereupon J brought a suit against G to establish his rights. Held that the order passed in the execution proceedings disallowing J's objection was no bar to the suit under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. *Kanas Lal Khan v. of the judgment debtor—Claims to attached property where representative or judgment debtor claims to hold the attached property as trustee of the 1 party—Civil Procedure Code 1882 ss 246 257—The plaintiffs sued for a declaration that certain property was liable to be attached in execution of a decree obtained by them in suit No. 591 of 1883 against the estate of one G deceased who had been the head of a math situate in the Dharwar District. The property had been attached in execution but the defendant, who was G's successor in office had obtained the removal of the attachment on the ground that the property belonged to the math and not to G personally and was not therefore liable to satisfy the decree. The plaintiffs thereupon brought this suit. The lower Appellate Court passed a decree for the plaintiffs and granted the declaration. On second appeal it was contended that under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code the question ought to have been decided in execution of the decree in suit No. 591 of 1883 and that a separate suit would not lie. Held on the merits that the decree of the lower Appeal Court should be reversed and the suit dismissed. Per RANADE J—Where the representative of a judgment-debtor puts forward a personal claim to property which is attached as assets of the judgment-debtor in his hands the investigation of the claim must be made in execution under the provisions of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. But where he asserts that he holds the property in trust for or on behalf of or as manager of some third person or body of persons or of a religious charity or institution the claim must be investigated under the provisions of ss 248 to 253 and the order passed therein cannot be challenged by an appeal but must form the subject of a separate suit. Per PARSONS J—Ss 248 to 253 of the Code of Civil Procedure have no reference to any claim preferred or objection made by any person who is on the record as a party to the suit. Whenever a question arises between the representative of a judgment debtor on the record (whether originally sued as such or added before or after decree) and the decree holder as to whether property in the hands of the representative was of the assets of the deceased or not that question must be determined by order of the Court executing the decree under the provisions of s. 244. MURTI GEYA v HAYAT SAHIB I L R. 23 Bom 237

144 — Claim to property attached in execution of decree—Parties to the suit—Subsequent suit by a defendant who had been exonerated in a former suit—Maintainability of such suit—A family consisted of plaintiff's father first defendant's father and second defendant's grand father. Plaintiff's brother died leaving a widow. Plaintiff's father then died and also left a widow (plaintiff's mother) him surviving. The brother's widow brought a suit for maintenance against the representatives of the first and second defendants, branches of the family, plaintiff's mother being joined as third defendant. A decree was passed against the two first mentioned defendants but plaintiff's mother was exonerated on the ground that being a female she was not liable. In execution of the decree certain lands were brought to sale and purchased by the brother's widow who transferred them to another person. At the death of plaintiff's mother which occurred subsequently the said lands would have vested in the plaintiff who now brought this suit claiming that the sales referred to were not binding on her (plaintiff) inasmuch as her mother had not been a party to the decree under which they had taken place. Held that where a party defendant in a suit is exonerated from such suit the suit being dismissed against him and decree passed against a co-defendant in the suit and in execution of that decree property belonging to and in the possession of the defendant who was so exonerated from the suit is attached and sold the latter is not entitled to maintain a suit for recovery of possession of the property and the question of his claim to and to recover possession of the property is a question falling within s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure as to debar him from maintaining such suit. Gadicherla Chinnaswamy v Gadicherla Seetayya I L R 21 Mad 40 explained. RAMASWAMI SASTRULU v KAMESWARANNA

On the 21st July 1883 an order was made for transfer of the decree to the High Court for execution. On the 5th April 1886 the mortgagee applied to the High Court for execution by attachment of the mortgaged properties and in the same year an order for attachment was made. The mortgagee died in April 1887 and on the 20th August 1894 the plaintiff (his widow and administratrix) applied to the High Court for an order absolute for sale of the mortgaged properties under a 63 of the Transfer of Property Act. On the 5th January 1899 the application was refused on the ground that the mortgaged properties were outside the territorial jurisdiction of the High Court. The plaintiff then instituted the present suit in which she sought (inter alia) administration of the estate of the mortgagee (who had died before the mortgage suit was filed) and asked for the sale of such properties as might be found subject to such mortgage. Held (affirming the decision of SALE J) that the suit was not maintainable by reason of the provisions of ss 230 and 244 of the Civil Procedure Code the questions arising in the suit being such as should have been determined in execution of the decree and not by a separate suit. JOOMAYA DASBI v TRACKOMONI DASBI 1 L R, 24 Cal 473

158 ——— Decree incapable of execution by reason of event subsequent to decree—Decree giving an option to the parties—A partition suit brought by a son against his father was referred to arbitration. On the 9th January 1890 the award was published and on the 27th March 1890 the defendants moved for and obtained a decree in terms of the award. By this decree it was ordered that in satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim the defendant should pay to him Rs 10,000 in the manner therein stated: Rs 4000 to be paid forthwith and the balance of Rs 6000 to be paid upon the plaintiff delivering to the defendant certain specified property which included two vessels or buglows called respectively the Narsi and Sambuk. In no event was defendant to be required to pay the Rs 6000 before the 15th November 1890. At the date of the decree the vessel Sambuk was at sea on a voyage and on the 18th June 1890 while still on the voyage she was lost. On the 15th November 1890 the plaintiff's attorneys demanded payment of the balance of Rs 6000. They offered to deliver the other properties specified in the decree but stated that the vessel Sambuk had been lost. They offered to pay its value which they estimated at Rs 1000. The defendants however demanded the delivery of the buglow which they stated to be worth a very large sum. The defendant having under the circumstances refused to pay the Rs 6000 the plaintiff applied for execution of the decree which was refused. He then obtained a rule calling on the defendant to show cause why the decree of the 27th March should not be amended or rectified by stating therein the amount of money to be paid to the defendant as an alternative if delivery of the vessel Sambuk could not be made such delivery having become impossible. That rule was discharged. It was contended by the plaintiff that the questions raised in the summons were questions arising in execution to be dealt with by a Judge in chambers under s. 214 of the Civil Procedure Code and that a fresh suit was not necessary. Held dismissing the summons that the application was not one in execution of a decree but was the question one arising in the course of execution of a decree but that the decree having become incapable of execution the summons asked the Judge to decide whether the rights of the parties in consequence of non execution. Held also (as to the part of the summons asking for restoration of the suit) that the matters in issue in the suit had been fully heard and determined and the rights of all parties had been settled by the decree and consequently there was nothing further to be tried. The Court could not do this suit after passing a decree proceed to ascertain the rights of the parties under a state of facts quite different from those which appeared in the pleading and arising subsequently to the decree AHMED BIN SUAIK ESSA KHALIFFA v ESSA BIN KHALIFFA

181. — *Transfer of decree by operation of law—Representatives of original decree holder—Right to appeal ago not order refusing execution—R died in May 1869 leaving his property to his executors in trust for the appellant P and he directed that the property should be assigned by them to the appellant as soon as he came of age. In August 1868 the executors filed this suit against L as manager of certain landed property belonging to the Halla Bhattia caste and known as Mahajan Wadi to recover certain loans made by them as executors to him as manager of the said wadi. On the 11th May 1870 while this suit was pending the executors assigned all the property of their testator to the appellant P. By this deed of assignment they assigned to him inter alia all moveable property debts claims and things in action whatsoever vested in them as such executors. No steps were taken subsequently to this assignment to make the assignee P a party to the suit which proceeded without amendment. On the 23rd January 1873 a decree was passed for the plaintiffs on the record for Rs 172 13 5 and it was declared that the said sum should be a first charge on the rents and income of the said wadi. Subsequently to this decree L opened an account in the name of the appellant P and from time to time made payments to him on account of the decree. The last of these payments was made on the 19th November 1884. None of these payments were certified to the Court. In 1885 the respondent L was appointed to the office of manager of the Halla Bhattia caste in the place of L the original defendant in the suit. On the 4th January 1886 his attorneys wrote to the appellant's attorneys offering to pay the appellant the balance due to him under the decree. Subsequently however he refused to make any payment to the appellant whereupon the appellant applied for execution of the decree against him as manager of the said wadi. He claimed to be a transferee of the decree under s 232 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). His application was refused by the Judge in chambers. Held that the appellant was a transferee of the decree within the meaning of s 232 of the Civil Procedure Code. The decree had been transferred to him by operation of law. As such he was*

Subsequently M transferred the decree to other persons and the co-transferees applied under s 232 of the Civil Procedure Code to have their names substituted for those of the original decree holders. The judgment debtor opposed the application on the grounds that his name had not been substituted for those of the original decree holders who had transferred to him and that the transfers to M were inoperative as the instruments of transfer had not been registered at the place where the substantial portion of the mortgaged property was situate in accordance with s 20 of the Registration Act of 1877. It appeared that no notice had been issued to M under s 232 of the Civil Procedure Code that he was dead and that his legal representatives had not been cited as required by law. Held that the matter involved questions arising between the parties to the decree or their representatives within the meaning of s 244 (c) of the Code and that the order allowing the application was therefore a decree within the definition of s 2 and was appealable as such. GULZARI LAL & DATA RAM [I. In a suit brought by the assignee of the decree holder against the sons of K to establish his right to proceed against the property in question in execution of the decree against K—Held that the question of the liability of the property to be taken in execution in the hands of the defendant was a question arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed or their representatives and relating to the execution etc. of the decree within the meaning of s 244 of the Civil Procedure Code and that the suit was consequently not maintainable. Representative of a party—Auction purchaser—Order in summary inquiry—A purchaser at a Court sale is not a party or the representative of a party within the meaning of s 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). He is therefore not bound by any order in the miscellaneous inquiry under s 250 281 or 282 of the Code. Nor is he bound by the specifications contained in the proclamation of sale of the claims of intervenors. Certain property was attached in execution of a decree. The defendants intervened and objected to the attachment on the ground that they held the property on permanent tenancy. Their objection was allowed and the Court made an order directing the property to be sold subject to the defendants' rights. In the proclamation of sale however it was stated that the Court did not guarantee the title of the intervenors. The plaintiff purchased the property at the Court sale. He then sued to eject the defendants. The defendants pleaded that the plaintiff had purchased subject to their rights as permanent tenants. Both the lower Courts rejected rights of Hindu widow—Representative—After the death of a childless Hindu widow a leasee from her of property which had belonged to her husband obtained against her vendees of part of the same property a decree for damages for wrongfully keeping him out of possession. The effect of the decision was to decree the claim against the estate of the widow and to exempt from liability the judgment debtors personally and the property which they had purchased. In execution of the decree the said property was sold and was purchased by the decree-holder; one of the judgment debtors had died during the execution proceedings and her son was duly impleaded as her representative and he raised no objection to the attachment and sale. Subsequently this son sold his rights and interests in the property and his vendee sued the decree holder to recover possession on the ground that the decree being limited to the estate of the childless Hindu widow the defendant as purchaser could not acquire by the sale any rights superior to those of the widow, that those rights had expired upon her death and left nothing to be sold and that on her death the property devolved upon the plaintiff's vendor and had thence passed to the plaintiff. Held that the plaintiff's vendor was a party to the suit within the meaning of s 244 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code and that he not having objected to the sale in execution of the decree neither he nor the plaintiff could go behind that sale or claim the property upon any title which he might have asserted in the execution proceedings and that the suit was barred by s 244. Ram Gholam v Hazaru Kwar I L R 7 All 547 followed. Bahoru Lal v Gauri Sahai I L R 8 All 620 distinguished. Mulmantra v Ashfaq Ahmad I L R 9 All 605. Roop Lal Dass v Bekan Meah I L R 15 Calc 437 and Ravanna Meeson v Kunya Nayor I L R 10 Mad 117 referred to. RAGHUBAI DIAL v HAMID JAY

On appeal to the Subordinate Judge he reversed the decision of the first Court. On a second appeal to the High Court by the auction purchaser an objection was taken that no second appeal lay at his instance. Held that inasmuch as the application was under s 244 of the Civil Procedure Code a second appeal would lie. The question of a right to a second appeal does not turn upon who may happen to be the appellant but upon whether or not the case is one within s 244 of the Code. HIRA LAL GHOSH v CHANDRA KANT GHOSH I L R. 28 Cal. 538 [3 C W N 403]

In the course of the litigation which ended in that decree Z purchased certain immovable property from B N A and K Z was subsequently dispossessed of such property in execution of the decree of August 1876. He thereupon sued the holders of that decree for possession of the same alleging that his vendors had inherited the same from D that it was not affected by that decree and that he had been improperly dispossessed of it in execution of that decree. Held by the Court that the plaintiff not being the representative of any of the parties to the suit in which that decree was passed in the sense of s 214 of the Civil Procedure Code but being if his allegations were true a purchaser from certain of the judgment-debtors of property not affected by that decree the suit was not barred by the provisions of that section. Parlab Singh v Beni

In 1879 the decree holder applied for execution of the decree and without proof that any of the assets of L had come to the hands of N obtained an order and attached lands belonging to A. A objected to the attachment but the Munsif without investigation rejected his claim and directed N to bring a regular suit. The land was sold and purchased by A B N after an abortive attempt to obtain a review of the Munsif's order from his successor brought a suit in 1880 against the decree holder and A B to recover the land. Held that as A was a party to the former suit of 1875 within the meaning of s 244 of the Civil Procedure Code 1877, the suit would not lie. ABUNDADHI v NATHERA [I L R. 5 Mad. 891] pending the appeal to the Privy Council he had transferred the shares to G his counsel in the case who had failed to restore them and he prayed that the said person might be brought upon the record and that execution for recovery of the said shares might be given against him. The Court passed an order upon this application calling on G to show cause why he should not be called upon to restore the shares made over to him by R and he thereupon filed an answer denying that he was the custodian of the shares and alleging that he was their purchaser for value. The Court passed an order directing that G's name should be placed on the record, so that the decree might be executed against him. Held that the question being one between two judgment-debtors inter se and not between the parties arrayed against each other as decree-holders of the one part and judgment debtors or their representatives on the other the provisions of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code were not applicable to the case that G could not be regarded as a representative of R within the meaning of that section. RAYNOR v MRS COPIE BANK

308 — Official Assignee—Attachment of property—Judgment debtor declared an insolvent—Claim by Official Assignee to attached property—Appeal from order disallowing claim—Stat 11 & 12 Vic c 21 ss 7 49—Representative of judgment debtor—A decree holder having attached the property of his judgment debtors in execution of the decree obtained an order for sale of the attached property. Prior to sale the judgment debtors made an application to be declared insolvents and obtained an order under Stat 11 & 12 Vic c 21 s 7 by which their property was vested in the Official Assignee. An application was then made by the Official Assignee to the Court in which the execution of the decree was proceeding for the release of the property from attachment and that the property might be made over to him. The Court dismissed the application. On appeal the District Judge reversed the first Court's order. Held that the matter did not come before the Court of first instance under s. 49 of Stat 11 & 12 Vic c. 21 inasmuch as that section refers to cases where the insolvent's schedule has been filed and to debts or demands admitted therein and in the present case no schedule had been filed at the time of the Official Assignee's application and the Court could therefore only entertain the application under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code relating to the execution of decrees. Held that the Official Assignee could not be held to be a representative of the judgment debtors within the meaning of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code and his application was not one relating to the execution discharge or satisfaction of the decree. Held that the Court of first instance had only jurisdiction in the matter under s. 278 of the Code and disposed of it under that section and that the District Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal. KASHI PRASAD v MILLER

A Hindu widow mortgaged certain properties and afterwards by an ikramamah made them over to B the next heir. The ikramamah contained a condition that B was to be liable for the widow's debts. Subsequently the mortgagor brought a suit against the widow on the mortgage and joined B as a party on the ground that he was in possession of the mortgaged properties. That suit resulted in a money decree being passed on appeal by the High Court against the widow personally the property in the hands of B being held not to be liable. The case was taken on appeal to the Privy Council and pending the hearing of that appeal the widow died and B was brought on the record as her legal representative. The decree of the High Court was ultimately confirmed by the Privy Council. In execution of the decree it was sought to make B liable to satisfy the amount out of the properties which he had obtained under the ikarnamah the mortgagee not having been aware of the conditions of that document before the decree of the High Court. Held that so far as these properties were concerned he was not the legal representative of the widow as he inherited them as heir at law of her husband and that his title to them under the ikarnamah was not that of a representative within the meaning of cl (c) of s 244. Held further that the question of B's liability under the ikarnamah did not fall within the scope of the provisions of cl (c) of s 244 as being a question to be decided between the parties to the suit as although B was a party to the suit the only claim against him was that the property in his hands was liable as having been previously hypothecated and as the suit was dismissed so far as that claim was concerned it was not a question relating to the execution of the decree. KANESH WAR PERSHAD v. substituted as his representatives. In execution of the decree only the share which had stood recorded in the name of the deceased judgment debtor and which was in possession of J and L as his representatives, was sold and the decree holder then applied for sale of the other shares which had been attached. To this B objected under s 281 of the Civil Procedure Code claiming to be the owner of the shares in question. Before the hearing of her objection she died and L applied to have his name brought upon the record in her place for the purpose of supporting the objections. An order having been passed disallowing the objections which had been filed by B L applied to the High Court. A preliminary objection was taken on behalf of the decree-holder to the hearing of the appeal on the ground that as the first Court's order related to L's claim as the heir of B to have the shares entered in her name released from attachment it must be regarded as passed under s 281 of the Civil Procedure Code and as conclusive subject to L's bringing a suit to establish his right. On the other side it was contended that L being the representative of the deceased judgment debtor K the first Court's order must be regarded as passed under s 244 of the Code and the appeal would therefore be. Held that the preliminary objection must prevail and the first Court's order must be regarded as passed under s 281 and not under s 244 of the Code inasmuch as L's claim which was rejected by it was nothing more than to come in as B's representative for the purpose of supporting her objections and it was in right of a third person whose interest he asserted to have passed to him that he prayed admission to the proceedings and his character was wholly distinct from that he filled as the legal representative of his deceased father. Because L happened, for the purpose of the execution procedure to be his father's legal representative and to be liable to satisfy the decree to the extent of any assets which he might have come to his hands it did not follow that any rights claimed by him through a third person must be dealt with and could only be dealt with between him and the decree holder in the execution proceedings. Waked Ali v. Deceased judgment debtor—

Execution against a person not the legal representative—The defendants along with one N and C had brought a suit against one A in the Civil Court at Peshawar in the Punjab and obtained a decree on the 23rd July 1878 for Rs 05 545 12 0. In 1881 application for transfer of the decree to the Court at Moradabad for execution was made and it was granted, but no steps were taken thereupon. On the 12th June 1883 A died. On the 30th April 1884 the defendants again applied to the Court at Peshawar treating their judgment debtor as being then alive for a fresh certificate to execute their decree in the Moradabad district and obtained it. On the 20th August 1885 they made an application to the District Judge of Moradabad for execution of their decree and in it it was stated that the application was for execution against Ajudhia Prasad and after his death against Angan Lal the own brother and Durga Kuar widow and Lachman Prasad and others sons of Ajudhia Prasad residents of Kundarki and the said Angan Lal at present residing at Umballa and employed in the Commissariat Transport Department judgment debtors. It was further stated that the judgment debtor was dead and his heirs are living and in possession of his estate and Angan Lal himself has realized Rs 637 4 9 due to the deceased judgment debtor from the Commissariat Department of Calcutta and appropriated the same therefore to that extent the person of the said Angan Lal was liable. Notification of this application was issued to Angan Lal as also to the other persons named therein. Angan Lal objected to the application as against him stating that although he was the brother of A deceased yet he always lived separate and carried on business separately and that there was no connection or partnership between him and the deceased judgment debtor and that he had no property of the deceased in his possession. Further that as A left issue it was wrong to call him an heir to A and take out execution process against him. In reply to these objections the judgment creditors (defendants) did not contend that Angan Lal was the legal representative of the deceased judgment debtor but treated him as a person in possession of a sum of money belonging to the deceased and therefore liable to the extent of the sum so received by him. The Subordinate Judge holding that Angan Lal was the brother of the deceased and had realised the amount of the Commissariat Office which he failed to prove that he paid to the deceased ordered execution to proceed against him. Angan Lal then instituted this suit to set aside the order of the Subordinate Judge. It was contended that the proceedings of the Subordinate Judge were held under s 244 of the Code and therefore no separate suit would be held that the contention must fail as the Subordinate Judge never treated the proceedings in execution against Angan Lal upon the footing that he was the legal representative of the deceased judgment debtor Mahomed Aga Ali Khan v Balmukund L R 3 I A, 241 and Nadir Hossain v Bipea Chand Basarat S C L R 437, were referred to ANGAN LAL v GUDAR MAL I L R, 10 All 470 of judgment debtor—Death of party to suit before final decree in appeal—Subsequent proceedings in execution taken against representatives of each party—A decree was given to the defendant (then plaintiff) in 1856 for possession of land and mesne profits against numerous defendants including one Dawan Rai. Some of the judgment debtors including Dawan Rai appealed to the Sadr Diwani Adalat but before the decree of the Sadr Diwani Adalat was passed, Dawan Singh died. No application was made to put any representative of Dawan Rai on the record but in 1881 (the amount of the mesne profits payable under the decree having been finally determined in 1877) certain persons were made parties as representatives of Dawan Rai to various proceedings in execution of the decree for mesne profits, which ended in the sale of certain property which had been of Dawan Rai in his lifetime. Subsequently the said representatives of Dawan Rai brought a suit to recover the property sold as above described on the ground that they were no parties to the decree under execution. purchased by the father of the plaintiff A who eventually obtained possession of it through the Court. The plaintiff B purchased privately the mehal Eldhala from the mortgagors and from M some time after the date of the decree on the mortgage. That decree was in course of execution when the mortgagors died, and his estate came into the hands of the Administrator-General who on 13th August 1878 sold the decree to G defendant No 1. After this sale several applications were made to have the name of G substituted for that of the original decree holder but in none of these applications was any further step taken towards execution of the decree or any order made for substitution of the name of G until 16th July 1883, when after notice to the defendants under s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code G's name was substituted as decree-holder and execution was taken out against the mortgaged property including Olpore and Eldhala. The plaintiffs each claimed the mehal they had respectively purchased but their claims were disallowed. In suits brought by the plaintiffs for a declaration of their right to hold the properties free of the mortgage the Court found that G was only a benamidar so far as his purchase of the mortgage-decree was concerned. Held the plaintiff A being the purchaser at a public sale in execution of a decree was not the representative of the judgment debtor the mortgagors within the meaning of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code but the case was different with respect to plaintiff B who claimed by private purchase and must be considered the representative of the judgment debtors within the meaning of that section. Dinendronath Banerjee v Raj Coomar Ghose L R 8 I L R 65 I L R 7 Cal 107 Anundmoyee Dossee v Dhondendra Chunder Moakherjee 14 Moore v I A 101; 6 R L R 122 and Lalla Prabhulal v Mylne I L R 14 Cal 401 referred to. GOUR SUNDAR LAHRI v HEM CHUNDER CHOWDHURY GOUR SUNDAR LAHRI v HAFIZ MOHAMMED ALI KHAN [I L R. 18 Cal 355]

Thereupon at H P's request five persons gave a havala or oral undertaking to pay the amount of the decree and the attachment was removed. It appeared that some payment was made under the havala. Subsequently H P and the defendants Nos. 2 and 3 executed a bond to the plaintiff reciting the havala the payment thereunder and agreeing to pay the amount of the decree with interest. Neither the havala nor the bond was brought to the notice of the Court for sanction and the decree which was capable of execution was then destroyed. The plaintiff now sued to recover the debt due under the bond. The District Judge was of opinion that the part of the bond which contained a promise to pay interest was void but that in respect of the principal amount of the decree it was not void. On reference to the High Court—Held that the whole bond was void. The havala was an agreement such as is contemplated in para 1 of s 257A of the Civil Procedure Code and was void for want of the sanction of the Court under that section. 13 ————— Agreement for or to give time for satisfaction of judgment debt—Agreement without sanction of Court—Illegal contract—Contract Act (IX of 1872) s 23—Consideration—The plaintiff obtained a decree against the defendant under which the judgment debtor was liable to pay the amount by instalments with interest at 4 per cent. Eventually the defendant failing to pay the plaintiff accepted a bond executed jointly by the defendant and his father by which they both became liable for the amount of the decree with interest at 18½ per cent. In a suit on the bond it was contended that the bond was void under s 257A of the Civil Procedure Code as being an agreement to give time for the satisfaction of the judgment debt made for no consideration and without the sanction of the Court and also without such sanction providing for payment of a sum in excess of the amount due under the decree that it was void within the meaning of s 23 of the Contract Act as being forbidden by or of a nature to defeat the provisions of s 257A of the Civil Procedure Code and that consequently the suit on it was not maintainable. Held that s 257A of the Code was not applicable. That section was framed to prohibit the enforcement of an agreement of the kind mentioned therein if made without the sanction of the Court in execution of the decree but was not intended to take away the right of parties of entering into a fresh contract either for payment of the judgment debt to give time for such payment or for the payment of a larger sum than may be covered by the decree if it be for a proper consideration. In this case the consideration for the bond was a lawful consideration and could not be said that because satisfaction of the decree was not certified to the Court there was no consideration. Held also the bond was not void under s 23 of the Contract Act. Seem—The words any law in that section refer to some substantive law and not to an adjective law, such as the Procedure Code is. HICKUM CHAND OSWAL v TAJAR UNNESSA BIRI [I L R 16 Cal. 504]

15 ————— Adjustment of a decree barred by limitation—The plaintiff's father had in his lifetime obtained a decree against the first defendant and two other persons. The decree having been partly satisfied the first defendant and his son who was no party to the decree executed a bond for the amount still remaining due. At the date of this bond the decree was barred by limitation

No sanction for the bond was obtained under s. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code. The adjustment was secured under s. 28. The plaintiff now sued upon the bond. On reference to the High Court—Held that the bond did not require the sanction of the Court under s. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code. That section relates to judgment-debts which are still enforceable. SRIKATRAY v. GOWIND NARAYAN

18 ——— Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII of 1888) s. 2—Adjustment of a decree. Suit upon—Agreement to extend time for enforcing decree by execution—On the 16th July 1880 S obtained a decree against A for Rs 15 with costs. On the next day K paid S Rs 100 in part satisfaction of the decree and induced A to accept a bond by which he (S) gave up the costs and by which A was to pay the balance of the decree with interest at the end of eight months. S died upon the bond. A contended that the bond was void under s. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code and that the suit would not lie. Held that the suit would lie. Since the amendment made in s. 28 by Act VII of 1888 such payments or adjustments may be recognized by a Civil Court except when executing the decree and therefore a suit based upon such a payment or adjustment should be admitted. The concluding clause of s. 28 has no direct bearing on s. 257A as it relates to a different subject matter. Quare—Whether a 257A relates exclusively to agreements to extend the time for enforcing decrees by execution as ruled by the Calcutta High Court or is applicable to all agreements according to the view taken by the Bombay High Court? Jahar Mahomed v. 17 ——— Agreement to give time for the satisfaction of a judgment-debt—Agreement not enforceable without sanction by the Court—S. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code when it provides that every agreement to give time for the satisfaction of a judgment debt shall be void unless made for consideration and with the sanction of the Court etc. does not make such agreements illegal in the sense prohibited by law. It only prevents such agreements being enforced in a Court of Law. Where such an agreement to give time never sanctioned by the Court as required by s. 257A formed part of the consideration for a bond and had actually been enjoyed by the obligee of the bond—Held that such consideration not being in its nature illegal and not having as a fact failed, there was no reason why the obligee should not enforce the terms of the bond. BANK OF BENGAL v. 22 ——— Adjustment of decree out of Court—Agreement not certified to Court—Per Judicata—Suit to enforce agreement or for damages for breach of it—A decree for partition of family property was passed in favour of two plaintiffs. One of the plaintiffs having died before execution a question arose between the survivor and one of the defendants as to the devolution of his interest and the decision was in favour of the surviving plaintiff. The contending parties made an arrangement according to which some of the land representing the share of the deceased plaintiff should be given to the defendant. This agreement was not certified to the Court and the decree was executed at the instance of the surviving plaintiff who subsequently refused to give effect to the arrangement. The then defendant now sued in the alternative for possession of the land awarded to him or for damages. Held (1) that the plaintiff's claim for the land was not maintainable (2) that the claim for damages for breach of the agreement was maintainable. 23 — Agreement for satisfaction of judgment debt—A money decree was passed against a zamindar by the High Court in 1883 and it was transferred to the District Court for execution. The decree holder attached and prepared to bring to sale certain villages of the judgment debtor. These villages were included in a mortgage subsequently executed by the judgment debtor in favour of third parties. Both before and after the mortgage the decree holder received from the zamindar certain sums in consideration of his agreeing to postponements of the sale. Also it was agreed between them at a date subsequent to the mortgage that interest should be computed at a higher rate than that provided by the decree. Subsequently the decree holder sought to bring the land to sale and in computing the amount then due gave credit for none of the sums so received and calculated interest at the enhanced rate. The mortgagee objected that the computation was erroneous in both these respects and the District Judge upheld his objection. The judgment debtor took no part in the contest. Held that the District Court not being the Court which passed the decree had no power to sanction the agreements under a 257A and that the decision was right. 24 — Agreement to give time to the judgment debtor—Agreement not sanctioned by the Court—A judgment debtor asked for time to pay the decretal amount. The decree holders agreed to give time on condition that the judgment debtor gave them a bond for Rs 500 that sum representing a portion of the decree holder's claim which had been dismissed as barred by limitation. The judgment debtor gave the bond but the sanction of the Court was not obtained to the transaction. In a suit by the decree holders to recover the money secured by the bond given under the circumstances mentioned above it was held that the transaction was one contemplated by a 257A of the Code of Civil Procedure and that as it had not been made with the sanction of the Court it could not be enforced and the suit should be dismissed. taken place between him and K. The Judge however refused to enter into the question of the adjustment as the terms of it had not been certified to the Court under s 206 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that the Judge was in error that it was the duty of K on applying for the release of C to certify the adjustment to the Court that it would be unjust to allow him to take advantage of his own omission to do so and that not having done so the presumption against him was that the decree had been satisfied in full but that under the circumstances it would be the most equitable course to direct the Judge to enquire into the terms of the adjustment. The kistbandi contained an express proviso that in default of payment of three consecutive kists, the whole amount due under the bond was to become at once realizable and it also provided that in case of default the amounts due were to be recovered by execution to which the judgment-debtor was to make no objection. Certain instalments having fallen due the judgment-creditor sought to enforce the kistbandi by execution. Held that he was entitled to do so that he was not bound to bring a regular suit and that a provision in the bond by which payment might be enforced against property which could not have been attached and a bid in execution of the decree did not prevent the decree holder from proceeding by execution so long as he did not seek to enforce that provision. *AMER FAYLA KHATOON v. of a decree dated the 14th June 1878 the parties, on the 11th January 1881 entered into an agreement which was registered and filed in the Court executing the decree. The deed recited that the decree was under execution and that a mortgage bond dated the 1st December 1873 in favour of the judgment debtor by a third party had been attached and advertised for sale and that the decree holder and judgment debtor had arranged the following method of satisfying the decree that the judgment-debtor should make over the said bond to the decree holder in order that he might bring a suit thereon at his own expense against the obligor and realize the amount secured by the bond and out of the amount realized satisfy the decree under execution with costs and future interest together with all costs of the suit to be brought against the obligor and together with a sum due by the judgment debtor to the decree holder under a note of hand for Rs 200 with interest and other details which need not be stated. On the same day that this deed was executed the decree-holder filed a petition in the Court to the effect that under the agreement an arrangement had been made for payment of the judgment debt by which the judgment-debtor made over to him the bond advertised for sale in order that the petitioner should file a suit under it at his own cost against the obligor and realize the debt due under the decree in execution with interest and costs and he prayed that the sale to be held that day might be postponed and the application for execution struck off for the present and the previous attachment maintained and stating that after realization of the amount entered in the bond advertised for sale an application for execution would be duly filed. On this the order was that the execution case be struck off the file and the attachment maintained. On the 24th December 1883 the decree holder applied for execution of the decree alleging that the judgment debtor had failed to make over the bond to him according to the agreement. The judgment-debtor objected that the decree was no longer capable of execution having been superseded by the agreement of the 11th January 1881 and that the application was barred by limitation the previous application being dated the 8th November 1880. PER OLDFIELD J—That the agreement of the 11th January 1881 did not contemplate and had not the effect of cancelling the decree and substituting for it a new contract inasmuch as the deed contained nothing to the effect that the decree was superseded and all it did was to provide means by which the decree together with another small sum due by the judgment-debtor to the decree holder might be satisfied without having recourse to the sale of the bond attached and the effect would be that on realization satisfaction would be certified in whole or in part to the Court executing the decree. Further if the arrangement was to be regarded as within the meaning of an adjustment of the decree under s 258 of the Civil Procedure Code it could only be recognized by the Court when certified by the decree holder or judgment-debtor and in this case the only certification in which was made was by the decree holder by his petition of the 11th January 1881 which was in respect of a temporary arrangement under which the decree remained in force Per MAHMOOD J—That the agreement of the 11th January 1891 was intended by the parties as a performance of the obligation created by the decree by substituting a fresh obligation founded upon contract but that the deed could not be regarded as such an adjustment of the decree as satisfied the requirements of s 258 of the Civil Procedure Code because the creditors whilst admitting the creation of a separate contract took care to say that the decree was to be kept alive and the attachment thereunder was to subsist and that therefore the certification of the adjustment was inadequate and could not be recognized in executing the decree FATEH MUHAMMAD v GOPAL DAS

A suit will not lie to enforce an uncertified agreement of adjustment of a decree against a judgment debtor the consideration for which is that it shall operate in satisfaction of the decree as there is in that case no consideration which the Court can recognize and therefore no valid consideration for the judgment debtor's agreement. The plaintiff was the assignee of a decree obtained by one O K against the defendants on the 5th May 1883. By that decree O K was declared entitled to recover Rs 961 5 6 with interest at nine per cent. from the defendants and payment was ordered to be made to him of the said sum by weekly instalments of Rs 200. In order to secure the payment of the said instalments the defendants were required to execute a mortgage to O K of certain property with power to him to sell the same and to execute the decree for the whole amount in case of default for six months. O K assigned the decree to the plaintiff in the present suit and subsequently to the assignment (viz. on the 21st July 1883) the defendants executed to the plaintiff the mortgage in which the present suit was brought. The mortgage-deed after reciting the above facts stated that the defendants had agreed to satisfy the amount of the decree and it contained a covenant by the defendants that they would pay Rs 200 15 6 with interest at six per cent. by monthly instalments of Rs 400 from the 21st August 1883

The mortgage therefore differed from the decree both with regard to the instalments and the rate of interest. mortgaged property subject to mortgage—Right of mortgagee to redeem—A mortgagee having obtained a decree against his mortgagor for the sale of the mortgaged property a portion of the latter was subsequently sold subject to the said decree in execution of a money decree obtained by a third party against the mortgagor. The mortgagee purchased the portion so sold whereupon the mortgagor presented a petition under a 208 of the Code of Civil Procedure claiming that the mortgagee was bound to discharge his mortgage debt and should be called upon to certify satisfaction of his decree. Held that petitioner was not entitled to the relief prayed for but only to proceed upon the footing that the portion of the mortgaged property which had been purchased by the mortgagee remained in twelfth standing such purchase redeemable by petitioner together with the remainder of the property. Quere—Whether the subject matter of the petition was an adjustment of the decree within the meaning of a 208 of the Code of Civil Procedure. REUSAPPA MUDALIAR v COMMERCIAL AND LAND MORTGAGE BANK I L R. 23 Mad. 377

65. Decree—Satisfaction of decree out of Court—Payment uncertified—Suit to recover money paid in satisfaction on of decree—The plaintiff had been a surety for the defendant on a bond for Rs50 passed to G by the defendant. G obtained a decree against the plaintiff on this bond and the plaintiff satisfied the decree by paying G Rs38 in full satisfaction. The payment was made out of Court and was not certified to the Court. The plaintiff now sued the defendant to recover the money so paid by him to G. He called G as a witness who acknowledged he had received Rs38 from the plaintiff in full satisfaction of the decree. Held that the last clause of a 208 of the Civil Procedure Code did not apply to such a case and that the payment made by the plaintiff to G might be proved. BAJAJ LAKSHMAN v DADA JOTI I L R. 12 Bom. 235

66. Omission to certify satisfaction of decree—Suit to enforce mortgage—In 1877 M executed a mortgage to S in consideration of a sum paid in cash and a debt due by M to S under a decree. S did not certify satisfaction of the decree to the Court under a 258 of the Code of Civil Procedure nor was this stipulated for in the instrument of mortgage. Held in a suit to enforce the mortgage that a 258 was no bar to the plaintiff's right to recover. SELLAMAYAN v MU THAN I L R. 2 Mad. 811

67. Decree adjustment or satisfaction of—Adjustment after attachment—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) s 273—A decree being attached as directed by s 273 of the Civil Procedure Code its adjustment subsequent to such attachment cannot be recognized by the Court. GOPAL NANASHET v JOHABIMAL DADA BALSHEET v JOHABIMAL I L R. 18 Bom. 522

69 ———— Decree payable by instalments—Limitation—Waiver by decree holder—Payment out of Court—Limitation Act (XV of 1877) (ch II art 179 (6))—An application for execution of a decree payable by instalments was resisted by the judgment debtor as barred by limitation on the ground that nothing had been paid under the decree and that the application was made more than three years after the first instalment fell due. The decree holder pleaded that he had waived the default in payment of the first instalment by accepting such payment shortly afterwards and that the application was in time having been made within three years from the date when the second instalment was due. Held that the decree holder could not raise this plea as the payment in question had not been certified to the Court executing the decree and therefor could not under s 208 of the Civil Procedure Code be recognized. Sham Lal v Kanahia Lal I L R 4 All 816 and Zahur Hussain v Dakhatar I L R 7 All 817 not followed.

70 ———— *Execution of decree—Attachment—Precious assignment in satisfaction of decree of third party—Suit by assignee to establish right to attached property—Where a regular suit under s 283 of the Code of Civil Procedure was brought to establish the plaintiff's right to certain attached property on the allegation that the property attached had been transferred to him in satisfaction of a decree held by him against the judgment debtor—Held that it was not necessary that such transfer should be certified under the provisions of s 208 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The prohibition to take cognizance of adjustments and payments referred to in s 208 above mentioned relates only to the Court executing the decree. HAIRAN SINGH v HANITA PRASAD

71 ———— Landlord and tenant—Muzas tenure declared in decree—Subsequent payment of rent by defendants not a payment under decree but under the tenure—Payment not certified to Court—The plaintiff sued the defendants to recover possession of certain land. The defendants pleaded they were muzas tenants and entitled to possession as long as they paid the rent. The suit was compromised and by a consent decree it was declared that the defendants held by muzas tenure and they were directed to pay rent as before or in default the plaintiff should take possession. The plaintiff afterwards applied in execution for possession alleging that the rent had not been paid. The defendants pleaded that it had been paid and the plaintiff rejoined that even if it had been paid, the Court could not recognize the payment, as it had not been certified under s 258 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that under the circumstances the rent when paid was to be deemed as paid under the muzas tenure and not under the decree and therefore a writ of the Civil Procedure Code did not apply and payment need not be certified. KEDARI v GAJAL

1 ———— *Decree for performance of a particular act—A decree had been obtained that the defendants do within six weeks after the service upon them of this decree remove the obstruction and reopen the pathway or lane leading from the north west end of the plaintiff's house northwards to a public road as the same existed before the commencement of the suit and as described in the plaint. Held that this was a decree for the performance of a particular act on the part of the defendants and must be executed under the provisions of s 200 Act VIII of 1859—i.e. by imprisonment of the party or attachment of his property or by both. Therefore an order for execution of the decree by causing the obstruction to be removed was set aside as illegal. BRONOSU MONRY MURDERI v ROBIN CHUNDER BRILL

2 ———— *Execution of decree for restitution of conjugal rights—A who had been directed by a decree to refrain from preventing her daughter from returning to her husband after the date of the decree permitted her daughter who was of age to reside in her house. Held that such conduct on the part of A was no such evidence of interference with her daughter's return as would justify the execution of the decree against her under the provisions of s 200 of Act VIII of 1859. ALTA I KICAR v SURAJ LAL SASAD

6 ——— Decree for joint possession and management of property—Attachment for disobedience to decrees—Civil Procedure Code 1877 s 260—By a decree relating to certain joint property belonging to the plaintiff and defendant but which had previously been held in the name of the defendant it was directed that the plaintiff and defendant should jointly manage the property and that the names of both should appear in all papers connected with such property. The plaintiff subsequently applied to have his name registered in the Collectorate but was opposed by the defendant who it appeared also allowed the amlaks of the estate to continue to use his sole name. Held that the Court had under the circumstances jurisdiction under s. 260 of the Civil Procedure Code to attach the defendant's property until he had obeyed the decree by having the joint names of himself and the plaintiff inserted in all documents belonging to the estate. GOURI PRASAD MOITRA v BROJA NATH SANTAL

The ground of their application was that D had recovered a decree on certain hundis which had been fraudulently transferred to him by K and P. The Munsif holding that the question of the ownership of the decree could not be determined in the miscellaneous department referred the applicants to regular suits. These were accordingly instituted and the transfer to D declared to be fraudulent and colourable. Held that the question of the title of the plaintiffs as against D to have their debt paid out of the money in deposit ought to have been decided in the Court in which the money was in deposit. The Munsif was in error in directing the applicants to a regular suit. PERSHAD v GUJADHUR RAM defendant In 1879 by an order under s 376 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the immovable property of the judgment debtor was placed under the manage-and during the period when the judgment debtor's property was in charge of the Collector various applications for execution were made by the decree-holders. Finally, in 1896 about ten years after the last preceding application the decree-holders applied for execution of their decree shortly after the prop-

as regards the immovable property of the judgment debtor against which execution was sought, the

the decree holders had no remedy by execution against

2. Arrangement for instalments extending over twelve years.—Where a Collector recommended that the lands of a judgment debtor should be exempted from auction sale and that the judgment-debt should be satisfied by money instalments extending over a period of twelve years and the Judge on the matter being referred to the Civil Courts for sanction and approval, in sending the proceedings to the Munsif intimated that the arrangement was a proper one and the Munsif in his order referred to this opinion of the Judge—Held that the recommendation of the Collector should have been dealt with by the Court executing the decree in the exercise of its own judgment and not in deference to the opinion expressed by the Judge who exceeded his jurisdiction in interfering in the matter. The arrangement proposed by the Collector was not one which could be proposed or accepted under the terms of s 244 of the Civil Procedure Code MUTTRA PRASAD & RAMFERNAD [2 N W 39]

L.—Suit against public officer—Notice of action Form of—In a suit against the Deputy Magistrate of A and the Deputy Magistrate of D for damages for having in bad faith and maliciously caused the plaintiff to be confined in hajat, the plaintiff served a notice under s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code on the defendants to the effect that the Deputy Magistrate acting in concert with the intention of oppressing the plaintiff had wilfully improperly and illegally kept him in hajat and thereby caused him injury. Held that the notice sufficiently stated the cause of action within the terms of s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code it not being

3 ——— Suit against public officer in respect of acts done by him in his official capacity—*Notice of suit—Suit for damages against a public officer—Trespass—Misjoinder of causes of action—Amendment of plaint—*The plaintiff sued the defendant a public officer to recover damages for two distinct acts (viz wrongful arrest and trespass) alleged to have been illegally and maliciously done by the defendant on two different occasions and claimed one lump sum as damages for both the acts no permission to amend the plaint was asked for in the lower Court. On the 21st of October 1895 the plaintiff instituted this suit having on the 18th of September 1895 served the defendant with a notice under s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Held that the former act (viz the plaintiff's arrest) was an act done by the defendant in his official capacity and was clearly of the kind contemplated by a s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code under which two months notice to the defendant would be necessary previous to the institution of the suit and that the suit was rightly dismissed by the lower Court for want of such notice. Shahunshah Begum v. Fergusson I L. R. 7 Cal. 499 distinguished. *Quare—*Whether the latter act (viz the trespass into the plaintiff's house) on the allegations in the plaint was an act done by the Magistrate in his official capacity and whether a notice under s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code would be necessary previous to suing for damages for such an act. Held further that as the two acts were mixed up together in the plaint and one lump sum claimed as damages for both and as no permission to amend the plaint was asked for in the lower Court so as to convert the suit into one for damages with reference to the trespass only the plaint ought not to be allowed to be amended on appeal to the High Court. JOGENDRA NATH ROY v. costs of realising Government revenue—S. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code provides that no suit shall be instituted against the Secretary of State in Council or against a public officer in respect of an act purporting to be done by him in his official capacity until the expiration of two months next after notice in writing has been in the case of the Secretary of State in Council delivered to or left at the office of a Secretary to the Local Government or the Collector of the District etc. The plaintiff had instituted a suit against the Secretary of State for India in Council to set aside a certain sale of the plaintiff's property (possession of which had been given to the purchaser) but had not given him the notice prescribed by s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code. The first Court (AMER ALI J.) gave the plaintiff a decree. Held on appeal (reversing the decision of AMER ALI J.) that whether or not the words in respect of an act purporting to be done by him in his official capacity relate only to a public officer and not to the Secretary of State no suit whatever is maintainable against the Secretary of State unless the notice prescribed by s. 424 of the Code of Civil Procedure has been given and that therefore the present suit could not be maintained. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL v. B set up in defence that the rent was not payable to D C S but to N C A the molar ardar. N C A who claimed under a mokarn title and alleged that he was in receipt of the rents from the raiyats was added a party under s 73 Act VIII of 1869. The Munsif passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff. On appeal by N C A which was heard and decided by the Subordinate Judge on reference by the District Judge the decree of the first Court was reversed and the suit dismissed. On appeal to the High Court—Held that N C A was properly

24. — Suit against agent and surety—In a suit for collection papers and moneys against a gomastah and his surety a decree was given against the gomastah and the surety was absolved from liability. Plaintiff appealed to make the surety liable and the Judge on appeal dismissed the claim against both defendants. Held that as the decision of the first Court did not proceed on a ground common to the two defendants the Judge was wrong in reversing it as against the gomastah. RAM MONIYER DEBIA v. JARED SHARAB

25. — Substantial change in suit—Alteration or reversal of decree where only some defendants are made parties—Where a suit at the time of institution within the jurisdiction of the Court in which it is brought has undergone a substantial change and become a suit which by law requires the order of a superior tribunal for its hearing in the original Court and such order has not been obtained plaintiff cannot subsequently on appeal be allowed to revert to the original form of the suit for the purpose of upholding the lower Court's judgment as far as regards the original defendant so that in an appeal to which only the original defendants were made parties the Court refused to reverse or alter the decree. BULDEO DASS v. BULDEO DASS

26. — Persons not parties to proceedings in appeal not bound by the result of those proceedings—Decrees in three separate suits for the partition of a certain estate having been referred to the Collector of Patnaguri for execution under the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) s 205 B and R (brothers of the first appellant) who were parties to the suits objected to the Collector's mode of partition and applied to the Court to set aside the Collector's scheme and to direct a fresh partition. The Subordinate Judge of Vengurda granted the application and set aside the partition ordered by the Collector. Against this order P who was plaintiff in one of the suits appealed to the District Court and in the appeal he made B alone the respondent. The District Court reversed the order of the Subordinate Judge and upheld the order of the Collector. Thereupon B preferred a second appeal to the High Court against the decision of the District Court. To this appeal neither R nor his brother the present appellant were made parties. The High Court having confirmed the decision of the District Court proceedings were taken to carry out the partition according to the Collector's original scheme. The appellant objected on the ground that the Collector's scheme

had been set aside by the Subordinate Judge and that the appellant had not been a party to the proceedings in either of the Appellate Courts. He contended that he was therefore not bound by the decisions of the Appellate Courts and that the order of the Subordinate Judge setting aside the partition ordered by the Collector was still in force so far as he was concerned. He therefore applied that the property should be divided in accordance with that order. His application was rejected by the Court of first instance as time barred inasmuch as more than a year had elapsed since the date of the order of the Subordinate Judge and during that time the applicant had taken no steps to enforce the order. On appeal the Acting District Judge confirmed the order of the lower Court holding that the order of the Subordinate Judge was no longer in force having been set aside by the High Court. On second appeal to the High Court—Held that the appellant was not bound by the final decision of the High Court. The original order being in his favour he could not be deprived of the benefit of that order without having the opportunity to defend it. Not having been a party to the proceedings in appeal he was not affected by the result of those proceedings. Where there are several respondents before the Court at first appeal though one of them may represent his fellows in a further appeal he cannot represent a person who was not his co-respondent and against whom therefore no decree could have been made on a point common to the two or on any point at all. DEV GOPAL SARTAN v. 27. — Appeal on full Court fees from de res dismissing suit in part—Remand of whole case though no cross appeal or objection preferred—Dismissal of whole suit on remand—High Court competent in second appeal to consider validity of remand order not specially appealed—Civil Procedure Code ss 543 561—A plaintiff whose suit had been decreed in part appealed from so much of the first Court's decree as was adverse to him and stamped his memorandum of appeal with a stamp which would have covered an appeal from the whole decree. The defendant did not appeal or file cross-objections. The lower Appellate Court remanded the whole case to the first Court under s 562 of the Civil Procedure Code the plaintiff not appealing under s 568 (28) from the order of remand. The first Court then dismissed the whole suit and on appeal by the plaintiff the lower Appellate Court confirmed the decree. On a second appeal to the High Court—Held (i) that the High Court was competent to consider the validity or propriety of the order of remand though it had not been specifically appealed against; (ii) that the order of remand was ultra vires so far as it related to that part of the first Court's decree which was favourable to the plaintiff. The lower Appellate Court not having jurisdiction in the absence of any appeal or objection by the defendant to disturb that part of the decree

B appealed and the Appellate Court reversed the decree and rejected the plaintiff's claim altogether. Subsequently A who had not joined in the appeal applied for execution of the original decree. Held that although A had not been a party to the appeal he was bound by the decision of the Appellate Court and was not entitled to take out execution. DABAI DHONDHAR v COLLECTOR OF SALT REVENUE

29 ————— Power of Appellate Court to alter decree on appeal by one party—Madras Civil Courts Act 1873—Jurisdiction of Munsif—Suit for partition and mesne profits—N sued S and others for partition of a share of certain land and claimed mesne profits from other defendants who were tenants of the land. S obtained a decree by consent for her share and a sum of Rs 93 was decreed to her against the tenants for mesne profits. Against this decree the tenants appealed. The Subordinate Judge finding that the subject matter of the suit the land of which partition was claimed exceeded the jurisdiction of the Munsif reversed the decree of the Munsif and directed the plaintiff to be returned for presentation in the proper Court. It was contended, on appeal to the High Court that the Subordinate Judge could not set aside the decree against the tenants for mesne profits. Held that as the Munsif's Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit for partition it could make no decree for mesne profits and therefore the Subordinate Judge had power to set it aside. NAGAMMA v SUBBA

30 ————— Appeal—Ground of appeal common to all the judgment debtors—Reversal or modification of the decrees as against all on appeal by one only—S 544 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not enable an Appellate Court to decide upon a ground which it considers to be common to all the defendants on appeal preferred by one only of such defendants and to reverse or modify the decree of the Court below in favour of all the defendants unless the lower Court has pre-upon a ground common to all the defendants. It is only when the decree appealed against has proceeded upon a ground common to all the defendants that is when the Court below has made a decree against several defendants upon a finding which applies equally to all of them that under s 544 any one of the defendants may appeal against the whole decree and the Appellate Court may reverse or modify that decree in favour of all the defendants. Protap Chunder Dutt v Koorbanissa Bibee 14 W R. 130 referred to. PERAN MAL v KRANT SINGH I L R. 20 All 8

31 ————— Decree proceeding upon ground common to several defendants—Decree upset is appeal but restored on appeal by one only of the defendants—Execution for costs by other defendants—Decree to be executed when there has been an appeal—A suit brought against several defendants was dismissed with costs. The plaintiffs appealed and the case was remanded to the Court of first instance under s 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure. One of the defendants appealed against the order of remand to the High Court which set aside the order of remand and restored the decree of the first Court. Held that the decree of the first Court being restored in its entirety the defendants who had not appealed were entitled to take out execution of that decree for the costs awarded to them by it notwithstanding that they were not parties to the decree of the High Court. Muhammad Sulaiman Khan v Muhammad Yar Khan I L R. 11 All 267 distinguished. Sohrat Singh v Bridgman I L R. 4 All 376 referred to. MUZ CHAND v RAM RAYAN [I L R. 20 All 483]

An appeal was preferred by one of the defendants who claimed to be the owner of the premises comprised in the kanoon and another who had a kanoon from him. The first mentioned appellant withdrew from the appeal which however was prosecuted by the other and the Appellate Court reversed the decree. 1. — Hearing of appeal ex parte—The plaintiff sued to recover possession of certain immovable property sold to him by the first defendant a Hindu widow. The second defendant answered that his father and the first defendant's husband were undivided brothers and that as a childless widow she had no right to sell the property. Both the lower Courts upheld the sale as absolute on the ground that she was competent to make it as widow of a separate Hindu. The District Judge heard the appeal ex parte under s. 551 of the Civil Procedure Code. The High Court on second appeal held that the decrees of the lower Courts were unsustainable as they did not contain the limitation pointed out above and remanded the case for the trial of the issue whether there were any such special circumstances as would justify the absolute sale by the first defendant to the plaintiff. CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE ACT XIV OF 1882 (ACT X OF 1877)—continued

Patent for the High Court of the N W Provinces has been superseded in those cases only to which s 575 of the Civil Procedure Code properly and without straining language applies. There are many cases to which s 575 even with the aid of s 617 does not apply and to these a 27 of the Letters Patent is still applicable. One of the cases to which s 575 of the Code does not apply is where a preliminary objection being taken to the hearing of a first appeal before the High Court on the ground that the appeal is time barred the Judges of the Division Bench differ in opinion as to whether the appellant has shown sufficient cause within the meaning of s 6 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) for not presenting the appeal within the prescribed period. The decision of such a preliminary objection is not a hearing of the appeal but precedes the hearing or determines that there is no appeal which the Court can hear or decide. Where such a preliminary objection is allowed it cannot be said that the Court which by reason of the Limitation Act has no jurisdiction to hear the appeal should nevertheless affirm the decree of the Court below. In the case of such a preliminary objection and such a difference of opinion (the Bench being equally divided) the opinion of the senior Judge should under s 27 of the Letters Patent prevail Appay, Bhurav v Chiral Khubchand I L R 8 Bom 204 and Girdharji, Naksaray Tuklat v Porushottam Gassami I L R 10 Cal 814 distinguished HUSEINI BEGAM v COLLECTOR OF MUZUFFARABAD

7 ————— Composition of Bench to hear appeal referred to a third Judge under s 575 of the Civil Procedure Code—Judges differing in opinion—Quare—Whether where there is a difference of opinion between the two Judges of a Division Bench who have delivered judgment on the matter of the appeal the reference to a third Judge under s 575 of the Civil Procedure Code should be heard by the third Judge sitting separately or by a Bench composed of the third Judge and the two Judges who first heard the appeal and differed in opinion Rohilkhand and Kumaon Bank v Row I L R 6 All 466 referred to Per WILKIN J—The language of s 575 does not imply that the appeal must necessarily be heard again at the reference by the two Judges who first heard it and differed. SUBBAYYA v KRISHNA

8 ————— Appeal referred on as to a difference of opinion on a point of law—Where owing to the difference of opinion between two Judges an appeal was referred to the Chief Justice under Civil Procedure Code s. 575 and was heard by him sitting with the two other Judges—It is only the whole appeal was open for argument and not only this point of law on which the Judges had differed in opinion SESHADRI AYYANGAR v NATARAJA AYYAR [I L R, 21 Mad, 179]

9 ————— *Decisions when appeal heard by two or more Judges—Letters Patent of 1860 cl. 15 sub 2 of Act XIV of 1882 does not take away the right of appeal which is given by cl. 15 of the Letters Patent. When the judgment of a lower Court has been confirmed and is 545 of the Code of Civil Procedure by reason of one of the Judges of the Appeal Court agreeing upon the facts with the Court below an appeal will lie against such judgment notwithstanding the terms of s 545. *Ap pays Bhierar v Shihlal Akubchand I L R 3 Bom 204 approved. In 1885 he attached the mortgaged property in execution of the decree whereupon the defendant intervened and applied to have the attachment removed on the ground that prior to the attachment she had purchased the land under a registered deed of sale dated the 23rd June 1888. Her application was rejected on the 24th September 1888. Subsequently the judgment debtors applied and obtained the Court's permission to sell the land by private contract and on the 1st November 1888 the plaintiff purchased it and withdrew his application for execution on the 20th November 1888. In 1889 the plaintiff brought this suit against the defendant to obtain the removal of certain portions of a culvert erected by her on the land. The defendant pleaded that she was the owner of the property having purchased it on the 23rd June 1888. The Subordinate Judge passed a decree for the plaintiff on the ground that though the plaintiff's sale deed was not entitled to preference over the defendant's still as she had taken no steps to establish her right to the property in a regular suit after application for the removal of the plaintiff's attachment had been rejected effect could not be given to her purchase. On appeal by the defendant the decree was reversed and the plaintiff preferred a second appeal. Held confirming the appellate decree that when the plaintiff withdrew his attachment on the 20th November 1888 the parties were restored to the status quo ante. The object of the claim which was preferred by the defendant was as contemplated by s 28 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1852) to obtain the removal of the attachment and when that attachment was removed by the judgment creditor's own act there was no longer an attachment or any proceeding in execution of which the order could operate to the prejudice of the claimant and therefore there was no necessity for her to bring a suit to set aside the order. The defendant's title to the property having been acquired on the 23rd June 1888 was superior to the plaintiff's which

Suit to set aside order removing attachment—Suit for declaration of title—Adverse possession—Civil Procedure Code (1852) s 283—The plaintiff obtained a decree against I and an execution attached the property in dispute. The defendants intervened and obtained an order for the removal of the attachment on the 11th August 1888. On the 13th August 1889 the plaintiff instituted this suit for a declaration that the property belonged to his judgment debtor (I) and as such was liable to attachment and sale. The defendants pleaded that they had been in possession of the property for more than twelve years prior to the institution of the suit and that the suit was therefore barred. The Judge rejected the plaintiff's claim. Held reversing the decree that the suit being brought under s 283 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1852) it was a suit to set aside the order of 11th August 1888 directing the removal of the attachment and should be determined by ascertaining the rights of the parties at the date of that order. As the defendants had not at that date acquired a title to the property by adverse possession for twelve years the plaintiff was entitled to a decree HARIHARAN JESHAJI v NARAN HARSAN

The goods were to be sold on arrival on I's account and the proceeds credited to him as against the advances made by the payment of the hundis. On the arrival of goods at Bombay they were attached by B S & Co who had obtained decrees against P. Held that F H & Co were entitled to the goods. They had made specific advances against the goods. B S & Co as attaching creditors occupied the same position as P himself and had no better claim to the goods than he had and if he had attempted to prevent the goods reaching the hands of F H & Co who at his request had made specific advances against them he would have been restrained by injunction. Held also that at the date of attachment the goods were in possession of P by the railway company on account of or in trust for F H & Co in the sense in which that expression is used in s 280 of the Civil Procedure Code VELJI HIRJI v BHARNAL SHREVAL

*Code (Act 111 of 1882) ss 278-283—Attachment of same property in execution of decrees obtained by different creditors—Claim made in one suit to attached property under s 278—Order made under s 281—Suit by claimant to establish right—The first and second defendants obtained a decree in suit No 1548 of 1897 against E described as the owner of the Wahal Mills and attached d property on the mill premises. Twelve other creditors also brought twelve other similar suits and obtained decrees against other persons who were also described as owners of the Wahal Mills and attached the same property. In suit No 1544 of 1897 I M (the present plaintiff) under s 278 of the Civil Procedure Code claimed the property. His claim was disallowed and he was ordered to bring a suit under s 283. No claim or order was made in the case of the other twelve suits. I M now sued in pursuance of the above order to recover his property and he included as defendants not merely those defendants (Nos 1 and 2) who had been plaintiffs in suit No 1548 of 1897 but also those who had been plaintiffs in the twelve other suits, and who had attached the property in execution of their decrees. It was objected that no suit would lie against the latter as in their suits no claim had been made to the goods which they had attached, and no order made under s 281. Civil Procedure Code. Held that the suit lay against the defendant (other than Nos 1 and 2) although no claim had been made or order passed under s 281 of the Civil Procedure Code. The summary remedy given by s 2/8 of the Civil Procedure Code is alternative to the remedy by way of suit. The object of s 278 is not to let a claimant of* *Code (1882) ss 279-280-281—Attachment—Striking off—Execution proceedings—Question of nature of possession in claim suit—B instituted a suit in the Subordinate Judge's Court, Cuttack on the 2/11 of November 1887 against R for possession of the Dakhm Paresb Muth at Puri with the properties appertaining thereto and obtained a decree on the 29th April 1889. Execution having been applied for by B it was stayed pending the appeal to the High Court upon R giving security. The decree of the Subordinate Judge's Court was set aside by the High Court but restored by the Privy Council and B was put in possession of the Muth with its properties in execution of the last mentioned decree between the 23rd of April and the 3rd of June 1890. Subsequent to the institution of the above suit A instituted a suit for recovery of a certain sum of money against R and obtained a decree and in execution thereof caused the attachment of the immovable properties now in dispute on the 18th September 1890 and the application was dismissed for default and subsequently after the institution and dismissal of various proceedings in execution an order for sale of the properties attached on the 18th of September 1890 was applied for and obtained by A on the 15th of April 1890. B then put in his claim on the 23rd of May 1890 and it was disallowed on the 9th of September following. B moved the High Court under s 15 of the Charter Act (24 & 25 Vict c 104) and s 622 Civil Procedure Code. Held that the striking off an execution proceeding of the file is an act which may a limit of different interpretations according to the circumstances under which it is done and no general rule can be laid down which would govern all cases of that kind but having regard to the circumstances of the present case that the Court below had no opportunity of considering the circumstances under which the several execution proceedings were dismissed it could not be held that there was no attachment and that the order of the Court below was bad in law. Held further that the lower Court was wrong in holding that the decree obtained by B in the Subordinate Judge's Court did not show that he had an interest in the attached property merely because it was not final but had been appealed against. There could be some interest in the property under s 280 and 281 the words some interest must be taken to imply such interest as would make the possession of the judgment debtor possession in his own account but on account of or in trust for the claimant. Held also that it cannot be said that the properties in dispute which were attached by the plaintiff in the judgment debtor at the date of the attachment were in his possession not as his own property but on account of the claimant. Although the claimant obtained a decree against R and execution of such decree was stayed upon his security in the execution of the decree against R.*

CLAIM TO ATTACHED PROPERTY*—concluded—* to attached property what the Code of Civil Procedure provides is a summary investigation into the question of possession and the question of title is required to be gone into only so far as it may be necessary to determine whether the person in possession holds such possession as agent of or as trustee for another. Having regard to the facts that K the creditor brought her suit after the institution of the suit by B the claimant and also that the money covered by K's decree was borrowed by B for the purpose of paying Government revenue due on account of the properties of the matter the questions that arise are whether the doctrine of lis pendens applies and whether the decree-holder can succeed upon the principle that a debt contracted for legal necessity by a mortgagor de facto is recoverable from the mortgaged property in the hands of the mortgagor de jure? These questions do not come within the scope of an investigation under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure relating to claims to attached property. *BHAGWAN LAMANI DAS v. in execution—A decree was transferred to the Collector for execution The Mamlatdar under the orders of the Collector put up for sale certain immovable property belonging to the judgment-debtors The sale was confirmed by the Mamlatdar with the sanction of the Collector Some time afterwards the auction purchaser applied to the Collector for a certificate of sale but the Collector refused the certificate and set aside the sale on the ground that the purchaser was a relative of the decree-holder and had really purchased the property on his behalf without the permission of the Court Against this proceeding of the Collector the purchaser made an application first to the Subordinate Judge who had transferred the decree to the Collector for execution and then to the District Court. But both Courts declined to entertain his application on the ground of want of jurisdiction. Held on an application to the High Court that the subordinate Judge had jurisdiction to deal with the application and to revise the Collector's proceedings in execution. Held also that the Collector has not through his subordinate put up for sale the judgment-debtor's property and confirmed the sale had in that way completely executed the decree so far as he could and was so far functus officio. His duty was to make a return to the Court of what he had done. After confirmation of the sale he could not set it aside. Per WEST J.—The Collector like the Nazir in India is a ministerial officer when he executes a decree. He like the Nazir must carry out the decree of a Civil Court in general subjection to the judicial direction of the Court on whose authority the coercive power exercised by him rests and which alone can deal judicially with the questions that arise in execution. His proceedings and orders are subject accordingly to revision and correction on the application of a party aggrieved whenever he misconceives the decree or acts illegally in giving effect to it. He is limited strictly to the precise line of activity laid down for him in the Code and the order is under it and in cases of error or doubt it is the Court that must determine whether he as its ministerial officer has or has not transgressed his powers. Per BIRWOOD J.—A sale made by a Collector under Ch. XIX of the Civil Procedure Code is subject to confirmation by the Civil Court under s. 312. As soon as the Collector has exercised or performed the power or duties conferred or imposed upon him by s. 321 to 325 of the Code he is functus officio. If he has sold the property or resold it under the power given by cl. (c) of s. 325 he has completed the execution of the decree so far as he can legally complete it and it is then his duty to retransmit the decree to the Court under rules prescribed in that behalf by Government under the second paragraph of s. 320. Where the property has been sold or resold the sale or resale cannot be set aside by the Collector. Any application for setting it aside must be made to the Civil Court under s. 311 and dealt with by it under s. 312 and if no application is made to the Court the sale must be confirmed by it under that section. LALU TRIKAM v BHAVLA MITHIA I L R 11 Bom 478

The Subordinate Judge of Vengurla granted the application and set aside the partition ordered by the Collector. Against this order B who was plaintiff in one of the suits appealed to the District Court and in the appeal he made B alone the respondent. The District Court reversed the order of the Subordinate Judge and upheld the order of the Collector. Thereupon B preferred a second appeal to the High Court against the decision of the District Court. To this appeal neither B nor his brother the present appellant were made parties. The High Court having confirmed the decision of the District Court proceedings were taken to carry out the partition according to the Collector's original scheme. The appellant objected on the ground that the Collector's scheme had been set aside by the Subordinate Judge and that he (the appellant) had not been a party to the proceedings in either of the Appellate Courts. He contended that he was therefore not bound by the decisions of the Appellate Courts and that the order of the Subordinate Judge setting aside the partition ordered by the Collector was still in force so far as he was concerned. He therefore applied that the property should be divided in accordance with that order. His application was rejected by the Court of first instance as time barred inasmuch as more than a year had elapsed since the date of the order of the Subordinate Judge and during that time the appellant had taken no steps to enforce the order. On appeal the Acting District Judge confirmed the order of the lower Court holding that the order of* the Subordinate Judge was no longer in force having been set aside by the High Court. On second appeal to the High Court—Held that the appellant could not succeed in the present appeal the object of which was to revive the order of the Subordinate Judge. That order was one which the Subordinate Judge had no power to make. It involved taking the execution of the decree for partition out of the Collector's hands into his own in direct contradiction of the law. In case of partition of lands s 265 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1852) and s 113 of the Bombay Revenue Code (Bombay Act V of 1879) place the execution of the decree entirely in the Collector's hands. This does not deprive the Court of judicial control of its decree as for instance if it should appear to have been obtained by fraud or surprise but in the present case nothing of that kind was relied on. Nor was it asserted that the Collector had acted in bad faith or contravened the command of the Court or transgressed the law. What was alleged was that he had made an objectionable partition. This was not a ground on which the Subordinate Judge could interfere. LEY GOPAL SAVANT v. VASUDEV VITHAL SAVANT L. L. R. 12 Bom 371

In the meantime a revision survey had been introduced into the village under which the designation of some of the lands directed to be partitioned was changed from khotsi to dhara lands. The Collector proposed to partition them as described by the survey but the plaintiffs having declined the proposal he refused to partition the lands and returned unexecuted the decree to the Court. On reference to the High Court—Held that the Collector had acted ultra vires. The plaintiffs were entitled to have the lands partitioned quite independent of the result of the new survey as regards the character of the lands. The proposal of the Collector was virtually to contravene the command of the Court which as a purely ministerial officer it was not in his power to do either directly or indirectly. GANOJI UTEKAR v. 30 ——— Deputy Collector whether a Court under Land Acquisition Act —

Judicial Officer — Revenue Court — Prosecution for false evidence — Criminal Procedure Code 1898 s 476 — Penal Code s 193 — The expression, the Court in the Land Acquisition Act does not include a Collector nor is there any authority given to the Collector to administer an oath or to require a verification. It is a false statement made under a verification that constitutes an offence under s 193 of the Penal Code not a verification oath or solemn affirmation. The Deputy Collector acting under the Land Acquisition Act is not a judicial officer he cannot properly be regarded as a Revenue Court within the terms of s 476 of the Code of Criminal Procedure his proceedings under the former Act are not regulated by the Code of Civil Procedure nor is he competent in rejecting a petition put in before him to be verified in accordance with that Code so as to make any false statement punishable as perjury. The Deputy Collector is not in a position to pass any final order in the matter of value of the land or the right to claim the price fixed a party dissatisfied can claim a reference to the Civil Court whose duty it is to settle the matter in dispute judicially therefore to subject parties who claimed the right to such a reference to a criminal prosecution when the matters on which the Deputy Collector had formed an opinion as a Revenue Officer under the Land Acquisition Act must be submitted to the determination of a Court is obviously premature and improper and is almost certain to operate very prejudicially towards them in the trial before the Civil Court of the same matter DAS RUKH & QUEEN EMPRESS

It is to be taxed on the same scale and on the same principle as would be adopted in England, and if the Taxing Master finds any difficulty he must refer to England for information. Where an item is objected to in taxation the Taxing Master should reconsider and review his taxation and in doing so he should throw the onus of proof as to the necessity of the item upon such party as having regard to its particular nature he considers ought to bear it. As to the production of vouchers in case of commissions to England no rule can be laid down. Upon objections being brought in it is in the discretion of the Taxing Master either on his own motion or on the application of the party objecting to require vouchers for or further proof of all or any of the items objected to and, failing the production of the vouchers or proof which he may require to disallow the item. Quare—Whether in taxation as between party and party the costs of obtaining a transcript of the evidence given and of perusing it ought to be allowed. Payments made to witnesses are discretionary allowances and the Court is averse to revise such allowances. The Court in appointing a commissioner to take evidence in England expects that the fees of such commissioner will not exceed those which the Supreme Court in England would allow to a special examiner or commissioner acting in England under its orders.  —Where a Government servant who had executed his recognizance to appear and give evidence for the prosecution at a criminal trial to take place in the High Court of Bombay was subsequently ordered to a distant station on the public service and could not, with due regard to the public interest return to Bombay in time for the trial—Held on the application of Government that his evidence might be taken by commission before his departure from Bombay under the provisions of a 76 of the High Courts Criminal Procedure Act (X of 1872)
EXPRESS v. BAL GANGADHAR TILAK I L R. 8 Bom. 255

29 Ground for refusing commission—Prejudicing prisoner—High Courts Criminal Procedure Act (X of 1872) s 76—The High Court refused to issue a commission in a criminal case on the ground that such a course would be unsatisfactory and dangerous to the interests of the prisoner merely a witness materially altered her position as regards the question whether she ought not to be exempted from personal appearance in Court and that under the circumstances she ought not to be examined by commission but ought to attend personally to be examined in Court. Direction to the Magistrate to make such arrangements for the examination of the complainant in Court as should secure her privacy consistent with the recording of her evidence according to law in the presence of the accused. Witnesses in criminal cases should not be examined by commission except in extreme cases of delay expense or inconvenience. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF FARIH UY VISSA I. L. R., 5 All. 92

31. ———— Criminal Procedure Code 1882 s 503—Examination by commission—Personal appearance in Court—A Hindu lady having been summoned as a witness on behalf of an accused applied under s 503 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to be examined by commission on the ground (inter alia) that she was a parda nashin and that her enforced appearance in a Criminal Court would entail a forfeiture of her dignity and position in Hindu society. Held that such application was properly made under the section and that under the circumstances of the case the order prayed for could be made. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF DIN TARINI DEBI I. L. R. 15 Calc 776

32. ———— *Examination of parda nashin lady—Code of Criminal Procedure (1882) s 6 7 503 504 505 506 and 507—Presidency Magistrate Power of—It is doubtful if a Presidency Magistrate in the Town of Calcutta has power to issue a commission under s 503 to 507 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to examine a witness residing within his own jurisdiction but there is nothing in the Code to prevent a Presidency Magistrate examining a witness within his jurisdiction at some place other than the Court house. Where a Presidency Magistrate refused on the ground of want of jurisdiction to grant a commission for the examination of a parda nashin lady but offered to take her evidence in his Court when cleared for the purpose or in his private room and she applied to the High Court for a commission being granted or for such other order as they might deem proper the High Court on revision directed that if the lady would take a house or suite of rooms not far from the Magistrate's Court and pay all the costs which the Magistrate deemed reasonable and proper he should not enforce her attendance in Court but examine her in the place so appointed in the presence of the parties concerned and in the manner in which parda-nashin ladies are ordinarily examined. HEM GOUMAREE DASSEE v QUEEN EMRESS

33. ———— Grounds for granting commission—Inconvenience—Expense—At the trial of a person for an offence under s 411 Penal Code the Court of Session under s 33 of the Evidence Act used against the accused the evidence of the owner of the property in respect of which the accused was charged and of his wife taken by commission during the enquiry and the evidence of the servant of those persons taken at the enquiry and also the evidence of the owner of the property taken during the trial under a commission issued by the Sessions Judge under s 503 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The ground is upon which the Sessions Judge admitted the evidence taken during the enquiry was that the attendance of the witnesses could not be procured without an expense of Rs. 100 an amount which he considered unreasonable that the witnesses would be inconvenienced and that their evidence did not concern the accused personally having reference only to the identification of the property in respect of which the accused was charged. Held that the Sessions Judge had improperly admitted such evidence. Inconvenience to witnesses is no ground allowed under s 33 of the Evidence Act and the question of identification was a most material one and the evidence of the witnesses in question was of the utmost moment the whole case resting on it and as regards the ground of expense it was impossible to consider the amount unreasonable considering that the entire case rested on the evidence of those witnesses and that the accused had not even examined those whose evidence had been taken by commission nor looking at his position could he arrange for their cross examination. Held that on these grounds the Sessions Judge was not justified in issuing a commission under s 503 of the Criminal Procedure Code. QUEEN EMRESS v DUBEY I. L. R. 6 All. 224

34. ———— *Application by prisoner for commission to place out of the jurisdiction—Previously to the trial at the Sessions the prisoner had applied to the Court for commissions to Pondicherry and Mauritius to take evidence on his behalf. The application was refused on the ground that the High Court had no authority to issue a commission in such a case but the learned Judge (WZAR J.) reserved the question for the full Court. Held that the High Court had no power to issue a commission out of the jurisdiction in a criminal case on an application by the accused. EMRESS v MOORGA CHETTY

35. ———— Evidence taken on commission—Criminal Procedure Code 1882 s 503—507—Evidence Act 1872 s 33—Practice—Evidence taken under commission issuing from the Court of the Chief Presidency Magistrate during the course of an enquiry before him cannot be used in evidence at the trial before the High Court under s 507 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Held further that on the facts before the High Court it was also inadmissible under s 33 of the Evidence Act. QUEEN EMRESS v JACOB I. L. R. 19 Calc. 113

Code (Act X of 1882) may be admitted under s 33 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) if the requirements of the proviso to that section have been complied with. The words opportunity to cross-examine in the proviso to s 33 do not imply that the actual presence of the cross-examining party or his agent before the tribunal taking the evidence is necessary. To make evidence admissible against an accused person under s 33 of the Evidence Act the fact that he had full opportunity of cross examination if not admitted must be proved. Quare—Whether the opportunity to administer cross interrogatories under a commission is an opportunity to cross examine within the meaning of the proviso to s 33 of the Evidence Act so as to render the evidence taken on interrogatories admissible. QUEEN EMPRESS v RAM CHANDRA GOVIND HERSHE

No order was passed by the Registrar upon this application until 6th May and owing to delay for which the applicants were not responsible registration was not effected and the certificate was not issued until the 3rd July when a certificate was given purporting to be granted in pursuance of Act X of 1866. Meanwhile on the 1st May 1882 the Indian Companies Act (VI of 1882) repealing Act X of 1866 came into force s. 28 of which provided that every share in any company should be deemed to have been taken and held subject to payment of the whole amount thereof in cash unless the same had been otherwise determined by a contract in writing filed with the Registrar. No such provision existed in Act X of 1866. The shareholders of the company paid nothing upon their shares in cash but had agreed (not in writing filed with the Registrar) that in consideration of certain property conveyed by them to the company at the time of its formation fully paid up shares were to be allotted to them. Subsequently the company having gone into liquidation the official liquidator sought to make the shareholders contributories to the assets of the company as the holders of shares upon which nothing had been paid with reference to s. 28 of the Indian Companies Act (VI of 1882). Held that the proceedings for obtaining registration of the company and a grant of a certificate of such registration commenced within the meaning of s. 6 of the General Clauses Act when the memorandum and articles of association were received in the Registrar's office in April 1882 while Act X of 1866 was in force that therefore the repeal of that Act by Act VI of 1882 did not affect those proceedings that consequently the company must be taken to have been incorporated under the former Act and that the provisions of s. 28 of Act VI of 1882 not being applicable the shareholders were not liable to be placed on the list of contributories as not having paid the full amount of their shares. IN THE MATTER OF WEST HOPETOWN TEA COMPANY formed by a number of persons over 20 in number the object being according to the prospectus and rules to provide for the widows children and other relatives of the subscribers. The management was vested in a board of directors elected by the subscribers from amongst their own number. Subscriptions at fixed rates according to tables were paid by the subscribers to secure the provision of pensions for their widows children and relatives. The moneys subscribed were invested in Government 4 per cent securities and in the course of management a large reserve fund was accumulated and so invested the interest annually payable in respect of which amounted in the year 1883 to upwards of Rs 6000 but there was nothing to show that such reserve was larger than sound principles of management required. The rules provided for abatements of subscriptions according to a graduated scale which might be granted or withheld from year to year by the directors according to their opinion as to the condition of the fund. A subscriber to the fund was under no obligation to continue his subscription but might stop it at pleasure subject in certain contingencies to forfeiture of the benefit of past payments. Fines were also provided for unpunctuality in payments of subscriptions. It was contended that the subscribers formed an association which required registration under s. 4 of the Indian Companies Act inasmuch as they carried on business having for its object the acquisition of gain by the association or the individual members thereof as the subscribers must be taken to contemplate the ordinary consequences of their acts and the forfeitures fines and large and increasing reserve fund constituted gain. Semle—that these did not constitute gain. But held that whether they did or not no business was carried on having for its object the acquisition of gain by the association or the individual members thereof. The subscribers to the General Family Pension Fund are not a company association or partnership formed for the purpose of carrying on business that has for its object the acquisition of gain by the company association or partnership or by the individual members thereof within the meaning of s. 4 of the Indian Companies Act. Where the substantial purpose of an association is not to carry on a business for gain, the fact that gain may accrue incidentally or may arise from merely subsidiary provisions does not make registration necessary. KRAAL v WHYTE mensum for seven years from the date of admission and that at the end of the seven years Rs200 should be paid in full discharge of each share. It was further provided that subscribers should be entitled to borrow money from the said fund at interest that a reserve fund be formed and distributed once every five years to the subscribers and that surplus collections be distributed among the subscribers annually. In 1868 defendants father borrowed money on mortgage from the fund in accordance with the rules and the amount was admittedly due at the time of suit. The fund was wound up under an order of the High Court dated 15th September 1877 during the lifetime of defendants father who however took no active part in those proceedings. It further appeared that on the execution of the mortgage the defendants father (the mortgagor) took a lease from the mortgagees of the houses mortgaged and retained possession of them as tenant. Held that the association had for its object the acquisition of gain and that as the association consisted of more than twenty members and was not registered its formation was forbidden by the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866) s. 4 that the mortgage suit having for its object the carrying out of the illegal purpose of the association was an illegal transaction and that the suit must fail. Held further that the defendants were not estopped from setting up the plea of illegality either by the order of 1877 or by reason of their predecessor in title having attorned to the fund. MADRAS HINDU MUTUAL BENEFIT PERMANENT FUND v. The bonds in question were executed in favour of the stakeholder and the subscribers. The business was not registered. A suit was brought on one of such bonds to recover the amount payable for subscription on account of the period subsequent to its execution. Held that the obligees carried on business which had for its object the acquisition of gain within the meaning of Companies Act 1882 s. 4 and accordingly constituted an illegal association and that the suit was not maintainable.* BANASANI BHAGAVATHAR v. Their names were also entered as such shareholders in the registration of the company under Act Y of 1866. In January 1867 certain contributors (amongst whom appellants were not) and certain creditors applied to the Recorder of Rangoon under c/s 4 and 5 & 101 to have the company wound up and an official liquidator appointed. A liquidator having been appointed he applied to the Court to call upon each of the contributors named in a list which he presented to pay up his contribution. Accordingly the Recorder declared the appellants to be contributors and directed each of them to pay the amount appearing against his name. Held that this was a suit by the official liquidator to have appellants declared contributors and an appeal therefore lay from the Recorder's decision so declaring them. Held that the liability under ss. 6 11 18 22 36 and 37 of a registered shareholder as member of a company to contribute is a prima facie liability only it being open to him to show that although his name was on the register yet he did not agree to become a member; and that as appellants were not cognizant of (much less did they assent to) the registration of their names as shareholders, whilst they refused to receive any shares or pay up any calls or deposits the sole step taken by them of joining others in putting forth the prospectus and affixing their names thereon to a certain number of shares could not be said to be an agreement to become members of the company and therefore they were not contributors. COTTON & PROW SAW MILLS COMPANY 9 W R 539

His withdrawal however was not accepted. Subsequently to the receipt of the said notice the memorandum and articles of association so signed by the defendant and others were presented for registration; but registration was refused on the ground that the said documents were not printed. A printed copy of each was then procured and registered. The registered copies differed in respect of the signatures subscribed thereto from the copies signed by the defendant. The defendant's name was put upon the register of the company as the holder of 101 shares, but without the defendant's assent or knowledge and two calls were made upon him in respect of the said shares. The defendant denied that he was a member of the said company or liable for calls. Held that the defendant was not a member of the plaintiff company either (i) as a subscriber of the memorandum of association under the earlier part of s. 22 of the Indian Companies Act inasmuch as the memorandum which referred to was the registered memorandum of which the document signed by the defendant was not even a true copy or (ii) by reason of an agreement to take shares under the latter part of that section inasmuch as the agreement there alluded to was an agreement with the company and the agreement (if any) entered into by the defendant was not and could not have been an agreement with the company the company not being at that time in existence. Quare— Whether it is enough to constitute a person a member of a company under

The agreement under which the shares were so allotted was not registered as required by s 28 of Act VI of 1882. A sold three of these shares to D who had no notice that they were not fully paid up. D sold the three shares to G who was the Managing Director of the Company. The Company was wound up by the Court. At the date of the winding up G was holder of the three shares. In settling the list of contributories the Court ordered G's name to be placed on the list in respect of the three shares. Held that G was not liable as a contributory. Though G was a Managing Director of the Company and as such must have known that the shares had been issued as fully paid up shares without complying with s 28 of Act VI of 1882 he was not on that account estopped from taking advantage of the equitable rule which protects a purchaser with notice taking from a purchaser without notice. IN RE OCLANDAS BHAIKAS I L. 25 — Contributory—Increase of capital—Illegal issue of shares—Reduction of capital—Companies Act (VI of 1882) s 13—The Nawab of the Beyla Spinning Weaving and Manufacturing Company Limited was registered under the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866). The original capital of the company consisted of Rs 400,000 divided into 1,600 shares of Rs 250 each. In 1882 the capital of the company was increased by Rs 100,000 divided into 1,600 shares of Rs 62.5. The resolution to increase the capital was not passed in accordance with the articles of association &c with the sanction of a special resolution of the company passed at a general meeting. On the 5th November 1884 a resolution was passed at a general meeting of the company that the shareholders should take up 4.9 shares of the original capital and 1,037 shares of the increased capital which were then in the hands of the company in the proportion of one share to every two shares already held by them. In pursuance of this resolution the appellants took up several shares of the original capital as well as of the new capital. On 19th October 1885 a general meeting of the company was held at which it was resolved that the resolution of the 5th November 1884 and all acts done in connection with it should be set aside that the shares taken by the shareholders in pursuance of that resolution should be taken back by the company and such amounts as had been paid by them on those shares should be credited to their names in the company's books. This was accordingly done and the shares were transferred to the name of the company. In October 1886 the company was wound up by order of the Court. In settling the list of contributories the District Judge of Surat held that the appellants were liable as contributories in respect of all the shares which they had taken up in pursuance of the resolution of 5th November 1884. On appeal from this decision—Held that with respect to the shares of the original capital the resolution of the 19th October 1885 was illegal and invalid. It operated not as an investment by the company of its funds in its own shares but as an extinguishment of the shares and such extinguishment was virtually a reduction of the capital which could not be done without complying with the provisions of s 13 of the Indian Companies Act (VI of 1882). The holders of such shares were therefore properly placed on the list of contributories. Held also that the issue of the shares of the new capital was illegal as the resolution to increase the capital had not been come to in accordance with the articles of association. It was therefore open to the Company to set aside the resolution of 5th November 1884. When it was set aside the persons who held the new shares ceased to be shareholders and could not therefore be held liable as contributories. BHAIKAS v. ISHWARDAS JUGHWANDAS I L. R. 16 Bom. 153

The Official Liquidator need not take out letters of administration to the estate of a deceased shareholder before settling the list of contributories. There is nothing in ss 126 and 144 requiring the Official Liquidator to place on the list all the persons who may as representatives be liable to contribute in discharge of the liability of a deceased shareholder & as contemplated by s 126. Nor can the liability under that section of a person who has been placed on the list as his representative be affected by omission of the Official Liquidator to do so. This suit was brought on 10th September 1889 and the defendant contended that the above two items of claim were barred by limitation. The lower Court notwithstanding the statement in the plaint found as a fact that the allotment of the shares was really made in November 1886. was also agreed that in consideration of the transfer he and his executors or administrators shall be entitled so long as they held the said hundred shares to an extra or preferential dividend. On this agreement the parties acted and the shareholder held the shares till he died in England in 1888 having by will directed that his executors or administrators should hold the hundred shares in trust for his surviving brothers of whom the executor who proved the will was one. Administration with the will annexed was granted in India to the plaintiff in this suit as the attorney of the executor. A note of this was made in the register of the company leaving the hundred shares still in the name of the testator. The company then discontinued to pay the preferential dividend and contended that it was no longer payable inasmuch as the testator's estate had been administered and that the executor no longer held the shares as executor but as trustee for the beneficiaries under the will. Held that the contract was still in operation the executor still holding the shares within its meaning; and that the preferential dividend continued payable to the estate of the testator the company being only concerned with the legal title to the shares and not with any claims if there were any that might be made by beneficiaries under the will against the executor as trustee. BOMBAY BURMA TRADING CORPORATION & SMITH

A shareholder holding 423 shares became insolvent and his shares thereupon vested in the Official Assignee who sold them. The purchaser required the Official Assignee to transfer the shares into the names of two nominees, viz. 200 shares to the name of one nominee and 223 shares to the name of the other. The Official Assignee executed the necessary transfer deeds and sent them to the company with a request that the shares might be transferred accordingly. The proposed nominees were already members of the company and registered holders of shares in it and no objection was taken to them in their personal capacity. The Directors however declined to approve of the transferees and to register the transfer unless the transferees would pledge themselves not to approve a certain change in the mode of remunerating the agents of the company which the Directors desired to effect and which they believed would be very advantageous to the company. The transferees refused to pledge themselves in any way as to their future action and brought this suit to enforce registration of the transfer. Held following Moffatt v Farquhar L R, 7 Ch D, 531 that the Directors were bound to register the transfers. (2) Where it was found that there was a defect in the constitution of the board of directors which was not cured by the Articles of association—Held that the Court was not bound to dismiss the application under s 53 on the ground of its being premature there having been no refusal to register by a properly constituted Board but might treat the defence set up as a refusal and deal with the application on the merits. (3) Where it was found that the real objections entertained by the directors to the various transferees were (1) their connection as employees of the Cawnpore Woollen Mills with M (the managing director of the Cawnpore Woollen Mills) and the personal animosity existing between J (the managing director of the Muir Mills) and M and (2) the desire of the directors (of the Muir Mills) that M should not add to his voting power at the meetings of the company and (3) that therefore the objections were not personal to the applicants themselves. Held that where the articles of association give a discretionary power to the directors to refuse to register a transfer and it appears that the directors have bona fide considered the matter the Courts will not compel them to disclose their reasons but if they do disclose their reasons or evidence is produced as to their reasons the Courts will consider whether those reasons proceeded on a right or wrong principle. A shareholder holding 433 shares became insolvent and his shares thereupon vested in the Official Assignee who sold them. The purchaser required the Official Assignee to transfer the shares into the names of two nominees viz 200 shares to the name of one nominee and 223 shares to the name of the other. The Official Assignee executed the necessary transfer deeds and sent them to the company with a request that the shares might be transferred accordingly. The proposed nominees were already members of the company and registered holders of shares in it and no objection was taken to them in their personal capacity. The Directors however declined to approve of the transferees and to register the transfer unless the transferees would pledge themselves not to approve a certain change in the mode of remunerating the agents of the company which the Directors desired to effect and which they believed would be very advantageous to the company. The transferees refused to pledge themselves in any way as to their future action and brought this suit to enforce registration of the transfer. Held following Moffatt v Farquhar L R 7 CA D 591 that the Directors were bound to register the transfers. The plaintiffs alleged that the only object of passing the said resolution was to facilitate the design of G of ousting the plaintiffs from their agency and getting the management of the company for himself that Messrs H C and L had been for a long time the solicitors of G and had been advising him in his designs upon the company and upon the plaintiffs and they contended that the resolution was a breach of the contract between the company and the plaintiffs and a violation of the articles of association of the company. The plaintiffs sued G and two other directors of the company and the company itself and prayed for an injunction against the defendants to restrain them from committing any breach of the agreement of 26th August 1874 and in particular from carrying into effect the resolution appointing Messrs H C and L as solicitors for the company and to restrain them from doing anything inconsistent with the memorandum and articles of association. The defendants contended that the contract of the 26th August 1874 had been determined by the death of Merwanji Framji and that the powers conferred on the agents by cl 93 of the articles were subject to the general powers of management vested in the directors by the articles and that the case was not one in which an injunction could be granted. Held that having regard to the memorandum and articles of association the contract was that the firm of M F & Co for the time being should be the agents of the company for twenty five years and that the right to sue on the contract by its nature survived to the plaintiffs after the death of Merwanji Framji. Held also that there being no provision either in the articles of association or the agreement of 26th August 1874 that the power thereby conferred on the agents should be subject to the control or assent of the directors there was no right in the directors to interfere with the agents in the exercise of their powers otherwise than as representing the company in virtue of their general powers of management. Nvs SERWANJEE & GORDON I.L.R. 6 Bom. 368

The scheme was made public and shares were applied for in excess of the intended capital. On the 1st May 1863 the memorandum of association was registered signed, inter alia by A and M. On the same day the prospectus was issued which stated inter alia that the company have purchased from the former proprietors for the sum of Rs 400,000 the entire stock of hotel and shop together with the outstandings on the 30th April 1863 the latter amounting to about Rs 200,000. The dividend of 10 per cent per annum for two years is guaranteed to the shareholders. The prospectus was signed by A and M and another as directors but the last took no active part. On the same day an agreement was signed by B whereby he agreed in consideration of Rs 100,000 paid by A and M as therein mentioned—Rs 100,000 in paid up shares of the company—to transfer to them or Spence's Hotel Company Limited all his right title and interest in Spence's Hotel the good will furniture outstandings etc. The articles of association were dated 7th September 1863. A and M with two others formed the first board of directors. On the 5th December 1863 a deed was executed with the approval of the company's solicitors by B on the one part and A and M on the other which after reciting that as security for the guarantee of the 10 per cent dividend B had deposited with A and M 400 fully paid up shares in the company witnessed that B would pay to A and M such sums as would be necessary to make up and pay half yearly a dividend of 10 per cent per annum and that he constituted A and M his attorneys to sell the 400 shares and out of the proceeds to make good the yearly dividend of 10 per cent and after such payment towards the guaranteed dividend to hold the remaining shares or balance of money in trust for B absolutely. had in fact since formed. In B would pay or secure to them A and M such fitting and proper remuneration for their trouble and risk as might be ultimately arranged and after reciting the first deed of 5th December 1863 witnessed that B covenanted with A and M that notwithstanding the trust contained in the before mentioned indenture whereby the surplus mentioned was declared to belong to B absolutely the same surplus should belong to and be the exclusive property of A and M in equal shares and that if the net profits of the Hotel Company should prove sufficient to pay the whole 10 per cent then the whole of the 400 shares deposited with A and M should be retained by them for their own benefit in equal shares. This deed was undisclosed until the filing of their written statement by A and M in the present suit. There was no actual deposit of the 400 shares by B but A and M respectively took 200 shares in their own names. Rs 10,947 0 6 were paid by A and M to make up the deficit on the guaranteed dividend up to December 1861. Also on the 5th December 1863 B executed another deed in which after reciting that he had guaranteed that the outstanding debts of the Hotel should realize before May 1864 Rs 200,000 at least and that he had deposited with the company 50 fully paid up shares as security for this guarantee he covenanted to pay any deficit and appointed the company his attorneys to realize these shares and out of the proceeds to pay themselves the deficit and subject to this to hold the shares or the proceeds in trust for him. 50 shares were received from B by A under the trusts of this deed. The outstandings fell short of the guaranteed amount by Rs 19,250. In a suit by the company to recover the 400 shares and for an account of the profits of the same—Held in the Court below and on appeal that the suit was rightly brought by the company as plaintiffs. That A and M were the agents of the company to effect the purchase and as such were bound to make for the company the best bargain which they reasonably could, and forbidden to obtain personal profit or benefit out of the matter. A and M as regards the beneficial interest in the 400 shares were trustees thereof for the benefit of the company from the date when that interest arose and A and M were jointly as well as severally responsible for the 400 shares after satisfying the trust of the guarantee. In the lower Court it was decreed that A should make over the 50 shares or their value to the company and account for the interim receipts and profits. A and M to account for the 400 shares at par value at least and for dividends and profits thereon including profits if any made by sale at a premium. A to account similarly for the 50 shares. B to make good his two guarantees after being allowed the benefit of the trust of the 400 shares. 43 ——— Liability of directors for negligence in management—Employment of agent by directors—Acquiescence of shareholders—Liability of estate of deceased director—Banker Who is a— The plaintiffs company went into liquidation early in the year 1879 in consequence of losses sustained by the failure of Nursey Kessowji & Co which firm had been the bankers of the said company. The said firm had stopped payment on the 26th December 1878 having then in its hands the sum of Rs 80 2s 0 11 1 belonging to the company. In this suit the official liquidators of the company sought to recover that sum from the defendants who had been directors of the company and a further sum of Rs 18 670 14 0 as damages sustained by the company through the fraud and gross negligence of the defendants in permitting Nursey Kessowji the agent of the company to deal with certain shares for his own purposes. The first four defendants were the directors of the company the fifth defendant was the assignee of the estate of Nursey Kessowji whose firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co had become insolvent. The plaintiffs company was registered on the 31st July 1878 and by the memorandum and articles of association the said Nursey Kessowji was appointed secretary treasurer and agent of the company for a period of twenty five years upon the terms and conditions contained in an agreement annexed to the articles of association whereby it was (inter alia) provided that Nursey Kessowji should deposit with such banker or bankers as the directors for the time being should appoint all the moneys due from him to the said company and exceeding in amount at any one time the sum of Rs 5000. On the 6th August 1878 the directors of the company appointed the firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co to be the bankers of the company. It was further alleged by the plaintiff that immediately after the registration of the company the directors and Nursey Kessowji began to borrow money upon the credit of the company far in excess of the legitimate wants of the company and to pay over the money so borrowed to the firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co to be used by that firm in speculative business that the said loans were obtained by the directors not bond fide for the purposes of the company but for the purposes of supplying funds to the firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co to enable it to carry on its business. At the end of the year 1878 the sum paid over by the directors to the firm of Nursey Kessowji had by reason of such borrowing amounted to the sum of Rs 80 2 0. The plaintiffs alleged that the said loans were wholly unnecessary; and they charged the directors with gross negligence in raising the said loans or permitting them to be raised and in permitting the moneys so borrowed to remain in the hands of the firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co to be applied by that firm to its own purposes. As to the Rs 48 670 14 0 the plaintiffs alleged that certain unallotted shares of the total value of Rs 93 750 had been left in the hands of the directors to be disposed of the proceeds of which were to be applied in making certain payments due by the company that instead of applying these shares to such purposes the directors had filled up the said shares in the name of Nursey Kessowji and authorized him to mortgage the same in order to raise funds that the said Nursey Kessowji had accordingly dealt with the said shares and had applied the proceeds thereof to his own purposes. The plaintiffs charged the directors with fraud and gross negligence as to these shares and claimed to recover Rs 48 670 14 0 in respect thereof from the defendants. The defendants alleged that they had acted bond fide in all matters connected with the company that they had always believed the firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co to be in a solvent condition and had no reason to mistrust its management of the affairs of the company. One of the defendants (No 3) died after the institution of the suit and his sons were made parties. His representatives and Kessowji Naik (defendant No. 1) also claimed to set off against the plaintiffs claim certain payments made by them as guarantors for the company. Held (1) that one of the directors knew as a fact that the agent was not in a solvent condition; and that the other directors in the circumstances of the case ought to have ascertained his financial condition (2) Directors are responsible for the management of their company where by the articles of association the business is to be conducted by the board with the assistance of an agent. They cannot direct themselves of their responsibility by delegating the whole management to the agent and abstaining from all enquiry. If he proves unfaithful and in such circumstances the liability is thus just as much as if they themselves had been unfaithful (3) That the directors had not used fair and reasonable diligence in the management of the company's affairs and were liable to refund the money entrusted by them to the agent Nursey Kessowji without proper knowledge as to whether it was needed and without any subsequent investigation of its character with respect to its disposal. Such conduct amount due to the company. All the directors were equally responsible as all attended the directors' meetings and all gave the same blind sanction to every act and proposal of the agent. Held also that the estate of the deceased director was liable on the ground that the misfeasance of a director is a breach of trust and not a mere personal default. A separate debt cannot be set off against a joint and several debt and directors cannot set off money due from the company to them against sums which they may be ordered to refund to the liquidators. NEW FLEMING SPINNING AND WEAVING COMPANY v. 44. — Power of directors to deal with profits either by declaring a dividend or by appropriating to reserve fund.—Power of shareholders to interfere with declaration of dividend—The articles of association of the B Co provided (a) that the directors might with the sanction of the company in general meeting declare a dividend (b) that the directors might before recommending any dividend set aside out of the profits of the company such sums as they thought proper as a reserve fund to meet contingencies or for equalizing dividends etc. The directors of the company added to the existing reserve fund a certain portion of the profits of the company for the year 1885 and thereby diminished the amount of dividend which they could otherwise have declared. Some of the shareholders disapproved of the course taken by the directors and contended (1) that the shareholders of the company had a right by resolution to withdraw from the reserve fund a sum sufficient to enable the directors to declare a suitable dividend (2) that they had the right to direct the directors to declare a dividend greater or less than that recommended by the directors out of the amount standing to profit and loss including the amount so withdrawn. Held that under the articles of association the contention of the shareholders could not be sustained. The reserve fund consisted of profits and by the articles the disposal of profits was expressly entrusted to the directors. To allow the shareholders to deal with it would be a direct contravention of the articles which entrusted to the management of the directors all the business of the company. Nor could the shareholders decide the question as to the amount of dividend. By the articles they agreed that the directors should declare the dividend and only reserved to themselves the power to vote a dividend to which they objected. The remedy of the shareholders if they were dissatisfied with the directors was to remove them from office or to alter the articles of association. BOMBAY BURMA TRADING CORPORATION v. 45. — Sale and repurchase of shares for future delivery.—Liability of company for acts of directors—In January 1886 the plaintiffs purchased from the defendants 2,000 shares in the defendants' company at 15 per cent premium for which they paid in cash Rs. 20,000 and the defendants simultaneously agreed to repurchase for future delivery and payment at a fixed time in July

the same 2,000 shares at 20 per cent premium. The contracts for the repurchase were signed by three directors of the defendants' company and on each was a memorandum initialed by two of them referring to a list of the Share Receipts delivered with the words we are duly to examine and receive the same at the fixed time. One hundred and ninety letters of allotment in the names of several persons and for various numbers of shares endorsed by the original allottees and initialed by one of the three directors were together with receipts for the first call handed over to the persons who acted for the plaintiffs by the three directors of the defendants' company who made the contracts. In April the defendants' company made a fresh call payable on the 4th May. A list of the names and addresses of the original allottees of what were called shares in the market (i.e. other than those purchased by the company itself for cash or held by it on mortgage) was made out from the date of settlement and notices of forfeiture for non payment of the call were sent by post. The original holders of the 190 letters of allotment were included in the list but no notice was sent to the plaintiffs. On the 24th of May all shares upon which the second call was not paid were declared to be forfeited for the benefit of the company. The defendants' company as stated in the memorandum of association was established among other objects for the purchase and sale of debentures, stocks, shares of joint stock companies (including the shares of this company) and other securities, the making loans and advances on such securities as the directors of the company might think fit. Held that the contracts for the purchase of the 2,000 shares being within the scope of the authority of the directors the defendants were bound by them. That the defendants were bound to treat the plaintiffs as the holders of those shares and to give them the notice required by the articles of association and that they were not at liberty to give that notice to the original allottees who by the admission of the defendants testified by the acts of their agents in making the contracts had parted with the shares that the shares were consequently not legally forfeited and the defendants having refused to accept them and they being then unable the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the full price as damages. ORIENTAL FINANCIAL ASSOCIATION v. 46. — Purchases of shares by individual directors.—Liability of directors—Absence of sanction of board—J. D. an allottee of 25 shares in a company registered under Act XIX of 1857 signed the memorandum and articles of association and paid the first call on the 23rd September 1863 on which he sold the 25 shares to B. P. the chairman of the company. The purchase by B. P. was made in pursuance of an agreement entered into between B. P. and P. H. another director of the company and two other persons who were members of the firm of B. B. & Co. and then managers of the company which they accordingly jointly purchased and subsequently divided among themselves B P taking for himself two-fifths of the whole including the 25 shares of J S. The fact of the joint purchase was not communicated to the other directors of the company nor was there any evidence to show that their attention had been called to certain entries in the books of the company relating to B P having paid the second call on his two-fifths of the joint purchase. J S got no notice to pay the second call and never applied for or obtained a certificate for the 25 shares but such a certificate was obtained by B P on the 10th of October 1864 certifying that J S was the shareholder. J S had signed a blank form of transfer and a blank form of request to the directors to transfer which were undated and with no particulars but B P never executed the transfer as transferee and the shares never were transferred to his name on the register nor was the sale to him ever brought to the notice of the directors as a board or to any of his partners of any portion of the 2500 shares and the articles of association required the consent in writing of the directors to every transfer. On application by J S that his name should be removed from the list of contributors as framed by the official liquidator and the names of B P's trustees under Act XVIII of 1860 substituted thereon in respect of the 25 shares—Held that J S was not exonerated under the circumstances from the duty of obeying the articles of association and the provision of Act XIX of 1857 that the act of an individual director in his private capacity ought not to bind the board which had never authorized or ratified his conduct and that the official liquidator as representing the body of shareholders rightly insisted upon keeping J S's name on the list of shareholders. IN RE EAST INDIAN TRADING AND BANKING COMPANY JAMNA DAS DATAKAL S CASE 3 Bom. 47 ——— Purchase by company of its own shares—Omission to register transfer—Contributories—A company registered under Act XIX of 1857 and enabled by its memorandum of association to purchase its own shares purchased seven thousand of them which were in scrip share certificates having never been issued in respect of them. The letters of allotment indorsed by the allottees and receipts for the first call were made over at the time of purchase to the company. No transfers however were executed by the allottees nor were the shares registered by the company in their own name but they continued to stand in the names of the allottees. Two thousand of the seven thousand shares had been re-sold by the company, and the remaining five thousand were mentioned in a list kept by the company of shares purchased by them. On application to the allottees to have their names removed from the list of contributories as framed by the official liquidator—Held that the company through its directors having as well by the act of purchase as by their subsequent conduct treated themselves as the owners of the shares could not be permitted to take advantage of their own neglect or that of their officers in not registering the shares in the name of the company and that the name of the company therefore be substituted as holders of the shares. IN RE MERCANTILE CREDIT AND FINANCIAL ASSOCIATION EX PARTE DALVI

48 ——— Purchase of shares in other companies and their own shares—Trustees—shareholders—Parties—A guarantee—The purchase by the directors of a joint stock company, on behalf of the company of shares in other joint stock companies unless expressly authorized by the memorandum of association is ultra vires. A joint stock company even though it be empowered by its memorandum of association to deal in the shares of other companies is not thereby empowered to deal in its own shares and a purchase by the directors of the company of its own shares on behalf of the company is therefore under such circumstances ultra vires. A shareholder in a joint stock company can maintain an action against the directors of such company to compel them to restore to the company funds of the company that have by them been employed in transactions that the directors have no authority to enter into without making the company a party to the suit. Where a shareholder purchased shares in a joint stock company knowing at the time that similar companies were in the habit of dealing in their own shares and those of other companies and believing that the company in question adopted the same practice but made no enquiry to ascertain whether or not such was the case nor made any objections to such dealings of the company until it was discovered they had resulted in loss it was held that he had by his own conduct lost his right to hold the directors personally liable in respect of such dealing, and the result was held to be the same whether the said shareholder was beneficially entitled to his shares or merely a trustee of them for others. JENABOIR RASTAMJI MODI v. 49 ——— Misrepresentation in prospectus—Companies Act 1866 s. 154—Prospectus—Liability of directors for misrepresentation—E G on the faith of statements in the prospectus of a company was induced to apply for fifty shares in the company which were allotted to him and he paid the deposit money thereon. At the time of issuing the prospectus there were no other members of the company besides the directors. Some of the material statements in the prospectus were untrue to the knowledge of the directors. The prospectus which was published on the 23rd June 1866 contained the following statements: Capital fifty lakhs of rupees in 10,000 shares of Rs. 500 each with power to increase Rs. 50 per share to be paid on application and the balance by calls of Rs. 100 each to be made within not less than three months of each other. England but the operations of the company will not be delayed until they can be sent home and taken up. On 14th July 1865 the company advertised that all the Indian shares being subscribed for the share list is now closed and the letters of all intent will be issued at an early date. In truth not half the number of "Indian shares" were at any time subscribed for. On the 22nd November 1865 the directors resolved that a call of £100 per share be made upon the shareholders payable at the National Bank of India on the 15th December proximo. P. G. received notice of the call but did not pay it. On 18th April 1866 the directors assured the secretary to write to shareholders who had not paid their first call in full asking them to do so at once. R. G. who had not signed the articles of association on receipt of notice from the secretary requested to be allowed to withdraw his money forfeiting one fifth or to be allowed to hold five shares instead of fifty. The request was refused by the directors who on 15th July 1866 passed a further resolution that the defaulters among whom R. G. was named have notice sent them that unless the amount of the calls due on their respective shares together with interest thereon at the rate of 12 per cent per annum from the 15th December 1865 he paid into the National Bank of India Calcutta on or before the 7th August 1866 legal proceedings will be adopted against them for the recovery without further notice. R. G. on receiving notice of this resolution wrote through his attorneys informing the directors that he would apply to the High Court to have his name removed from the register of shareholders. The directors thereupon declared the shares to be forfeited. On 20th September 1866 a resolution to wind up the company voluntarily was passed at a general meeting of the shareholders and was afterwards confirmed. In the course of the winding up the liquidator applied to the Court under s. 154 Act X of 1866 to determine whether R. G. was entitled to a refund of the deposit money paid by him on the fifty shares allotted to him in the company or whether he was liable to pay as a contributory the call in respect of his shares made before the shares were forfeited. It was not until the hearing of this application that R. G. became aware of the facts which proved that the directors had published material statements which they knew to be untrue. Held that the issuing of a prospectus is an act comprised within the term management and conduct of the company's business. The statements made in the prospectus were the representations of the company. R. G. was entitled to have his contract to take 50 shares set aside and to be repaid the amount of his deposit money.

B became the managing director of the company upon its formation. Quere—Whether assuming that the representation was made by B that it was material and had been relied on and that it was untrue in fact the company which was not then in existence could be held to be bound by such misrepresentation. In a suit by the plaintiff company to recover money due upon certain shares taken by and allotted to the defendant the defendant in his pleadings set out and relied upon certain misrepresentations said to have been really made by one B as the agent of the plaintiff company. At the trial he also sought to rely upon a misrepresentation in the prospectus of the company. Held that the defendant ought to be pinned down to the misrepresentations alleged in his pleadings and upon the faith of which he says he acted. It is not open to him to go into the question of misrepresentation in the prospectus. That the prospectus although issued by the promoters before the formation of the company was the basis of the contract between the company and the defendant for the allotment of the shares and if the misstatements therein alleged by the defendant were relied upon by him and were material to the contract the defendant would be entitled to rescind the contract and to repudiate the shares in the absence of laches or conduct on his part which would deprive him of that right. In re Metropolitan Coal Consumers' Association Karbery's Case L. R. 1892 Ch. D. 1 followed. When a person makes a positive assertion relying upon the statement of another that a certain third party would become a director he is not warranted in making that assertion within the meaning of s. 18 of the Contract Act. That under the Exception in a 19 of the Contract Act the contract even if caused by misrepresentation would not be voidable if the defendant had the means of discovering the truth with ordinary diligence. The application of that Exception is not restricted to cases where the party is fixed with constructive notice of the true state of affairs.*

52 — Power of directors as such to draw bills of exchange—Companies' Act (X of 1866) s 4—Winding up—Interest on debts subsequently to date of order to wind up—Rules of Bombay High Court of 8th August 1866—Rule No 24—The articles of association of the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company Limited authorized the directors to raise or borrow from time to time in the name or otherwise on behalf of the company such sums of money as they from time to time think expedient either by way of sale or mortgage of the whole or any part of the property of the company or by bonds debentures or promissory notes or in such other manner as they deem best and for the purpose of securing the repayment of any money so borrowed with interests to make and carry into effect any arrangement which they may deem expedient by conveying or assigning any property of the company to trustees or otherwise. Held that though power to borrow money on bills of exchange was not specifically given yet bills of exchange being in many respects analogous to promissory notes and promissory notes having been specifically mentioned in the article the power to raise money by an equally well known and recognized mode—by drawing endorssing or accepting bills of exchange—must be deemed to be included in the general words or in such other manner as they deem best. Spinning and Weaving Company Limited directors. The bill was endorsed by S to the bank of Bombay was duly presented for payment to the drawee and protested for non payment. Subsequently to the date of the drawing of the bill the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company Limited, went into liquidation. The Bank of Bombay claimed as endorsee of the bill to prove against the company as drawers. Held that assuming that companies under the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866) are by s 47 liable on bills of exchange drawn on their behalf or on account of persons acting under their authority the bill in question was not such a bill. Whether or not a note or bill must on the face of it express that it is made accepted or endorsed "by or on behalf or on account of the company yet there must be on the face of it that which shows that it was so made accepted or endorsed and which excludes the inference that it was made accepted or endorsed by or on behalf or on account of any other person. A bill or note may be in a certain sense on behalf of or on account of a company though there is upon its face no reference to the company even in the form of a description of the persons who actually make accept or endorse as being directors or secretary. As between such persons and the company such a bill or note may well be on behalf or on account of the company but it is not therefore so between the company and third parties. So far as third parties are concerned a company under the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866) can be made liable on a bill or note only when such bill or note on the face of it expresses that it was made accepted or endorsed by or on behalf or on account of the company or where that fact appears by necessary inference from what the face of the instrument itself shows. The addition to the signatures of individuals as makers drawers acceptors or endorssers of notes or bills of their description as director or directors secretary treasurer and agent of a certain company is not considered to raise such inference as it does not exclude the supposition that though described as directors, etc they intended to make themselves personally liable to holders of the instrument though as between themselves and the company they may be entitled to be indemnified for anything they may have paid on account of the company in respect of such notes or bills. Dutton v Marsh L R 6 Q B 361 followed. Rule No 24 of the High Court of Judicature at Bombay made by the High Court by a 189 of the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866) is ultra vires so far as it allows interest on debts or claims subsequent to the date of the order to wind up a company to creditors whose debts or claims do not carry interest. IN THE MATTER OF NEW FLEMING SPINNING AND WEAVING COMPANY

54. ——— Liability of directors for funds of company applied in transactions—Ultra vires—Dealing in shares of other companies—The plaintiff company was formed in 1864. By its memorandum of association its object was declared to be commission agency and general trading in cotton and also in goods and commodities suited for the market in the interior of India. The memorandum contained the following words—If found desirable the company may effect purchases of cotton and produce in Bombay and ship to England and carry on such local trade as may seem profitable. The company went into liquidation in 1867. In April 1890 the present suit was filed against the defendant who had been one of the directors of the company and it was alleged that after the formation of the company the defendant and his co-directors had carried on speculative dealings in shares of other companies and had used the funds of the company for this purpose which was not warranted by the memorandum of association. The plaintiffs alleged that their dealings which were duly set forth in their plaint had resulted in a heavy loss to the company and they now sought to recover from the defendant the sum of Rs 37,700 13 5. There had been originally five directors of the company but at the date of suit two of them were dead and two had become insolvent. The plaint was filed in April 1890. Held (affirming the decision of PANDORA J.) (1) that the memorandum of association did not justify the directors of the company in dealing in shares of other companies and that the transactions complained of by the plaintiffs were ultra vires (2) that the directors were liable to replace the moneys of the company which they had misapplied by applying them to a purpose which was ultra vires. *KATHIAWARI TRADING Co. v. the memorandum of association (1) of securing valuable property in the new port and town of C and its immediate vicinity and of improving the property so acquired by building upon letting or selling it as may be deemed most advisable and of undertaking the construction of public works calculated to facilitate trade and also of constructing railways roads docks wharves and jetties upon the lands so to be acquired and for all other purposes that may be essential or conducive to the attainment of or connected with the above objects. Soon after the establishment of the company the directors were induced to take a share in and become liable for the cost of a mill for husking rice which it was intended to establish by a separate company and a considerable sum was advanced out of the funds of the company for the building of the mill and for machinery etc. The undertaking failed and the directors to avoid losing the advances of the company resolved to take over the mill and carry it on as the property of the company. They accordingly purchased a large quantity of rice which was husked at the mill and consigned to several firms in England. P. M. & Co. were appointed agents of the company in Calcutta for the purpose of shipping the rice under letters from the directors guaranteeing that the company would pay at maturity any re-drafts which might be drawn on P. M. & Co. as their agents in respect of the shipments. Bills of exchange were drawn by P. M. & Co. on the firms to which the respective consignments were made and these bills were sold in the ordinary course of business in Calcutta. P. M. & Co. realizing the proceeds for the benefit of the company. These bills were honoured by the respective consignees. The rice was sold in Fowland at a considerable loss and re-drafts for the deficiency were drawn on P. U. & Co. or on the company. The company went into liquidation during these transactions. Some of these re-drafts had been accepted by the company and others merely registered by the liquidators as claims against the company. Claims were now made on the company by the drawers or endorsees of these re-drafts but the liquidators declined to pay them stating that the proceedings in connection with the consignments of rice were not authorized by the memorandum and articles of association of the company and that therefore the company was not liable for any losses in respect of such consignments. Held that trading in rice was a transaction ultra vires of the company the directors therefore could not bind the company and the consignees could not recover in respect of the shipments. The company was not liable on the re-drafts it had no power to issue bills of exchange or to accept the re-drafts and therefore the holders of those which had been in fact accepted were in no better position than the holders of those which had not been accepted. of security 330 namely three hundred and thirty five 'shares' of The New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company Limited. If your said money cannot be paid with interest by the expiration of the time and you should sustain any kind of loss in (respect of) that I am duty to pay the same. As to that, I am not to raise any obstacle or objection. In case it should be necessary I am to fill up and duly deliver to you an indemnity bond on stamped paper through your vakel (solicitor). This writing is duly agreed to and approved by me and my heirs and representatives. Bombay the 11th of November in the English year 1878. On the evening of the day on which the loan was made—viz 11th November 1878—but without the knowledge of N A it was agreed between N A and P that the time for the repayment of the loan should be extended to six months. In December 1878 N A became insolvent and on 25th December 1878 a petition was presented to the High Court to wind up the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company. On the 30th December P through his solicitors wrote a letter to the company stating that N A had obtained a loan from him of Rs 100,000 on behalf of the company and enquiring whether the fact appeared in the company's books. To this letter he received a reply signed by "K N" director stating that the loan appeared in the books in P's name. On the 17th January 1879 an order was made for the winding up of the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company and on the 4th February 1879 P gave notice on the official liquidators of the company of his claim against the company for the money advanced by him on the 11th November 1878. In March 1869 he filed a suit against K N to enforce his guarantee but was unsuccessful. The Court held that by extending the period of the loan to six months the agreement of the 11th November 1878 had been materially varied without K N's knowledge and that K N was consequently discharged. On the 21st April 1879 P filed his affidavit in support of his claim against the company. The company resisted the claim. Held (1) that the directors had power under the memorandum and articles of association to authorize A K to borrow money on behalf of the company and that they had done so and with that object had entrusted him with the unallotted shares. (2) That when P advanced the loan to N A he was led to believe that N A was obtaining it on behalf of the firm mill companies of which he was secretary treasurer and agent but that P was not aware and was not informed for which of the said companies the loan was obtained, and that the money was in fact advanced to A as to an agent acting on behalf of an undisclosed principal. (3) That P when he discovered that the money was obtained for the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company was entitled to claim against the company and to rank as a creditor of the company for the amount advanced to N A with interest from the date of the loan—viz 11th November 1878—to the date of the presentation of the petition to wind up the company. 57 ——— Liability of company for loan to secretary treasurer and agent—Principal and agent—Undisclosed principal—Election—Contract Act (IX of 1872) ss 230 233 234—By the memorandum and articles of association of the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company A K was appointed secretary treasurer and agent of the company with power to raise or borrow from time to time in the name or otherwise on behalf of the company such sums of money as he might think expedient by bonds debentures or promissory notes or in such other manner as he might deem best and for the purpose of securing the repayment of any money so borrowed to make any arrangement which he might deem expedient by conveying or assigning away property of the company to trustees or otherwise. N K was also secretary treasurer and agent of three other mill companies in Bombay. On the 31st October 1878 the directors passed the following resolution—That the unallotted shares be filled up in the name of Narayana Keshaji Esq. secretary treasurer and agent who is empowered to mortgage them at a fair rate of interest to enable him to obtain funds for the use of the company. On the 11th November 1878 P advanced a sum of Rs 100,000 upon the terms contained in a Gujarati writing of that date and signed by N K. In this document N K acknowledged the receipt of the money for which 330 shares in the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company were duly handed over as security and he agreed to repay it within three months. The last clause in the agreement stated that it was duly agreed to and approved by him (N K) and his heirs and representatives. As an additional security P when advancing the loan obtained from K N (father of N K) a guarantee in the following terms—To Thakur Gurusundass Jivandas. An advanced sum of money to the company amounting in 1879 to over Rs 80,000. No previous sanction was given to any of these advances. On the 4th October 1879 an extraordinary general meeting of shareholders was held at which a resolution was passed sanctioning a mortgage to K of the whole of the company's property except a certain garden to secure the payment of a sum not exceeding Rs 1,00,000 for advances already made and to be made with interest at 7 per cent. This resolution was confirmed on the 16th of October and the mortgage was executed on the 2nd of December 1879. Subsequently the company was ordered to be wound up and K advanced a claim for Rs 1,20,787. Held that there is a distinction between loans which a company is empowered to raise under its borrowing powers and debts which in meeting its current liabilities and in the actual carrying on of its affairs the company or its agents on its behalf have contracted and that the advances made by K did not amount to a borrowing within the meaning of the articles of association. In re Ceylon Cinnamon Company L R 7 Eq 85 and Waterlow v Sharp L R 8 Eq 501 followed. 66 ——— Winding up under supervision of Court—Order for dissolution of company—Voluntary winding up—Official liquidator—Companies Act VI of 1882—As a general rule a winding up of a company under supervision of the Court should be terminated in the same way as a purely voluntary winding up—See ss. 186 and 187 of the Companies Act VI of 1882. Although under s. 186 of the Companies Act VI of 1882, the Court has power to make an order dissolving a company in the course of winding up subject to its supervision such cases must be exceptional and can only occur when the Court has deemed it proper to carry on the winding up under supervision in a manner such as clearly to approximate to a winding up by the Court. The ordinary rule is the other way and it is reasonable that it should be so as generally a winding up under supervision is not conducted under so intimate a control of the Court as to put the Court in a position to judge of the correctness of the liquidators' action and the completeness of the winding up. So far as the Court does not interfere a winding up under supervision remains essentially a voluntary winding up but the Court in a winding up under supervision has full authority to interfere and to exercise to any extent the power which it might have exercised if an order had been made for winding up the company by the Court. The words official liquidator in s. 186 of the Companies Act VI of 1882 do not include the liquidators in a winding up under supervision. By a final balance order dated 5th June 1879 it was ordered by the Court of Chancery in England that the persons named in the schedule to the said order being contributories as past members of the said bank should within four days after the service of the said order pay the amount set opposite to their names with interest from the 15th March 1879. The defendant's name appeared in the said schedule and the present suit was brought to recover the sum therein appearing as due from him to the bank viz Rs 3000. The defendant denied that he had ever held shares in the plaintiff's bank or that he ever had notice of any of the proceedings in the winding up. At the trial it appeared that all the various orders and notices to shareholders made in the winding up of the bank prior to the balance order of the 5th June 1879 had been sent by post to the defendant addressed to him at No 36 Panasavadi and were all returned undelivered. It was proved that he had never resided there but that his brother had a place of business there and that the defendant used occasionally to go there for the purpose of attending to his brother's business. It further appeared that the residence of the defendant as given in the register of shareholders was Loharchall and not 36 Panasavadi. Held that the notices orders etc. prior to the order of 5th June 1879 were not so served as to make the defendant subject to that final order that the obligation to obey the command of the Court of Chancery contained therein had not arisen as against the defendant and that consequently the present suit must fail. It is a leading principle of English law always understood except when expressly excluded that a person proceeded against in a Court must have due notice of the proceeding failing such notice he is entitled to protection if the judgment or order obtained in his absence is made the ground of a suit in any Court governed by English principles. The Court of Chancery in England had not in this case so called the defendant before it as to enable it in his absence to pronounce a definitive order against him or to bind him in the Court of his domicile although he was included in the order of the Court of Chancery. The fact that the defendant frequently attended his brother's place of business at No 36 Panasavadi was not sufficient to make that place his last known address. If there had been evidence that he had used No 36 Panasavadi as an address for receiving letters that might probably have been sufficient. It would then have been known as his address at least as an address. The address or residence of a member of a company entered in the register of shareholders although sufficiently ascertained for the purpose of communication from the company is not therefore ascertained for a service of legal proceedings. For the purpose of such service care must be taken to find out the last known place of abode of the alleged contributory and to effect the substituted service there. LOVDON BOMBAY AND MEDITERRANEAN BANK & GOTIND RAMCHANDRA

Companies Act, 1862 and the winding up order was made by the Court of Chancery in England on the 20th July 1866. By a subsequent order made on the winding up it was ordered by the said Court that service of notices etc. of the various proceedings might be effected on contributories being past members by posting the same either in England or in Bombay duly addressed to the last known address or place of abode of such contributories. The Court of Chancery on the 16th December 1878 made an order for a call of £10 per share upon the contributories and on the 5th June 1879 the final balance order was made by the Court. This suit was brought to recover the sum of Rs 754-7-0 alleged to be due by the defendant as a contributory in the District under the said balance order. The plaintiff was an assignee of the bank. The defendant who resided at Sumari in the Surat District denied that he was a shareholder in the bank and alleged that he had had no notice of the various proceedings in the winding up. At the hearing it was proved that one of the notices which had been posted in Bombay addressed to the defendant at Sumari in the Surat District was a notice of the intended application for a call of £10 per share dated the 27th August 1878 had been returned undelivered to the Dead Letter Office having been carelessly addressed. No further steps were taken to serve it on the defendant. Held that the defendant not having received any summons or notice to attend the hearing of the application for a call of £10 per share was not liable to the call made in his absence. Courts in British India when called upon to give effect to a foreign judgment should insist upon a strict proof of the validity and service of summonses and other processes alleged to have emanated from a foreign Court and made a foundation for a liability to be enforced here by Courts that have no cognizance of the case on its merits. *Rousillon v. ginal letter of the address which it bore but the press copy was contained in the press-copy letter book of the company and was proved to be in the handwriting of a deceased secretary of the company whose duty it was to despatch letters after they had been copied in the letter book. The objector denied having received the letter or any notice of allotment. Held that the Court should not draw the inference that the original letter was properly addressed or posted that the press-copy letter was inadmissible in evidence and that there was no proof of the communication of any notice of allotment. The evidence adduced by the official liquidator to show that the defendant was a member of the company and so liable as a contributory consisted of the register of members a letter written by the objector a reply thereto written by a managing director of the company and the oral testimony of the director himself. The objector adduced no evidence at all. Held that the official liquidator might if he had chosen to do so have put the register in evidence and waited before giving any further evidence until the objector had given some to displace the prima facie evidence afforded by the register or to impugn the character of the register but his case must be looked at as a whole and having taken the hue which he did he must take the consequences of his other evidence contradicting or impugning the prima facie evidence of the register and notwithstanding that the objector gave no evidence the register was not conclusive. PAN DAS CHAKRABARTI v. 81. ——— Transfer of assets to new company—Companies Act (X of 1866) ss 149 151 and 155—Rights of creditors of transferring company—Dissentient shareholders—Sanction of Court—By special resolutions passed on the 3rd July 1878 and confirmed on 31st July 1878 the shareholders of the Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company (Limited) resolved that the company should be wound up voluntarily and that all the assets of the said company should be transferred by the liquidators to a new company then intended shortly to be formed and registered in Bombay called the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company Limited and that the liquidators should receive as the consideration for such transfer certain fully paid up shares in the new company for distribution among the shareholders of the old company. The said transfer was to be made subject to a covenant on the part of the new company to perform all the accretments and to discharge all the debts and liabilities of the old company. The new company was duly formed and registered on the same day (31st July 1878) and the specified number of shares was delivered to the liquidators of the old company for distribution among the shareholders of the old company. Two of the said shareholders J and H the holders of 60 and 20 shares respectively dissented from the special resolutions in the manner provided by s. 175 of the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866) and required the liquidators to purchase their interests. The matter was thereupon referred to arbitration. In the case of H an award was made and filed but further proceedings were stayed by order of Court. In the case of J no award was made and he brought a suit which was still pending against both the old and new companies and the liquidators to recover Rs 75,000 the alleged value of his shares. In pursuance of the resolution the liquidators of the old company handed over the assets to the new company but no formal grant or assignment in writing of the said assets was executed. They remained in its possession until the 17th January 1879 on which day the said new company was ordered to be wound up by the Court. The petitioners were appointed official liquidators and as such were in possession of the assets at the date of the petition. No property whatever remained in the hands of the old company except the shares remaining to be distributed among the dissentient shareholders. The new company had discharged debts of the old company to the amount of six lakhs of rupees and there remained debts of over three lakhs due by the old company. Until after the new company had become insolvent no creditor of the old company had expressed his dissent from the above special resolution or had refused to accept the new company as his debtor. On 1st March 1879 the voluntary winding up of the old company was directed to be continued as a winding up under the supervision of the Court. The official liquidators of the new company now presented a petition praying that the above special resolutions might be sanctioned by the Court. Certain unsatisfied creditors of the old company opposed the petition insisting that the sanction should be refused except upon the condition that they should be paid in full out of the property of the old company. The two dissentient shareholders J and H also objected to the sanction being given unless provisions were made for the satisfaction of their claims as soon as they should be ascertained. Held that under the special circumstances of the case the sanction of the Court should be given to the resolutions but subject to the value of the interest of the two dissentient shareholders being paid or adequately secured. Such order to be without prejudice to any question between the creditors of the old company and the dissenting shareholders. IN RE FLEMING SPINNING AND WEAVING COMPANY [I. L. R. 3 Bom. 289]

The liquidators however replied on the 23rd August by offering to purchase J's shares which offer being refused they and J entered into an agreement on the 12th October in pursuance of the provisions in that behalf contained in the Indian Companies Act X of 1866, for the reference of the dispute as to the price to be paid to the said J for his shares in the F S & W Co (Ltd) to two arbitrators and an umpire to be named by them. The agreement fixed a short date for the making of the award. 94. — Claims on assets—Precedence of judgment-debt due to Secretary of State—Stay of execution of judgment-debt—A judgment debt due to the Crown in Bombay entitled to the same precedence in execution as a like judgment-debt in England, if there be no special legislative provision affecting that right in the particular case. Under similar circumstances a judgment-debt due to the Secretary of State in Council for India is in Bombay entitled to the like precedence and the reason is that such debt is vested in the Crown and when realized falls into the State treasury. The nature of the cause of action in respect of which the judgment was recovered does not affect the right of the Crown or of the Secretary of State in Council for India to priority. As the Crown is not either expressly or by implication bound by the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866) and as an order made under that Act for the winding-up of a company does not work any alteration of property such an order does not enable the Court to stay the execution of a judgment-debt due to the Crown or to the Secretary of State in Council for India. It is a principle recognized by the laws of many countries that claims of the Crown or State are entitled to precedence—e.g. the Hindu, Persian and French codes; the laws of Spain, the United States of America, Scotland and England. *SECRETARY OF STATE IN COUNCIL FOR INDIA v. On the facts it was not a case of illegal seizure and detention of cattle but rather one of theft as all the elements of that offence were present and the accused should have been charged with and tried for that offence. Held further that the sentence of imprisonment in default of payment of the compensation was not warranted by law. Compensation may be levied as a fine and the ordinary mode of levying fines is laid down in s. 356 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. the Criminal Procedure Code applies only to cases in which the private individual injured or aggrieved does not come forward to make a formal complaint. That action is intended for the purpose of enabling a Magistrate to take care that justice may be vindicated notwithstanding that the persons individually aggrieved are unwilling or unable to prosecute and even in such cases the jurisdiction to arrest requires for its foundation knowledge of the fact of an offence having been committed and that knowledge must be either personal or derived from testimony legally given. The report of the police or any statement which falls short of an actual formal complaint or of a statement made on oath is not sufficient in law to give a Magistrate jurisdiction to issue his war-

The Deputy Magistrate summoned the man; but on the day appointed for hearing neither the complainant nor the woman appeared and the complaint was dismissed. Subsequently the woman petitioned representing her inability to attend on the day appointed owing to causes beyond her control. The Deputy Magistrate without enquiring into the allegations, held that his dismissal of the complaint operated like an acquittal. Held that the Deputy Magistrate though competent to dismiss the complaint ought to have exercised some discretion more particularly under the circumstances detailed by the prosecutor and that the section (Act X of 1872 s 205) contemplated such an exercise of discretion TAZOOVISSA v WASSIL

The complainant's solicitor finding that no sanction had been obtained as required by s. 190 of the Criminal Procedure Code for proceeding with the charge under a 192 of the Penal Code applied to the Magistrate for leave to withdraw the complaint which the Magistrate granted adding to his order the words "accused is discharged." The complainant having subsequently obtained the requisite sanction filed a fresh complaint on the same charges. It was objected on behalf of the accused that the accused had been acquitted under s. 249 of the Criminal Procedure Code and that further proceedings were now barred under s. 403. The Magistrate allowed this objection and stopped the proceedings. On application to the High Court—Held that the order of the Magistrate should be reversed and the complaint investigated. The order stopping the proceedings would be legal only if the accused had been acquitted by a Court of competent jurisdiction which was not the case as the Magistrate could not take cognizance of the charge under s. 192 of the Penal Code without a sanction having been previously obtained. As to the charge under s. 500 of the Penal Code the proper procedure in respect of it was that prescribed for warrant cases. The only legal order that could be made in such a case was an order of discharge under s. 253 of the Criminal Procedure Code and not of acquittal and it was an order of discharge that was actually made. ILRATAN SEN v JOGESH CHANDRA BHUTTA CHARJEE. 125.—Revival of complaint after discharge—Power of Presidency Magistrate—Criminal Procedure Code 1882 ss 403 436-439—P instituted a complaint of extortion in the Calcutta District Court against O and B under s. 381 of the Penal Code. The Magistrate suggested that the matter should be settled by arbitration and the accused was discharged on 24th July 1897. The arbitration fell through and on B's application the complaint against O and B was revived on 6th May 1899. On the matter coming before the High Court on revision it was found that the offence being not compoundable the reference of the parties to arbitration was irregular. Held that the order of 24th July discharging the accused was improper; that the provisions of ss 436 and 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code were not applicable to Presidency Magistrates who therefore can revive a complaint even after discharge; that the High Court has ample powers under the Charter Act if not under the Code to revive an order reviving a complaint after discharge; and that in this particular case the Presidency Magistrate had exercised a proper discretion in reviving the complaint. OPOORNA KUMAR SETT v PROBOD KUMAR DAS. Criminal Procedure Code directed the Deputy Magistrate to send up the parties and proceed regularly with the case. Held that ss 248 and 249 had no bearing on the case and that the mere fact of the accused having been sent up by the police did not prevent the offence which was legally compoundable from being compromised and that consequently the order of the Deputy Magistrate was perfectly correct and legal. QUEEN EMRESS v. 11 — Hurt—Voluntarily causing hurt—Penal Code s 323—Criminal Procedure Code 1872 s 188—The offence of voluntarily causing hurt under s 323 of the Penal Code is one which may lawfully be compounded and the withdrawal from the prosecution in such a case is therefore permissible under s 188 of the Criminal Procedure Code. 1861 REG v. 12 — Penalties—Penal Code s 214—Causing grievous hurt—Whenever the words "voluntarily intentionally fraudulently dishonestly or otherwise" whose definition involves a particular intention enter along with a specified act into the description of an offence the offence not being one irrespective of the intention is not one which the exception to s 214 of the Penal Code by itself allows to be compounded. The offence to admit of compromise must be one in this sense irrespective of the intention and it must be one for which a civil action may be brought at the option of the person injured instead of criminal proceedings. The Magistrate refused to allow the offence to be compounded on the ground that the damage was done to a village Mahār and therefore could not be treated as damage affecting only a private person as Mahārs had duties to perform in connection with the village. Held that the offence was compoundable under s 345 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1852) as the damage was caused to a private person and not to the public. The fact that the complainant was a village Mahār would not make his personal property the property of the public or even of the Mahār community generally. IN RE MOTIRAM [I. L. R. 22 Bom. 869]

10 — Requisites for composition of offence valid in law—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898) s 340—Grav of proof—Wrongful restraint and confinement of coolies employed on tea garden—Where an accused person alleges that an offence with which he is charged has been compounded so as to take away the jurisdiction of the Criminal Courts to try it the onus is on him to show that there was a composition valid in law. M a European British subject charged with the compoundable offences of wrongful restraint and wrongful confinement of coolies employed on a tea garden of which he was the manager pleaded that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to try the cases as they had been compounded by the complainants. The alleged compromise consisted of a Bengali paper signed by the coolies stating that they made rāzānā (compromise) of the case of their own accord, and a paper in English signed by M these papers being given to the District Superintendent of Police who had investigated the complaints and who stated that he asked the coolies as to the contents of the Bengali paper and they said that they had signed it voluntarily and stated its purport and that one of them said in the presence of the others that it was a rāzānā. G one of the coolies also wrote on the paper the words in Urdu. I will not carry on the case. The Bengali paper was written by the Darogah of the police station in presence of M. The paper signed by M was as follows— I hereby agree with these Ganyam people that there shall be no legal proceedings of any kind taken against them with the exception of those who have not completed their agreements. Those whose agreements have not been completed proceedings will be taken against them on 22nd May if they have not returned to the garden before then. Neither of the papers were explained to G so as to make them intelligible to him for though the Bengali paper was read out G did not understand that language. G was one of the coolies who had completed his agreement with M. Held per PRINSEP J—The compounding of an offence signifies that the person against whom the offence has been committed has received some gratification to act as an inducement for his desisting to abstain from a prosecution here there was no forbearance on the part of M to proceed against G who had served out the term of his engagement and therefore there was no consideration for the agreement to compound. Having regard moreover to the ignorance and inferior intelligence of G it was of vital importance for M to show what led to the alleged agreement and how it was that the Darogah was instrumental to it which he had not done. Per TRIVELLYAN J—Compounding an offence supposes an arrangement by which the parties have settled their differences and in the more usual acceptance of the term implies that the prosecutor has received some consideration or gratification for dropping the prosecution. Although the provisions of the Contract Act may not apply the proof of the arrangement must be similar to that which the Court

requires for the proof of any agreement which is in issue and unless it appears that the parties were free from influence of every kind and were fully aware of their respective rights it would be impossible to give effect to a so called arrangement or composition. Having regard to the fact that the writer of the Bengali agreement had not been called and that the contracting parties were on the one side ignorant coolies strangers to the land and to the language in which the document was written and on the other a European of some education assisted by his Bengali clerk and having also the assistance of the police it was not proved that G knew what he was about and was fairly contracting. Held therefore by the Court that there was under the circumstances no compounding of the offences with which M was charged valid in law such as to deprive the Magistrate of jurisdiction to try them. MURRAY : QUEEN EMPRESS I L R, 21 Cal, 103

When a petition is put in for withdrawal of or for withdrawal from the case is put in the Court ought to make an order either granting or refusing the application and then and there and should not put it off by ordering it to be filed with the record to be considered at the close of the trial. *MAHOMED ISMAIL v. 2 Hindu family—

Deed altering proper course of succession according to Hindu law —Where a dispute in a Hindu family as to legitimacy and the right to succession resulted in a family arrangement as to the mode in which the estate was to be held by the sons.—
Held that such a document ought not to be construed narrowly by a strict interpretation of the literal meaning of the words but that the object and general spirit are the best keys to the interpretation.
Where a family arrangement if construed strictly would have given a taluk in the event of the death of a younger son to each of the lawful widows as should have male issue.—Held that as such a disposition would contravene the ordinary rules of devolution of Hindu property and be contrary to the usages of Hindus and as there was no mention of any change of intention as to the proprietary right a construction which would postpone male issue to their mothers was inadmissible

16 ———— Requests for composition of offence valid in law—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882) s 345—Onus of proof—Wrongful restraint and confinement of coolies employed on tea garden—Where an accused person alleges that an offence with which he is charged has been compounded so as to take away the jurisdiction of the Criminal Courts to try it the onus is on him to show that there was a composition valid in law M, a European British subject charged with the compoundable offences of wrongful restraint and wrongful confinement of coolies employed on a tea garden of which he was the manager pleaded that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to try the cases as they had been compounded by the complainants. The alleged compromise consisted of a Bengali paper signed by the coolies stating that they made rainama (compromise) of the case of their own accord and a paper in English signed by M these papers being given to the District Superintendent of Police who had investigated the complaints and who stated that he asked the coolies as to the contents of the Bengali paper and they said that they had signed it voluntarily and stated its purport and that one of them said in the presence of the others that it was a rainama. G one of the coolies also wrote on the paper the words in Urdu: I will not carry on the case. The Bengali paper was written by the Darogah of the police station in presence of M. The paper signed by M was as follows:—I hereby agree with these Ganjam people that there shall be no legal proceedings of any kind taken against them with the exception of those who have not completed their agreements. Those whose agreements have not been completed proceedings will be taken against them on 22nd May if they have not returned to the garden before then. Neither of the papers were explained to G so as to make them intelligible to him for though the Bengali paper was read out G did not understand that language. G was one of the coolies who had completed his agreement with M. Held per PRINCEP J—The compounding of an offence signifies that the person against whom the offence has been committed has received some gratification to act as an inducement for his desisting to abstain from a prosecution; here there was no forbearance on the part of M to proceed against G who had served out the term of his engagement and therefore there was no consideration for the agreement to compound. Having regard moreover to the ignorance and inferior intelligence of G it was of vital importance for M to show what led to the alleged agreement and how it was that the Darogah was instrumental in it which he had not done. Per TRIVELIAN J—Compounding an offence supposes an arrangement by which the parties have settled their differences and in the more usual acceptance of the term implies that the prosecutor has received some consideration or gratification for dropping the prosecution. Although the provisions of the Contract Act may not apply the proof of the arrangement must be similar to that which the Court

requires for the proof of any agreement which is in issue and unless it appears that the parties were free from influence of every kind and were fully aware of their respective rights it would be impossible to give effect to a so called arrangement or composition. Having regard to the fact that the writer of the Bengali agreement had not been called and that the contracts of parties were on the one side ignorant coolies strangers to the land and to the language in which the document was written and on the other a European of some education, assisted by his Bengali clerk and having also the assistance of the police it was not proved that G knew what he was about and was fairly contracting. Held therefore by the Court that there was under the circumstances no compounding of the offences with which M was charged valid in law such as to deprive the Magistrate of jurisdiction to try them. McCREAY v QUEEN EMPRESS I L R, 21 Cal, 103

17 ———— Compounding after commitment—Effect of on commitment—A commitment once made of an accused person by a Magistrate to the Sessions cannot be annulled by a prosecutor to file a compromise QUEEN v SALTU 2 W R, Cr, 67

18 ———— Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1899), s 345—Filing of petition of compromise in Court—Effect of subsequent withdrawal of petition—Where a complainant and a female had presented a petition of compromise in respect of a compoundable offence and the Magistrate had examined her and satisfied himself as to her understanding the same Held that he was wrong in ordering the petition to be put up with the record but should have immediately dealt with the matter and to give effect to it. Held also that the complainant could not by a subsequent withdrawal of the above petition of compromise insist upon the case proceeding. KURUM BAWA v BECHU BAWA [3 C W N 323]

19 ———— *Offence lawfully compoundable—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860) s 342—Petition for withdrawal and compromise—Object and effect of—Duty of Magistrate on receipt of such petition—When a charge is framed against an accused person only of an offence which can be lawfully compounded and a petition of compromise is put in or for leave to compound the offence is put in the Court should allow the parties to compound the offence and acquit the accused. When a petition is put in for withdrawal from the case or for compromise of or for withdrawal from the case is put in the Court ought to make an order either granting or refusing the application then and there and should not put it off by ordering it to be filed with the record to be considered at the trial. MANOHED ISMAIL v PAIZUDDIN [3 C W N 549]*

5 ———— Mahomedan law—Estate limited to take effect in favour of a person after another's death—It is not consistent with Mahomedan law to limit an estate to take effect after the determination on the death of the owner of a prior estate by way of what is known to English law as a vested remainder so as to create an interest which can pass to a third person before the determination of the prior estate The parties to a solamah or compromise were on the one side the widow of a Mahomedan she being in possession of villages in Oudh which had belonged to him and of which the summary settlement of 1858 had been made with her and on the other side two brothers alleged to be his sons. By the compromise which was made in the course of proceedings at regular settlement it was agreed that the widow should during her lifetime continue to hold possession and remain proprietor without power of alienation and that after her death the two sons should possess each one-half of the property Held that on the true construction of the compromise the title of the sons to succeed was contingent upon their surviving the widow and that no interest passed to their heirs on their deaths

6 ———— Penalty for non fulfilment of conditions Suit to enforce—A suit for a habalat having been brought in the Peshawar Court a deed of compromise was filed in the suit in which it was stipulated that a certain sum would be paid by the defendants to the zamindar as rent of four fannas of land including homestead after mutation of names that Rs 158 on account of outstanding balance and charges connected with the rents would be paid to the plaintiffs within a month and that in default the defendants would have no right to the lands specified. The defendants having failed to fulfil the conditions the plaintiffs executed their decree and realised from them the balance above mentioned and having sued them for the rent obtained a decree The plaintiffs then brought this suit to recover possession in virtue of a zamani right of the land on the ground of non fulfilment of the conditions of the compromise. The first Court gave them a decree which the lower Appellate Court reversed, holding that the deed merely imposed a penalty with a view to punctual payment. Held that as what the defendants had to do was of a perpetually recurring nature and no action which the Court might take would be effectual in preserving the plaintiff from being sued by the zamindar the intention was that the terms should be strictly enforced on failure to perform the conditions and that the defendant should be obliged to surrender the lands

7 ———— Construction and enforceability of compromise of suit between members of grantee's family—Removal of manager—Appointment of receiver—Early in the eighteenth century two villages were granted by the zamindars of Dinagang and Guntamanakannur to the last of the Naik rulers of Madras for the maintenance of the rank and dignity of his family which was now represented by the plaintiffs and defendants Nos 1 to 23 The property was long managed by a representative for the time being of the senior line In 1811 one of the junior members instituted a suit for partition which terminated in a decree dividing the corpus of the property to be indivisible and the annual produce to be divisible in certain shares Subsequently in 1817 a compromise was entered into by which the parties agreed to vary the distribution of the shares but they agreed that the management of the estate indivisible and indivisible should continue to be vested in the eldest line subject to certain supervision on the part of the other members The compromise was long acted upon by the family but in 1832 the representative of the senior line died leaving only his widow and infant son The widow as guardian of the elder son then entered on the management and being a stranger to the family a stranger The plaintiffs representing a junior line now sued for the removal of these persons from management and the appointment of another manager alleging both that they had no right to the management and that they had been guilty of mismanagement. All the members of the family were made parties to the suit. Held that the compromise was binding on the parties and that under the compromise the plaintiffs had no right to joint management; and that the widow of the last manager should be removed from the management and that until one of her sons came of age the estate should be managed by a receiver appointed from among the members of the family. THIRUMALAI NAIK v. 8 — Assignment of villages part of an impartible estate—Maintenance of a member of a junior branch of a joint Hindu family—Agreement—Arbitration award decree and settlement thereon—Revenue by whom payable—A talukdar owning an impartible inheritance was the head of a joint Hindu family of which the defendant his first cousin was a member in a junior branch. In 1861 they came to terms as to the latter's claims upon the ancestral estate. A decree in that year founded upon the award of arbitrators between them declared the talukdar's ownership and the assignment by him of eleven villages to the junior member free of liability in respect of the revenue. These terms were entered in an administration paper or wajib ul arz of the taluk before the settlement of 1867 in the record whereof they were also entered. And they were referred to in a sanad granted to the talukdar. When the settlement of 1899 was in progress the profits of the eleven villages and the Government demand thereon had greatly increased and for this jamma the talukdar was liable without any proportionate increase of profit from the eleven villages. In 1881 the talukdar sued for a declaration that the defendant's right in the villages consisted only of a certain amount of allowance for maintenance derivable from them. He also claimed that the defendant should repay to him a sum which he had paid for local cesses. The defence was that the defendant's right in the eleven villages had been conclusively settled in the above proceedings. Held that by the true construction of the decree of 1864 which was the foundation of the title of either party the profits of the eleven villages belonged to the defendant and that the revenue was to be paid as between the two by the plaintiff with the enhancements without benefit to him from the increase in the yield of the land. The principle of the judgments below was that the question to be decided was of the kind where the head of a family and a junior member dispute the amount of maintenance that should be paid. But the property assigned in this case was not of the variable character which belonged to an ordinary allowance for maintenance and there was nothing to show that the Courts had authority to disturb settled arrangements on the ground of their being originally based on claims to maintenance. The taluk was vested in the plaintiff subject to the right of the defendant to hold the eleven villages and as between them the former was liable for the jamma and the latter for the local rates and cesses. LOKVATH v. BHASSABATH

9 — Enforcing compromise—Compromise of family disputes—Hindu law—Agreement as to succession to property—Suit to enforce the agreement—Mistake in law—In 1859 two brothers A and B filed a petition in the Collectorate by which it was agreed that the family property should be divided in certain shares. B who had only lately attained his age of majority acted on his own account and as guardian of his minor brothers. In a suit by A to carry out the terms of the petition B contended that undue advantage had been taken of his youth and inexperience that the agreement was invalid and that there was no consideration. It appeared that at the time of the agreement there was a bona fide dispute as to the rights of the parties and no evidence of fraud was adduced. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree. 10 — Non performance of ceremonies of worship—Allegation of breach of—Two brothers executed and filed a deed of compromise dividing between them the family property and a decree was passed in terms thereof. Under this decree the elder was to hold possession of certain lands the rents of which were to go to perform the worship of the family idol. The elder was kept out of possession of these lands by the younger and he performed the worship at his own expense and the younger took out execution objecting that his brother had not performed his trust as family shroth so that he had been compelled to perform the ceremonies at his own expense but his objection was overruled. Held on appeal by the younger that the non performance of any ceremonies by the elder brother gave him no cause of complaint in less he could show that such failure was not caused by any default on his own part. PADHAJIAN MUSTAFI v. The compromise was sanctioned by the Commissioner but whether it would be for benefit of minor to set aside compromise—The plaintiff a minor was a daughter and one of the heirs of A, entitled to 1/4th of his estate. The value of A's estate was uncertain and depended on whether or not A had been a partner in business with M and whether or not a sum of Rs 30 000 had been paid by M to A in satisfaction of all claims which A had against M in respect of the estate of K a deceased brother of A and former partner in the same business M having on A's death possessed himself of all the estates of A the plaintiff brought a suit against M in which a decree was made ordering an account to be taken of the estate of A which had come into the hands of M. Pending such account M died leaving a will by which he appointed the son of A and another his executors and the suit was revived against them. In their application for probate they stated that the value of M's estate so far as they had been able to ascertain and were aware was Rs 41 000. Shortly after probate was granted negotiations were entered into between the executors and the advisors of the plaintiff for a compromise and a petition was with the concurrence of the executors presented by the plaintiff to the Court asking for its sanction to the terms agreed upon by the parties which were that the plaintiff should receive Rs 20 000 in full of all demands and Rs 5 000 for her costs of suit. This petition took as the value of M's estate the amount stated by the executors in their application for probate and stated that the value of A's estate in case the above mentioned payment by M was proved would be Rs 30 000 and in case it was not proved then a moiety of the estate of M and that considering the difficulties the plaintiff had to meet in proving her case and with a view to put an end to further trouble litigation and expense the above terms had been agreed to on her behalf. These terms of compromise were sanctioned by the Court on the 11th September 1876. Shortly afterwards further property was discovered belonging to the estate of M. The plaintiff brought a suit against the executors to set aside the compromise alleging that the terms had been accepted by her on the faith of the representation made by the executors in their application for probate and charging them with wilful and fraudulent concealment. There was evidence to show that some of the property subsequently discovered was such that the defendants as executors ought to have known, even if they did not of its existence at the time of the compromise. Held that even though the executors had no such knowledge and there was no actual fraud yet there was such culpable ignorance and neglect of duty on their part as to amount to fraud and carry with it the consequences of knowledge; and as the compromise had in consequence been entered into by the parties and sanctioned by the Court under a misapprehension of material facts the plaintiff was entitled to have the compromise set aside and the parties restored to their rights in the former suit at the time it was effected. Per PORTER J—In cases where the sanction of the Court is required as where there is an infant concerned each party is bound to see that the materials on which the sanction of the Court is asked for are unimpeachable. Per PORTER J—Quære—Whether in this suit if the questions were found to arise it would be necessary for the Court to consider whether it would be for the benefit of the minor that the compromise should be set aside. Per GARTH C J—Semble—Even if it only appeared that the compromise had been entered into and sanctioned under an entire mistake of the parties and of the Court with regard to the subject matter of the agreement it ought to be set aside under s 20 of the Contract Act. Per GARTH C J—In a subsequent suit by a minor to set aside a compromise made with the sanction of the Court obtained by fraud or mistake it is not the province of the Court to enquire whether it would or would not be for the benefit of the minor that the compromise should be set aside though it might be otherwise on an application for review to the Court which granted the sanction. SOLIMON v ABDOL AZEER

22 — Party subsequently found legally entitled to nothing—Compromise made on behalf of minors—When parties enter into a compromise or family arrangement in order to avoid litigation the question as to whether one of the parties is entitled to certain property or not such compromise will not be set aside although it should eventually turn out that the party taking something under the compromise was in reality legally entitled to nothing. But where such a compromise was alleged to have been entered into by a mother on behalf of two minor sons on the one hand and an adult member of the family on the other agreeing to give the latter more than had been awarded by a judicial decision it was held that the compromise was not binding on the minors. DIARMAN YAMAT v GURRAY SUBBIAVAS

25 ——— Effect of setting aside compromise on right of appeal—In a suit brought on behalf of an infant daughter by her mother as guardian a decision was given partly for and partly against the defendant who thereupon filed an appeal which he afterwards withdrew in accordance with the terms of a compromise purporting to have been made with the mother and daughter. Subsequently at the suit of the daughter the compromise was set aside as fraudulent and collusionary, and a review of the original decision, in so far as it was adverse to the plaintiff's interest was allowed. The defendant then applied that his appeal might be revived but his application was rejected by the High Court on the ground that he had deprived himself of his opportunity of appeal by his own fraudulent conduct. Held by the Judicial Committee that the effect of setting aside the compromise was to remit both parties to their original rights and that if the plaintiff was to be allowed to be heard against so much of the original judgment as was unfavourable to her the defendant must similarly be heard against so much of the same judgment as was unfavourable to him. KHARONCHAND V. 26 ——— Suit to set aside compromise—Set off—Equitable defence—D was the manager of a religious endowment called the Chunchrad Sansthan. On his death in 1852 disputes arose between C and G regarding the management of the sansthan each claiming to be the heir and successor of D. After a long litigation they entered into a compromise in 1861 by which a portion of the sansthan property consisting of certain manvillas, lands and varahasans were assigned to G and C was left in charge of the rest of the sansthan property together with all the rights, privileges and manpans enjoyed by the hereditary trustee of the endowment. In 1886 by a decree made in a suit called the Charity suit C was removed from his office and the plaintiffs were appointed trustees in his place. In 1889 the plaintiffs filed the present suit to set aside the compromise of 1861 and recover back the sansthan property assigned to G under that compromise. G pleaded by way of set off or equitable defence that if the plaintiff were at liberty to set aside the compromise they were bound to restore to him in lieu of the trust property assigned to him under the compromise certain private property belonging to his father which he had given up. Held that G could not claim a set off or an equitable defence to recover from the plaintiffs in question the private property there being nothing in the compromise to show that there was any exchange of private property for trust property. DRUMMOND GILBERT DIX v. COMPROMISE—continued2 REMEDY ON NON PERFORMANCE OF COMPROMISE

27 ——— Effect of non performance in accordance with compromise—Suit to enforce compromise—A compromise entered into by a former suit no fraud being alleged is not annulled by non performance by one of the parties. The other party may sue for its enforcement but they cannot revert to their original right. RAM SAHAI SINGH v. DEECHOODHARE SINGH 1 W R. 266

28 ——— Suit to enforce compromise—Revival of original right—A compromise must be treated as a new and positive contract. A breach of its stipulations may be ground of a suit for its enforcement but not for a revival of the original right. BISHNU COOMAR ROY v. HURISH CHUNDER DEB 2 W R. 209

29 ——— Profits of land—Where a compromise was made that any deficiency in the plaintiff's sayer land was to be made up of assented land and if that were insufficient from the defendant's sayer land but the compromise was not acted on and the plaintiff was unable to make up the deficiency—Held that he was entitled to recover profits from the defendants in proportion to the deficiency in his sayer land. MDATUL GOLLAH v. DOORCHONDZ BAI 2 Agra 204

30 ——— Revival of original right—Suit to enforce conditions broken—Held in accordance with a ruling of the Calcutta High Court and in contravention of a ruling of the late Sudder Court in 1850 that when a compromise has been effected and a party allowed to withdraw his suit under the provisions of s. 98 Act VIII of 1819 if the compromise has not been acted upon the plaintiff is restored to his original right of action. On the contrary if acted on either in whole or in part the plaintiff cannot be restored to his original right of action but may bring a suit for the performance of the conditions comprised in it. Held also where a compromise is filed in Court and a decree passed in accordance therewith such decree must be first set aside before a second suit can be brought on the original cause of action. AMERZ BEGUM v. MOON BEGUM Agra F B 1

31 ——— Compromise as after decree—Denial of compromise in execution of decree—Where a compromise is set up and disavowed by one of the allowed parties thereto the other party cannot by an application in the execution department relying on the compromise arrest the execution of the decree. Whatever rights may exist under the compromise must be established by a new suit. JENDOO v. HINDRUT 3 N W. 81

32 ——— Compromise pending appeal—Where a salsamah was based on the condition that the defendant should at once withdraw his special appeal but instead of doing so he went on with the appeal and caused notice to be served on the plaintiff and the plaintiff actually appeared and the special appeal would have come on for hearing but for the accidental absence of the defendant's pleader on the day of hearing—Held that statements apparently favourable to the plaintiff's case the pleaders for both parties signed and presented to the Court a petition that if upon a particular bond in the witness possession it should be stated that the money was received through the defendant the Court should decree the suit otherwise the suit should be dismissed. Held that this arrangement was not an adjustment or compromise of the suit within the meaning of s 375 of the Civil Procedure Code so as to determine the jurisdiction of the Court and necessitate its passing a decree according to the arrangement. MUHAMMAD ZAHUR v CHEDA LAL.

46 — Assignment of interest pending suit—Civil Procedure Code s 375— The cases of assignment creation or devolution of any interest pending a suit contemplated by a 3/2 of the Civil Procedure Code are those in which the person to whom such interest has come is arrayed on the same side in the suit as the person from whom it has passed. Held therefore that a compromise in a suit for land between the plaintiff and one of the defendants whereby the latter consented to a decree being given to the former for half the land was not a case of assignment of an interest in such land within the meaning of that section. RADHA PRASAD SINGH v RAJENDRA KISHORE SINGH.

47 — Civil Procedure Code 1882 s 375—Agreement to compromise suit—Subsequent disagreement—Application for decree in terms of agreement—After the hearing of a suit had begun the plaintiffs and defendants came to an agreement by which they settled all the matters in dispute between them in the suit. The agreement was in writing and dealt in one clause with the dispute the subject matter of the suit and in a second clause with another dispute of long standing between the parties with which the suit had nothing to do. The plaintiffs subsequently objecting to consent to a decree being taken in terms of the first clause of the agreement the defendants took out a rule nisi calling on the plaintiffs to show cause why the agreement should not be recorded in Court and why the Court should not pass a decree in accordance therewith under the provisions of a 375 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The rule was argued on affidavits on either side the plaintiffs objecting that the above section did not apply to such a case as this and that in any case the matter could not be decided on affidavits but evidence must be gone into. Held that s 375 gave the Court the power to deal with such a case as this in the manner required and that this was a proper case in which to exercise such a power and that in the circumstances of this case no definite procedure having been enjoined by the Code the matter might properly be decided on affidavits. 1st made absolute accordingly. 1st RUTTONSEY LALJI v POORBAI.

writing before the hearing the parties to a suit entered into a compromise by which the plaintiff agreed for consideration to withdraw the suit. When the case came on for hearing plaintiff refused to fulfil his promise. The defendant not having produced the agreement the Munsif held that it must be enforced and dismissed the suit. On appeal the District Judge held that the agreement could not be treated as a compromise as the plaintiff did not consent and remanded the suit. Held that the agreement could be enforced. RUTTONSEY LALJI v POORBAI. 1st R 7 Bom 304 approved. KARUPPAH v RAMASAMI. [I L R. 8 Mad, 482]

49 — Withdrawal from compromise—Agreement of parties—Decree on compromise—Appeal—After suit filed by the plaintiff against several defendants one of whom was an infant a petition of compromise entered into between the adult parties was filed in Court. The petition stated the terms of arrangement and also that an application would be made by the guardian of the minor praying the Court to allow the compromise to be carried out on his behalf. Ten days after the petition of compromise was filed the first defendant and the plaintiff presented petitions to the Court withdrawing from the compromise and praying that the suit should proceed. The second defendant presented a petition praying that the compromise should be recorded and a decree passed according to its terms. The Court made a decree in accordance with the prayer of the second defendant's petition. The first defendant appealed. Held that an appeal lay and that the lower Court was wrong in enforcing the compromise at the instance of the second defendant. Semle—That s 375 of the Code of Civil Procedure merely covers cases in which all parties consent to have the terms entered into carried out and judgment entered up. RUTTONSEY LALJI v POORBAI. 1st R 7 Bom 304 questioned. HARA SUNDARI DEBI v KUNAR DUKHINE SUIA MALIA. [I L R. 11 Cal 250]

50 — Agreement adjusting a suit—Subsequent disagreement of the parties—Application by one of the parties to record the agreement—Under s 375 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882) an application to record an agreement adjusting a suit may be made although at the time of such application one of the parties either denies that it was made or wishes to withdraw from it or otherwise objects to its enforcement. The Court being already seized of the suit which is adjusted the application to record the alleged agreement is a proceeding in that suit and the Court in connection with that proceeding necessarily has all the powers and has thrown upon it all the duties which appertain in any suit upon its file other questions arising in any suit upon its file are not questions arising in that suit. RUTTONSEY LALJI v POORBAI. 1st R 7 Bom, 304 approved and followed. HARA SUNDARI DEBI v DUKH NERUR MALIA. 1st R 11 Cal 250 dissented from. GOUDAS BULBAS MANUFACTURING COY v FAYT & SCOTT. 3. COMPROMISE OF SUITS UNDER CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—continued

51. — Suit to enforce compromise—Decree of compromise—Admissibility of decree of—Registration—The plaintiff brought a suit to recover a certain jote. The suit was compromised the defendant agreeing to give up a moiety not only of the jote in dispute but also of another jote of which he had dispossessed the plaintiff. It was further agreed that the plaintiff would be entitled to bring a fresh suit for the recovery of the latter jote if the defendant failed to carry out the agreement. The plaintiff was obliged to bring a fresh suit and both the lower Courts held that he was entitled to a decree. On appeal by the defendant—Held that the lower Courts were right in decreeing the suit there being a thing in a 370 of the Civil Procedure Code to prevent the compromise from being enforced. Held further that it was not necessary that the deed of compromise should be registered in order to make it admissible in evidence. CHITTA NARAYAN DAS v. DIOOTA CHANDARI DEBTA 2 C W N 683

52. — Compromise in terms of a plaint—A decree should not be passed in terms of a compromise where the latter does not give to the plaintiff any of the reliefs claimed in the suit and deals with matters not forming the subject matter of the suit. Upon such a compromise being presented the Court should inform the parties that its terms cannot be embodied in a decree and if it appears that the compromise was arrived at conditionally upon its being incorporated in the decree the suit should be proceeded with. MUTHU VIJAYA RAOH NATHA UDAYANA TEVAR v. THANDAVARAYA TAMIRAI I L R. 22 Mad. 214

53. — Dispute as to factum of compromise—Order dismissing suit in consequence of alleged compromise—Application to High Court by revision petition under s. 622—Right of appeal against order dismissing suit—Acceptance of civil revision petition as appeal on Court fees being paid—During the pendency of an appeal in a District Court a petition was filed by the pleaders of the plaintiffs and defendants in the suit praying on behalf of their clients that the case might be struck off the file on the ground that the matter in dispute had been compromised. Two of the plaintiffs then filed a counterpetition denying that a compromise had been arrived at and praying that the appeal might be heard on its merits. The District Judge after some intermediate orders struck off the appeal as prayed in the petition. The two plaintiffs preferred a civil revision petition to the High Court whereupon it was objected that the petition could not be entertained as an appeal lay against the order of the District Judge inasmuch as it was not a decree in pursuance of a compromise under s. 370 of the Code of Civil Procedure but an order passed on a dispute as to whether a compromise had in fact been arrived at. The petition had been presented within the time allowed for appeal. Held that inasmuch as the petition impugned the alleged compromise as not being a lawful compromise an appeal lay against the order of the District Judge; but that the petition might be treated as an appeal on the Court fees being paid. Mahomet Walisaid v. Hakeem I L R. 20 Cal. 707 at p. 729 Where a party to a suit impugns an alleged agreement or compromise by which he would be bound the Court must satisfy itself by evidence that the agreement or compromise is a lawful one and that its terms have been consented to by the parties to the suit before it can proceed under s. 375 of the Code of Civil Procedure to record it and pass a decree in accordance therewith. SRI DHARAN SOMAYAJI PAD v. PERAMATHAN SOMAYAJI PAD I L R. 23 Mad. 101

54. — Power of Court to refuse to record compromise too favourable to one party—The terms of s. 375 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1852) are imperative and a Court cannot refuse to record a lawful agreement of compromise and to pass a decree in accordance therewith merely because in its view it is too favourable to one of the parties. MOTIRAM BAL KRISHNA BALKANE v. ZESU [I L R. 22 Bom. 238]

55. — Compromise made notwithstanding dissent of one Counsel—Counsel's power to compromise—Consent of one set aside—Where counsel after consulting with his attorney and client as to the advisability of compromising a case and after receiving instructions from the attorney to do the best he could for his client compromised the case notwithstanding the express prohibition of the client and the client before the consent decree was drawn up notified his dissent to the other side—Held that the consent decree must be set aside. CARRISOV v. RODRIGUES I L R. 13 Calc. 115

56. — Compromise extending beyond the terms of the suit—Compromise modification of terms of—The only compromise which a Court can in any case be bound under s. 370 of the Code of Civil Procedure to enforce is one which adjusts wholly or in part the suit matters gone beyond the suit cannot if included in a compromise be so enforced. A Court refusing to grant a decree on a compromise going beyond the suit cannot however grant a decree modifying the terms of the proposed compromise but must leave the parties to proceed with the suit as they may be advised. FAJALEH ALI MIAN v. KAMARUDDIN BHUTTA [I L R. 13 Calc. 170]

57. — Compromise extending beyond scope of suit—Appeal—Form of decree on compromise—In a suit for the partition of a zamindari the parties effected a compromise in writing which provided inter alia for certain reliefs which could only have been given by the Court in a suit based upon a different cause of action. The compromise was presented in Court and a decree was passed embodying the whole of its terms. Held (1) that an appeal lay against the decree (2) that the decree should have been passed in the terms of such of the provisions agreed upon as related to relief which the Court could have given in the suit (3) that the decree should be modified accordingly VENKATAPPA NAYANIN v THIMMA NAYANIN

61 — *Agreement adjusting suit—Power of Court to determine fact of agreement having been made—Reference of suit to arbitration—Award—The plaintiff sued the defendant to recover certain property of which she alleged he had taken possession Subsequently the "matters in difference in the said suit were by a signed submission paper referred to arbitration An award was made ordering the defendant to pay to the plaintiff Rs 6000 and cancelling a certain account. It also decided the claim of the plaintiff to two ornaments which was a matter not included in the submission paper but had been verbally referred to the arbitrator in the course of the arbitration The plaintiff now applied that the submission and award should be filed as an agreement adjusting the suit under s 375 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1899) or in the alternative that the award should be filed under s 55 The defendant disputed the agreement and denied the validity of the award Held that under s 375 of the Civil Procedure Code the Court had jurisdiction to determine whether as a fact the alleged agreement adjusting the suit has been made and if it was satisfied that it has been made to record it Whether that fact should be tried on affidavit or by oral evidence is entirely for the discretion of the Court The Court accordingly holding that the suit had been adjusted by the submission and award ordered the same to be filed and the adjustment recorded Held further that the Court could make no order as to that portion of the award which dealt with matter not relating to the subject matter of the suit. A separate application should be made with regard to the ornaments. SANIBAL v PREMJI PHAGJI

63. — Execution of decrees—Compromise in execution of decrees—Estoppel—Civil Procedure Code s. 207A 64— Although a Court executing a decree is bound by the terms thereof and cannot add to or vary or go behind them the effect of s. 37, read with s. 647 of the Civil Procedure Code is that when a decree is put into execution the proceedings taken therefor amount to a separate litigation in which the parties can enter into a compromise much in the same manner as in a regular suit. Such a compromise does not extinguish the decree and the Court executing the decree is bound subject to the conditions indicated by s. 375 to give effect to the compromise. In execution proceedings the word suit in s. 375 must with reference to s. 647 be read as meaning execution of decree. By reason of the words in s. 375 lawful agreement or compromise the provisions of s. 207A become applicable to such a case and so long as the requirements of that section are satisfied, the compromise becomes a part of the decree itself and—at least as between the decree holder and the judgment-debtor—can be given effect to in execution of the decree. When such a compromise has been duly made and sanctioned by the Court executing the decree neither the decree-holder nor the judgment-debtor can resile from the position assumed by them in the matter of the compromise. Even if such a compromise has been irregularly sanctioned by the Court executing the decree—the irregularity not amounting to want of jurisdiction—the compromise must take effect until the order sanctioning it is set aside and until that happens the parties are bound by it in all proceedings relating to the execution of the decree and where they have acted upon it they are estopped therefrom after from questioning its validity. Sita Ram v. 5. ———— Inconsistent statements—Credibility of—The words actually used by an accused, who is said to have confessed ought to be ascertained. The Court should not accept merely the conclusions at which the witnesses deposing to a confession themselves arrived from the answers which the accused gave to questions put by them. Where an accused makes two distinct statements—the one amounting to a confession of guilt the other repudiating guilt—if the one statement is taken against the accused the other also must be taken for what it is worth in his favour. The Court ought to weigh well the relative credibility of the two statements before it accepts the one in preference to the other QUEEN v SOODHAN 10 L R 332

7 ——— Corroboration of evidence of accomplice by confession of another prisoner.—The confession of one of the prisoners cannot be used to corroborate the evidence of an accomplice against the others. REG v MALAYA BIN KATANA 11 Bom. 196

8 ——— Confessions of co accused against others in their absence.—Confessions of two of several accused persons made in the absence of the others are of no weight as against the latter. Such confessions as well as the statements of approvers, are always regarded as tainted because from the position occupied by the persons making them, they are not entitled to the same weight as the evidence of ordinary witnesses. QUEEN v MITRES v BEBIN BISWAS I L R. 10 Cal. 370

9 ——— Admissibility in evidence.—Criminal Procedure Code s 149-150—To make the confession of a prisoner not uttered in the presence of a Magistrate admissible in evidence the fact disclosed must be one which of its own force independently of the confession would be admissible in evidence. QUEEN v CHODA ATCHEVAH [3 Mad. 318]

2 CONFESSIONS UNDER THREAT OR PRESSURE

10 ——— Statement admitting crime but pleading compulsion by others.—An admission by A and B that the crime charged against them was committed by C and D and that whatever else they had in it was under compulsion is not a confession on which any person ought to be convicted. QUEEN v KISTO MUNDOL 7 W R Cr 8

11 ——— Proof of circumstances under which confession was made.—Warning by Magistrate. Acertainment of—Allegations of irregularity—Duty of Sessions Court—Although the averment on the record of a Magistrate by whom a prisoner is tried that the accused, before making a confession was warned that it was optional with him to answer the questions put to him or not is not conclusive as to the fact of such a warning having been given it is not conclusive to show that such a confession has not been made under the influence of fear engendered by previous maltreatment or as not otherwise valueless. Allegations made in a regular and proper manner before a Sessions Court on appeal that a confession made by the accused before the Magistrate who tried the case was made under such circumstances as to preclude its admissibility in or diminish its value as evidence should receive due attention and be enquired into. This statement which was made in Malayalam was recorded in English in the form of a narrative and was signed by the Magistrate only. The same Magistrate shortly afterwards purporting to act under the Code of Criminal Procedure before any evidence was recorded against F examined him as to this statement which was read over and translated to him. In answer to questions F admitted that he had made it voluntarily. This examination was recorded according to the provisions of s 364 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. After other evidence was recorded F retracted his statement. He was committed to the Sessions tried and convicted mainly on his own recorded statement and examination. The Deputy Magistrate was examined as a witness and stated that the statement recorded by him was made by F and was correctly recorded, and was made voluntarily. Held that the record of the statement made by F to the Deputy Magistrate was not admissible in evidence against F. PER PARKER J—The provisions of a 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure are imperative and s. 533 will not render a confession admissible where no attempt has been made to conform to the provisions of the former section. The action of the Magistrate in examining F as to his confessional statement before there was any legal evidence on the record against him was illegal and therefore the record of such examination could not be used in evidence against F. The term Preliminary enquiry in the final clause of a 346 means such enquiries as are the subject of Chaps XIV (of enquiries and trials) and XV (of enquiry into cases triable by the Court of Session or the High Court) and therefore that clause does not apply to confessions recorded under s 122 which refers to an enquiry not during a trial or one held with a view to committing but an enquiry for the purpose of forwarding confessions when recorded to the Magistrate by whom the case of the accused person is enquired into or tried. recording of a confession or statement—Magistrate recording a confession and holding subsequent judicial inquiry—Whether a confession made by a prisoner to a Magistrate be regarded as a statement under s 164 or under s 364 of the Code of Criminal Procedure the terms of the law require that the record should be signed not only by the person who makes the confession or is under examination but also by the Magistrate and that in addition thereto, there should be a certificate in the terms prescribed. confession was recorded by the Deputy Magistrate in English though made in Hindi which the Deputy Magistrate perfectly well understood and could write. It purported to have been recorded under the provisions of s 161 and was in reply to one question which was set out. The record bore the signatures of the accused and of the Deputy Magistrate as well as the certificate as required by the section. It occupied about five pages of foolscap. At the trial the Sessions Judge excluded this confession on the ground that not having been recorded in the language in which it was made and there being no reason why it should not have been so recorded the document was inadmissible in evidence. He however called the Deputy Magistrate as a witness and admitted in evidence his statement as to what the accused told him. This evidence which occupied only a few lines was to the effect that the accused told him he had committed the murder and on this evidence alone the accused was convicted. On appeal held that the provisions of s 161 read with s 364 are imperative as to the language in which a confession is to be recorded and that s 393 does not contemplate or provide for any non-compliance with the law in this respect and that therefore as it was not impracticable to record the confession in Hindi the Sessions Judge was right in refusing to admit the document in evidence. Held further that the Sessions Judge erred in admitting the oral evidence of the Deputy Magistrate as to what the accused told him as seeing that he was acting under the provisions of s 161 of the Criminal Procedure Code the confession was a matter which was required by law to be reduced to the form of a document and therefore under s 91 of the Evidence Act no evidence could be given in proof of such matter except the document where as in this case it was in existence and forthcoming. Held also that as the defects in the record could not be cured under s 533 of the Criminal Procedure Code and no secondary evidence could be given no proof of the confession could be given and the accused must be acquitted. JAI NARAYAN JAI v QUEEN EMPEROR investigation by the police. An English man ran down of the nature referred to in s. 364 was made by the Deputy Magistrate. A further confession was recorded by the Magistrate under the provisions of s. 364, while the case was being heard before him. Both confessions were recorded in narrative form and the questions and answers were not taken down. At the trial before the Sessions Judge both confessions were put in evidence and no evidence was given under the provisions of s. 533 of the Criminal Procedure Code that the accused duly made the statements recorded. The accused was convicted mainly on the strength of the confessions. Held upon the authority of the decision in Tin Maya v The Queen, I L R 8 Cal 618 note that as the accused was not prejudiced by the questions and answers not being recorded it was unnecessary for the judge to take evidence under s. 533 and that the conviction based on the confessions must be upheld. PEROON MANTO v QUEEN EMRESS, I L R, 14 Cal. 539

63. — Statement recorded by a Magistrate—Criminal Procedure Code 1882 s. 164—Evidence—Judicial proceedings—Giving false evidence—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860) ss 191 and 192—A statement taken by a third class Magistrate under s. 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1892) such Magistrate not having authority to carry on the preliminary inquiry in the case is not evidence in a stage of a judicial proceeding within the meaning of ss. 121 and 193 of the Penal Code such that when the statement is contradicted afterwards before the Magistrate having jurisdiction and exercising it in the preliminary inquiry it will form a sufficient basis for an alternative charge of giving false evidence in a judicial proceeding. QUEEN EMRESS v BHARMA, I L R. 11 Bom 702

The accused spoke and understood English and the Magistrate questioned him in English and was answered sometimes in English and sometimes in Bengali. Whenever the answers were given in English they were so taken down when in Bengali they were written down in English and read over to the accused in that language who accepted the English as being the meaning of that which he had stated and signed the document in the presence of the Magistrate who affixed the usual certificate thereto. In taking this confession the Magistrate purported to have acted under ss 164 and 364 of the Criminal Procedure Code. At the trial subsequently to the admission of the confession in evidence under s. 80 of the Evidence Act the Magistrate was called as a witness and deposed to the above facts with reference to the language in which the confession was taken and the mode in which it was recorded. Held on a reference to a Full Bench as to whether the confession was inadmissible in evidence by reason of some of the answers having been given in Bengali but recorded in English that the provisions of s. 164 of the Code had no application to statements taken in the course of a police investigation made in the town of Calcutta and that consequently ss 364 and 533 had no application. Held nevertheless that the document was properly admitted upon the evidence of the Magistrate under the provisions of s. 26 of the Evidence Act. Semle—The provisions of s. 164 as read with s. 364 would not be complied with where answers made by an accused to a Magistrate in one language are taken down in another unless it could be shown that it was impracticable to have taken down the answers in the language in which they were given and further that there would be grave doubt if such a defect could be cured by s. 533. QUEEN EMRESS v AIL MADHON MITTAL, I L R. 15 Cal 595

65. — Examination of accused persons at preliminary investigation—Criminal Procedure Code 1882 ss 159 164 364 533—Evidence Act (I of 1872) ss 21 24 26 26—A Deputy Magistrate was deposed by the District Magistrate under s. 159 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (X of 1892) to hold an investigation into a case of murder and recorded the statements of the accused persons. Held that the statements were rightly rejected as inadmissible. The rule laid down in s. 21 of the Evidence Act must be taken subject to the special provisions relating to confessions and statements of accused persons enacted in ss 24 25 and 26 of the Evidence Act and ss 164 and 364 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Were it otherwise confessions and statements of accused persons not recorded in accordance with the requirements of ss 164 and 364 of the Code might be proved as admissions by the accused and the whole me provisions elaborately laid down in those two sections practically reduced to a nullity. Nor can s. 533 of the Code be construed to favour that view. Under that section when a confession or other statement of an accused person is duly made in accordance with the provisions of law but in the recording of it those provisions have not been fully complied with oral evidence is admissible to prove that the confession or other statement was duly made. The defect which the section is intended to cure is not one of substance but of form only. QUEEN EMRESS v FEROZ I L R. 9 Mad. 224 and Jai Narayan Rai v Queen Emress I L R 17 Cal 576 followed. The statements having been recorded by a Magistrate not being a police officer in the course of an investigation under Ch. XIV of the Code the provisions of s. 164 must be observed. The statements contemplated by that section should be recorded in the manner prescribed for recording evidence and confessions must be recorded in the manner provided by s. 364. SS 365

At the trial of the prisoner at the Criminal Sessions of the High Court this statement was tendered in evidence against him and admitted by the Judge who overruled an objection on behalf of the prisoner that under s 25 of the Evidence Act it was inadmissible. On a case certified by the Advocate General under cl 26 of the Letters Patent—Held that the confession was under s 25 of the Evidence Act not admissible in evidence. PER GARTH CJ—S 26 of the Evidence Act is not to be read as qualifying the plain meaning of s 25. In construing s 25 the term police officer is not to be read in a technical sense but in its more comprehensive and popular meaning. PER GARTH CJ (PONTIFF J doubting)—The Court which under that section is to decide upon the sufficiency of the evidence to support the conviction is in a case coming before the Court and under s 26 of the Letters Patent the Court of review not the Court below. In the course of the police investigation the accused was asked by the police where the property was. He replied that he had kept it and would show it. He said he had buried the property in the field. He then took the police to the spot where the property was concealed and with his own hands disinterred the earthen pot in which the property was kept. He made a second statement when pointing out the spot to the effect that he had buried the property there. It was contended that those statements were inadmissible having been made when the accused was in custody of the police. Held (1) that the above statements were clearly in the nature of a confession, as they suggested the inference that the prisoner committed the crime and even if not intended by the accused as a confession of guilt they were an admission of a criminalising circumstance and would form a very important part of the evidence against the accused, as showing that he had not come by the property honestly and were therefore properly within the rule of exclusion in regard to confessions made by a person in custody of the police. (2) That neither of the above statements was admissible in evidence under explanation 1 of s 8 of the Evidence Act I of 1872 as evidence of the conduct of the accused. s 8 so far as it admits a statement as included in the word "conduct," must be read in connection with ss 25 and 26 and cannot admit a statement as evidence which would be shut out by those sections. (3) That the accused's statement that he had buried the property in the field, was admissible in evidence under s 27 of the Evidence Act as it set the plot in motion and led to the discovery of the property. A statement is equally admissible under s 27 whether the statement is made in such detail as to enable the police to discover the property themselves or whether it be of such a nature as to require the assistance of the accused in discovering the exact spot where the property is concealed. QUEEN EMPRESS v NANA

In the absence of the policeman the accused made a communication to her friend with reference to the alleged offence. At the trial it was proposed to ask what the prisoner had said on the ground that she was not then in custody and that s 26 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) did not apply. Held that notwithstanding the temporary absence of the policeman the accused was still in custody and the question must be disallowed. QUEEN EMPERESS v LESTER I L R 20 Bom., 185

97 — Evidence Act 1872 s 30—Admissibility of confession of one against others—A prisoner who pleads guilty at the trial and is thereupon convicted and sentenced cannot be said to be jointly tried with the other prisoners committed on the same charge who pleaded not guilty. Where therefore one of eight prisoners before the committing Magistrate made a confession affecting himself and five others, and afterwards at the trial before the Assistant Sessions Judge pleaded guilty and was thereupon convicted and sentenced and the Judge then proceeded to take his evidence on solemn affirmation and recorded his confession as evidence in the case against the other prisoners—Held that the Judge was wrong in taking the confession into consideration against those prisoners who pleaded not guilty. The proper course for the Judge was either to have sentenced the prisoner who pleaded guilty and then put him aside or to have waited to see what the evidences would disclose. REG v KATU PATIL 11 Bom., 146

98 — Amendment of charges—Criminal Procedure Code 1872 ss 447-449—While A and B were being jointly tried before a Court of Session the first for murder and the second for abetment of murder a confession made by A that he himself had committed the murder at the instigation of B was put in as evidence against A. Subsequently the charge against A was altered to one of abetment of murder and the Sessions Judge under the authority of s. 30 of the Evidence Act used the confession against both and convicted them. The High Court held that the original and amended charges were so nearly related that the trial might without any unfairness be deemed to have been a trial on the amended charge from the commencement and that no objection having been taken by B who was represented by a vakil to the admissibility of A's confession against him when the charge against A was altered the Sessions Judge was justified in using the confession against B also. REG v GOVIND BABJI PAUL 11 Bom., 278

101 — Confession of Co-prisoner—Trial for substantive offence and for abetment—The confessions of persons tried jointly for the same offence may by s. 30 Act I of 1872 be considered as against other parties then on their trial with them but such confessions when used as evidence against others stand in need of corroboration and cannot be used as corroborating in any way the evidence of approvers against such other parties. S. 30 Act I of 1872 ought to be construed with great strictness and the confession of one person is not admissible in evidence against another although the two are jointly tried if one is tried for the abetment of the offence for which the other is on his trial. QUEEN v JAFFIN ALI

102 — Statements of accused persons as evidence against other co-accused.—Statements made by one set of prisoners criminalising another set of prisoners when each individual prisoner made a case for himself in which he was free from any criminal offence ought not to be taken into consideration under s. 30 of the Evidence Act against the prisoners of the second set when the two sets although tried together were tried upon totally different charges. QUEEN v BHUWARK LALL

The confession of M K and R was used as evidence against B and all the accused were convicted. 106 ———— Defects of confessions by co-prisoners—The confession of co-prisoners cannot under the Evidence Act I of 1872 s. 30 be treated as evidence of ordinary character not distinguished by any special infirmity or qualifications against the other prisoners as in addition to the infirmity inherent in an accomplice's testimony they are not given on oath and are not liable to be tested by cross examination. QUEEN v. 108 ———— Confession by co-prisoner implicating himself—Where more persons than one are being tried for the same offence and a confession made by one effecting himself and some of the others is proved the Evidence Act s. 30 does not provide that such confession is evidence but that it may be taken into consideration the intention of the Legislature being that when as against any person implicated by such confession there is evidence tending to his conviction the circumstance of such person being implicated by the confession of one of those who are being jointly tried with him shall be taken into consideration as bearing upon the truth or sufficiency of such evidence. QUEEN v. 109 ———— Confessions of fellow prisoners tried jointly for the same offence—When the accused was convicted solely on the confessions of his fellow prisoners who were tried jointly with him for the same offence—Held that the conviction was bad. Under s. 30 of the Indian Evidence Act I of 1872 such confessions could be taken into consideration against the accused but they were not evidence within the definition given in s. 3 of the Act and they could not therefore alone form the basis of a conviction. QUEEN v. 111 ———— Confession made by person charged jointly with another for separate offences arising out of one transaction—Admissibility of as against the other—In order to constitute an offence under s. 3/3 of the Penal Code it is not necessary that the intention or knowledge of likelihood as to the employment of the minor for purposes of prostitution should be with reference to employment either immediate or at some definite and not very remote future period but an offence under the section is complete as soon as a girl is purchased with the guilty intention or knowledge of likelihood that she will while still a minor under the age of 16 years be employed for that purpose although the point of time for such employment may be remote by reason of her physical incapacity for the purpose. If the father of two girls twins about a year old sold one of them to E, a prostitute for Rs 9 and within ten days of such sale also sold her the other for Rs 4. A was shown to have previously purchased another child whom she had brought up from her infancy and who was then living with her and leading the life of a prostitute. Both H and K made confessions as to the guilty knowledge and intention with which the sale of the two children was made. K's confession was made within two hours after her arrest and immediately thereafter she was committed to jail for seven days. On the seventh day, on being brought up for trial before the Deputy Magistrate she retracted her confession and assigned an innocent reason for her purchase of the girl. H and K were tried jointly H being charged with an offence under s. 372 viz selling the girls for the purpose of prostitution and K with an offence under s. 373 viz buying for the same purpose. Neither was charged with abetting the other. The two confessions were used as evidence. Held that having regard to the circumstances under which the confession of K was given and retracted it was open to suspicion and could not safely be acted upon and that the confession made by H was not legally admissible against her as they were not being tried jointly for the same offence. DEPUTY LEGAL REMEMBRANCE v. 112 ———— Confession of co-prisoner—Joint trial—Plea of guilty—A and B were charged with murder. A pleaded guilty but B was not convicted or sentenced till the conclusion of the trial of his fellow prisoner B. The Sessions Judge holding that both the accused were jointly tried for the same offence took into consideration against B the confessions made by A and convicted both of murder. Held that after A had pleaded guilty he could not be treated as being jointly tried with B. A's confessions were therefore not admissible.

113. *Statements of co-accused who pleaded guilty.—*Jo int trial.—Where two out of several persons on their trial in a Court of Session on a joint charge pleaded guilty and made certain statements to the Court it was held that such statements could not be taken into consideration as evidence against the other accused persons inasmuch as after pleading guilty the persons making those statements were no longer on their trial. QUEEN EMPRESS v. PIRBET [I. L. R. 17 All. 524]

114. *Corroborated in material particulars.—*Where the only evidence against two prisoners accused of murder directly implicating them in the commission of the crime consisted of confessional statements made by them before the committing Magistrate which were subsequently retracted and the statements in such confessions were corroborated in material particulars by other evidence on the record.—Held that the evidence was sufficient to support a conviction. QUEEN EMPRESS v. PARVATI [I. L. R. 19 Mad. 482]

115. *Confession of co-accused.—*Plea of guilty by one.—On the trial of more persons than one jointly for the same offence where one of them pleads guilty the person so pleading is no longer on his trial and cannot be treated as being jointly tried with the others. A confession by that person affecting himself and others cannot therefore be taken into consideration as against such others under s. 30 of the Evidence Act. QUEEN EMPRESS v. LAKSHMAYYA PANDARAY [I. 116. *Confession by one of several persons jointly tried for the same offence.—*Plea of guilty by person so confessing.—It is not to continue trial after plea of guilty.—The trial of an accused person does not necessarily end if he pleads guilty. Under s. 271 of the Code of Criminal Procedure where an accused pleads guilty the plea shall be recorded and the accused may be convicted thereon but evidence may be taken in some cases as if the plea had been one of not guilty and the case decided upon the whole of the evidence including the accused's plea. When such a procedure is adopted the trial does not terminate with the plea of guilty and therefore a confession by the person so pleading may be taken into consideration under s. 30 of the Indian Evidence Act 1872 as against any other person who is being jointly tried with him for the same offence. It must be dealt with by the Court in the same manner as any other evidence. The weight to be attached to such evidence and the question taken by itself it is sufficient in point of law to justify a conviction is a question for the Court. Un supported by other evidence it is not to be taken as evidence of the very weakest kind. It is simply a statement of a third person not sworn to by oath or affirmation. If such confession is corroborated by other evidence it is immaterial whether the case at the trial the confession is the other evidence or the other evidence.

It was not a confession nor did it amount to any admission by the prisoner that he was guilty in any degree of the offence charged; but it was simply an endeavour on his part to explain his own presence on the occasion in such a manner as to exculpate himself and any mention made by him in such a statement of other persons having been engaged in the riot was altogether irrelevant and not evidence against them. NOOR BUX KAZI v EMPRESS

Trial for dacoity and receiving stolen property.—A and B were committed for trial the former for dacoity under s. 39a of the Penal Code and the latter under s. 413 for receiving stolen property knowing it to be such. A made two confessions and in both he stated he had handed over to B some pieces of gold and silver stolen at the dacoity. When B was arrested a gold ring and a silver wristlet were found in his possession. At the trial A pleaded guilty and B claimed to be tried. A goldsmith deposed that he had made the ring and wristlet found with B out of pieces of gold and silver given to him for the purpose by B. On this evidence and on the confessions made by A the Sessions Judge convicted B. On appeal to the High Court.—Held that A and B not having been tried jointly for the same offence the confession of A was inadmissible as evidence against B. 1. — Confession at filing of plaint—Discretion of Judge to hear the case—An insolvent defendant appeared and confessed judgment at the suit of one of his creditors at the filing of the plaint. The Judge (Recorder of Moulinet) gave a decision for the plaintiff but declined to sign judgment pending a reference to the High Court under Act XXI of 1863 s. 22 on the following question: Is the plaintiff entitled to a decree as of the date on which the defendant appeared and confessed judgment? Held that the Judge has a discretion when parties have come to a mutual agreement or when the defendant has confessed judgment to decide the suit at once in accordance with such agreement or confession. He is not bound to do so till the time fixed for the regular hearing of the suit and he cannot exercise that discretion where there is any doubt as to the good faith or identity of the parties. BANK OF ENGLAND & CURRIE [3 B. CONFISCATION OF PROPERTY IN OUDH.

1. — Limitation—Release of Government rights—Settlement—Cause of action—House property in Lucknow of which the Government had assumed possession as confiscated under the proclamations issued by Lord Canning and Sir James Outram in March 1858 was released under an order passed on the 6th July 1863 whereby the Government abandoned the confiscation and left former owners to their rights. The property had previously to the confiscation, belonged to one M. A. Lands in Oudh confiscated under Lord Canning's proclamation were in October 1863 directed to be settled with the heirs of M. A. and his is as one of the heirs of M A against a defendant who was an heir of M A and who had obtained possession of the houses and lands under the orders passed for the release of the one and the settlement of the other on the defendant. The entire property had come into his possession in 1830 under a gift from M A and the plaintiff's son was barred by Limitation. Held (1st) in respect of the house property that if the defendant was in possession at the time when the proclamations were issued, the question of Limitation must be decided as if there never had been a confiscation and (second) in respect of the lands, the question of Limitation could arise since the suit was brought within twelve years from the date of the Government order for settlement, under which some part of the lands could have been acquired by order of the parties. JAMES KANE & JAMES BART L.L.R. & C. 123

2. — Lord Canning's proclamation 1838. Effect of—Reversion of country of India—The effect of Lord Canning's proclamation of the 15th March 1838 was to divest all the landed property from the proprietors in Ouddh and to transfer it to the British Government. Consequently all who are said to have claims title to such property must claim through the Government. Where a reversion is made to a former owner the new title will depend entirely on the terms of the reversion and if such reversion is made for life only no one can be maintained to re-assert an alleged mistake and preclude a sale at a subsequent time according to the terms of the sale. In which the property was held under the old Ouddh and pre-emptive confiscation. JAMES KANE & JAMES BART L.L.R. & C. 123

The British Government for flood purposes in India, its method with the family was such that the family as the elder branch of the family represented it in the district Court at Lucknow notwithstanding that it remained in an independent possession as an independent owner. Through the family for his independent portion of the jumma for the village. This relation between the family and the British Government up to the time of the annexation of the village to the British Government. While the Government was making a settlement with the landowners, and it was about to apply for a distinct settlement of his in his, but after his death was refused by the Government to do so, the Government refused to allow it to be made to the land. After the suppression of the rebellion in Ouddh and the Government had re-annexed the village but it was with its rights, a pre-emptive settlement of the village in its name, it was held with the family but before a sale was granted to him, Government's confiscation half his estate for confiscation of arms. The British Government suppressed the fact of the trust relation of the metal of A and contrived that it should be included in the half part of the estate. The Government had ordered that the metal of the Government as a reward for A to Ouddh. The Government was a suit against the Government and the grant for the restoration of the metal and for a settlement. The Chief Commissioner held that as the British was the registered owner of the metal of A included in his estate it had been properly forfeited. Such finding reversed on appeal on the ground that it was the acknowledged trustee of the British and that it was as equally owner was not affected as between her and the Government by the act of confiscation of half the British estate. JAMES KANE & JAMES BART L.L.R. & C. 123

4. — Confiscation and restoration of lands in Ouddh in 1838 and of immovables in Lucknow—*Gift—Flood—On a claim for a share in property consisting of (1) immovables in Lucknow and (2) reversionary land in a district of Ouddh, the defence was title by gift with power annul from the former owner a member of the family through which the plaintiff claimed. As to the immovables in Lucknow they had been included in the confiscation which having been the case of the town in 1838 was subsequently abandoned with out any intimation on the part of Government to make a reversion in favour of any person. The result in regard to the present question was the same as if no such event had occurred. The other property (2) came under the general confiscation of Ouddh lands in 1838, and also was restored the right in the joint settlement operations in which the final order relating to the land in question was to the effect that settlement should be made with the "heirs" of the previous owner. Held that the above did not preclude the defence of exclusive title by gift. The order was annulled on its true construction, only discretion, all those who might take under and through the previous owner (deceased) the time of settlement, those excluding any claimant save those who might claim adversely to such title. The Government made the settlement which followed the confiscation, made any arbitrary or wholly new re-distribution of estates, or proceed as if the exact view of previous title (whether they had been brought to an end) was to go for nothing. The enquiry in most cases was as to who would be the owner entitled had there been no confiscation. As to both classes of property, the gift was valid. JAMES KANE & JAMES BART L.L.R. & C. 123*

and lands as one of the heirs of M K against a defendant who was an heir of M A and who had obtained possession of the houses and lands under the orders passed for the release of the one and the settlement of the other the defendant pleaded that the entire property had come into her possession in 1856 under a gift from M A and that the plaintiff's suit was barred by limitation. Held (first) in respect of the house property that if the defendant was in possession at the time when the proclamations were issued the question of limitation must be decided as if there never had been a confiscation; and (second) in respect of the lands that no question of limitation could arise since the suit was brought within twelve years from the date of the Government order for settlement under which alone any title to the lands could have been acquired by either of the parties. JEHAN KADAR v. ASHAR BHAI I. L. R. 4 Calo, 727

2 ——— Lord Canning's proclamations 1858 Effect of—Re grant of confiscated lands—The effect of Lord Canning's proclamation of the 15th March 1858 was to divest all the landed property from the proprietors in Ouddh and to transfer it to and vest it in the British Government. Consequently all who since that date claim title to such property must claim through the Government. Where a re grant is made to a former owner the new title will depend entirely on the terms of the re grant; and if such re grant is made for life only no suit can be maintained to rectify an alleged mistake and for declaration of an absolute title according to the tenor of the sunnah by which the property was held under the old dynasty and prior to the confiscation. MILKA JEHAN SANIHA v. DEPUTY COMMISSIONER OF LUCKNOW L. R. 6 I. A. 63

3 ——— Property standing and registered in name of one party but admitted to belong to another—Registration for fiscal purposes—In Ouddh before its annexation to the British rule a Rajah was talukhdar of a large talukh. A younger branch of his family had a separate mehal in the possession of A wholly distinct from and independent of the talukh the Rajah possessed as representing the elder branch of the family. The Ouddh Government for fiscal purposes included A's mehal with the Rajah's talukh so that the Rajah as the elder branch of the family represented A's mehal at the Court at Lucknow notwithstanding that A remained in undisturbed possession as absolute owner paying through the Rajah for his mehal a proportion of the jumma fixed on the talukh. Thus relation between the Rajah and A subsisted up to the time of the annexation of Ouddh by the British Government. While the Government was making a settlement with the land owners and A was about to apply for a distinct settlement of his mehal he and after him his widow was induced by the Rajah not to do so the Rajah in letters fully recognising A's absolute right to the mehal. After the suppression of the rebellion in Ouddh and the Government had recognized the talukhdar's tenure with its rights a provisional settlement of the talukh including A's mehal was made with the Rajah but before a sansad was granted to him Government confiscated half his estates for concealment of arms. The Rajah expressed the fact of the trust relation of the mehal of A and contrived that it should be included in the half part of the estate the Government had confiscated which mehal the Government as a reward granted to Ouddh loyalists. A's widow brought a suit against the Government and the grantees for the restoration of the mehal and for a settlement. The Chief Commissioner held that as the Rajah was the registered owner of the mehal of A included in his talukh it had been properly forfeited. Such finding reversed on appeal on the ground that A was the acknowledged owner of the trust of the Rajah and that A's widow as rightful owner was not affected as between her and the Government by the act of confiscation of half the Rajah's talukh. *THUKRAM SOKRAI KOOBAR v. 4 ——— Confiscation and restoration of lands in Ouddh in 1858 and of immovables in Lucknow—Gift—Title—On a claim for a share in property consisting of (a) immovables in Lucknow and (b) revenue paying land in a district of Ouddh the defence was title by gift with possession from the former owner a member of the family through which the plaintiff claimed. As to the immovables in Lucknow they having been included in the confiscation which having followed the capture of the town in 1858 was subsequently abandoned without any intention on the part of Government to make a re grant in favour of any person the result in regard to the present question was the same as if no such event had occurred. The other property (b) came under the general confiscation of Ouddh lands in 1858 and also was restored through subsequent settlement operations in which the final order relating to the land in question was to the effect that settlement should be made with the heirs of the previous owner. Held that the above did not preclude the defence of exclusive title by gift the order last mentioned on its true construction only designating all those who might take under and through the previous owner (deceased at the time of settlement) without excluding any claimant save those who might claim adversely to such title. The Government did not in the settlement which followed the confiscation make any arbitrary or wholly new re distribution of estates or proceed as if the existence of previous titles (although they had been brought to an end) was to go for nothing. The enquiry in most cases was as to who would have been entitled had there been no confiscation. As to both classes of property, the gift was maintained. JEHAN KADAR v. ASHAR BHAI BROUM I. L. 22 ——— Moral consideration—Promise to pay at majority debt during infancy—Promise to pay barred debt—The general rule of law is that a consideration merely moral is not valuable consideration such as would support a promise But there are instances of enforceable promises which formerly were referred to the now exploded principle of previous moral obligation and which are still held to be binding although that principle has been rejected Amongst those instances is a promise after full age to pay a debt contracted during infancy and a promise in renewal of a debt barred by the law of limitation. The efficacy of such promises is now based upon the principle that where the consideration was originally beneficial to the party promising and he is protected from liability by some provision of the statute or common law meant for his advantage he may renounce the benefit of that law and if he promise to pay the debt he is bound by the law to perform that promise. Accordingly the adoptive mother and defendant executed a mosharrah patra in plaintiff's favour promising him in consideration of the above facts a monthly allowance for maintenance. CONSIDERATION—continued action would lie. Held that as defendant had admitted the grant of the pottab and contended that the whole of the lands had been made over to plaintiff's possession no question of consideration could arise. ROOP NARAIN SINGH v. CHATOORJI SINGH [12 W. R. 283]

27. Contract to grow indigo—Extinguishment of original debt which was the consideration—Where a rayat in consideration of an advance of money has stipulated to grow indigo for a certain number of years the contract is not void as being without consideration because during the period it had to run the debt due from the rayat is extinguished by the delivery of indigo leaves. The contract is one entire contract upon one entire consideration and a contract which was at its commencement based upon a valid consideration cannot become void for want of consideration by any change whatever in the situation of the parties. JEDDIS v. GORAL MUNDUL 17 W. R. 81

28. Appointment of agent—Remedy in case of revocation of authority—Suit for specific performance—The defendant by an agreement in the nature of a letter of attorney constituted the plaintiff and his descendants the hereditary agents of the defendant gave him authority to collect the rents of his share in an am village and promised to pay him an annual salary out of the rents. Held that as between the parties and during their lifetime the appointment was valid and binding, whether or not any valuable consideration passed, the mere acceptance of the office by the plaintiff being a sufficient consideration for the appointment. If the defendant had revoked the agency improperly the remedy lay under ordinary circumstances in a suit by the plaintiff for damages for breach of contract. Where however the plaintiff chose to sue for specific performance and demanded arrears of salary—Held that without a valuable consideration for the defendant's promise the agreement passed by him to the plaintiff would be nudum pactum and the plaintiff would not be entitled to recover except for work and services actually rendered. VISHNUPHAXA v. PANCHANDRA I. L. R. 5 Bom. 253

29. Promise to refrain from suing—Suit found to be barred—Where by reason of a promise, the promisee refrains from bringing a suit which but for the promise he might have brought there is good consideration for the promise but if at the time of the promise no remedy remained to the promisee by reason of limitation there is no valid consideration and the promise cannot be enforced at law. PETER v. VARDOT [23 W. R. 62]

30. Want of consideration—Decree Adjusted out of Court—Civil Procedure Code (XII of 1882) s. 255—Contract—The plaintiff held a decree against the defendant and in execution of it attached the defendant's property. A compromise was then made by which the defendant executed to the plaintiff the bond sued upon in satisfaction of the judgment debt. The compromise however was not certified to the Court.

CONSIDERATION—concluded

Held that the bond was with no consideration. The adjustment of the decree not having been certified to the Court was not binding on the plaintiff and, therefore, constituted no valid consideration. PANDU RANG RAMCHANDRA v. NARAYAN

31. — Uncertified ad-justment of decrees—Civil Procedure Code ss 234 (c) 258—Contract Act II of 1872 ss 2 10 23 29
—The consideration for a mortgage consisted partly of the amount of two decrees held by the mortgagee against the mortgagor. The mortgagee having sued to enforce the mortgage the mortgagor pleaded failure of consideration as a bar to the enforcement of the mortgage. This plea was based on the allegation that the mortgagee had not certified the adjustment of the decrees as provided by s 234 of the Civil Procedure Code and they were still in force under the terms of that section. Per DUNN J. that the failure of the mortgagee to certify the adjustment of the decrees did not constitute a failure of consideration because he did not covenant to certify such adjustment and it was not in fact necessary for him to do so because he could not seek execution of the decrees on the ground that though unsatisfied they were still in force under s 28 of the Civil Procedure Code without becoming liable to penalties and because if the mortgagor considered the entering up of the adjustment of the decrees to be imperative he had his remedy by application to the Court in the terms of s 205. Per MAHMOOD J. that the adjustment of a decree out of Court if never certified to the Court is under s 205 ineffectual only so far as the execution of the decree is concerned that there is nothing in the Contract Act to make such an adjustment invalid as the consideration for an agreement that an agreement founded on such consideration may be enforced without defeating the objects of s 258 and that consequently there was in respect of the amount of the decrees valid consideration for the mortgage. Gunamans Das v. Pran Kishore Das 5 B. L. R. 223. Meer Mahomed Kasem Jowharry v. Kheloo Bibee 20 W. R. 180. Gani Khan v. Koorjoo Behary Sen 3 C. L. B. 414. Daxlata v. Ganesh Shashiri I. L.
